

Flu, illness, fright cut Cooper attendance almost 50%

by JILL BETTNER

A locker slams and the sound, magnified several times by the silence in the nearly empty halls, resounds through Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove.

Normally jammed with students, laughing and jostling each other as they hurry to classes, the halls are virtually deserted, drained by a wave of flu and similar illnesses that have hit almost half the school's 750-student population.

One Cooper student, 14-year-old Dale Chany, died Monday of Reye's Syndrome, a rare childhood disease that doctors believe usually follows a flu or chicken pox virus.

An autopsy conducted at Evanston Hospital yesterday confirmed that the boy, who resided at 816 Brittany Dr., Arlington Heights, was apparently the latest victim of the puzzling disease that has killed at least six others in the Chicago area in the past two weeks.

ALTHOUGH THE absentee rate at Cooper has been steadily increasing over the past month, the extraordinary number of students out this week indicates that many parents are being especially cautious and keeping at home children who show even the slightest flu symptoms.

About 40 students are absent daily at this time of the year, according to Larry Weaver, principal. Yesterday, the absentee list numbered 331 and Weaver expects the rate to go even higher in the next few days.

"I'm sure if a parent was trying to decide if a child was ill enough to stay at home, when he heard about Dale's death, he had to make the decision," Weaver said. "We've been making announcements, too, that the kids shouldn't come if they feel at all sick. I predict even higher absenteeism the rest of the week, but by then, pretty well most of the kids will have had it and gotten over it."

Assistant Principal Bob White said several parents called the school yesterday expressing concern over the apparent flu epidemic and some were worried that Reye's Syndrome might be contagious. Some parents want to see the school closed, he said, and one even suggested that the building be fumigated.

ACCORDING TO U. S. Department of Health official, Dr. Robert Rubin of the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Georgia, Reye's Syndrome is "definitely not contagious."

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill yesterday said he is not considering closing Cooper or any of the other 16 schools in the district that are also reporting "higher than usual" absences.

"Our information is that there's nothing we can gain by closing the schools," Gill said. "We want parents to keep children home if they feel ill or have fevers, but we do that all the time."

"The thing I'm really concerned about is the panic that could become associated with this kind of thing," the superintendent said. "I know it's difficult because parents are concerned and I can sympathize with them, but we have to try to remain calm."

AT COOPER, students and teachers are "numb" at Dale Chany's death. The eighth grader was a top student and an outstanding athlete.

Memorial services for Dale are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Kolssak of Wheeling Funeral Home, 189 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Dale was a member of the Cooper cross-country track team and a special award for future runners is being established in his memory. The honor will go to the most improved second-year member of the team each year.

Two jobs revealed in $310,000 damage suit

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT and LYNN ASINOF

James Stavros, indicted former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, has admitted he works for two construction companies that he allegedly forced a developer to hire as part of a zoning shakedown scheme.

The admission came to light in the court record of a $310,000 damage suit against two drivers filed by Stavros and William Bieber, Wheeling building and zoning director indicted Jan. 31 along with Stavros by a federal grand jury.

Stavros, a behind-the-scenes influence in village government for almost a decade, was charged with 10 counts of extortion and conspiracy. Bieber, who has been granted a leave of absence from his $21,500-a-year village job, is charged with extortion, conspiracy, perjury and filing a false tax return.

The two firms Stavros listed as employers — Rock Road Construction Co. of Des Plaines and Country Service and Supply Co. of Northbrook — were awarded subcontracts by the Ben Pekin Corp. after pressure from Stavros and Bieber, the indictments charge. Construction delay of Pekin's Tahoe Village in Wheeling was allegedly threatened by the two men until the Country Service and Rock Road contracts were awarded.

Stavros and Bieber also demanded six cases of liquor, installation of sewer and water lines to the home of Stavros' mother and a Miami Beach vacation for Bieber, according to the indictments.

ROCK ROAD also is named in Bieber's perjury indictment. Bieber denied in two grand jury appearances that he recommended hiring of Rock Road by Tekton Corp., developer of Cedar Run in Wheeling. The indictment charges that Bieber lied and in fact recommended Rock Road to Donald Buick of Tekton.

Village records also indicate Rock Road has been awarded more than $539,000 in municipal street work contracts in the past six years. The contracts were awarded after competitive bidding, according to the records. So far, the village has paid more than $240,000 to the company for its work on those projects, records show.

Largest Rock Road contract with the village is a $481,304 bid to extend Wheeling Road. Other work includes a $46,275 bid to extend 12th Street to Strong Street and an $11,923 bid for 1972 street maintenance work.

COUNTRY SERVICE, an excavating firm, is listed on nine building permits for major developments in Wheeling.

Projects include Cedar Run, Whippertree, Harmony Village, Pleasant Run, Chelsea Cove, Lakeside Villas, the Foxboro apartments, a Victor Smigel apartment building and Wickes furniture warehouse.

Whippertree and Pleasant Run have been tied to the Stavros family by The Herald. Stavros' brothers, Ernest and Ted, have been connected to the Whippertree trailer park since it was proposed in 1970. August Stavros was identified as part owner of the Pleasant Run condominium land, at 1151 S. Elmhurst Rd.,

Flood control main topic at accountability session

by LYNN ASINOF

Trustee William Hein took up most of the Wheeling Village Board's third accountability session answering questions from unhappy residents about his flood-control programs.

The questions dealt primarily with delays in the development of the Husky Park retention basin and sewer problems in the Anthony Road area. More than 50 residents at the Carl Sandburg School PTA meeting listened while Hein and other village officials responded to the complaints.

One resident asked what action the village had to take before the park district could finalize its plans for improving Husky Park. He noted a Herald article in which park district officials said they were waiting for the village to inform them of plans to upgrade the retention basin before beginning their improvement projects.

HEIN RESPONDED BY saying that the village has been working with the park district on plans for the basin. He said bids for revamping the retention facility will be opened at the March 4 board meeting.

Park officials, however, said yesterday that they were only just informed of the March 4 bid opening. They said they still do not have a timetable for construction from the village, and therefore cannot yet set up their own timetable.

A second resident also expressed concern over the village's timetable for completing Husky Park. "It's talk," she said of a March 4 bid opening promise.

"Do we have any proof that we are going to have action? Your promises don't mean much to us, Mr. Hein."

Hein explained that the village has had to completely update its plans for the Husky Park basin. "It has taken this much time to do it. We've changed engineers. We've changed concepts," he said. "Things are going to get done but we're not going to do them until we're absolutely sure we're going to do them right."

OTHER RESIDENTS complained that the Husky Park basin is not preventing backups in their sanitary sewers. Village Mgr. George Passolt fielded this question, saying that the basin has little to do with the sanitary sewer backups.

Passolt said part of the problem is caused by residents who hook their sump pumps into the sanitary rather than stormwater sewers. In addition, he said the sanitary sewers often get filled to capacity, leaving the sewerage with no where else to go.

"We are right in the midst of a program on that," he said.

The residents also expressed concern over the type of flood-control programs required of apartment projects built in the village. One resident noted the current problem at Pleasant Run Condominiums where "these people are under water all the time."

Hein said all of the major developments in Wheeling do provide their own flood-retention basins. He noted that a new ordinance now under study would require more stringent water retention by all developers.

Trustees refuse comment on indictments

Wheeling residents at Monday's accountability session never got the chance to ask village trustees about recent indictments against six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials.

Trustee John Koeppen opened the meeting at Carl Sandburg School by announcing that the board would not comment on the matter, "upon advice of our attorney."

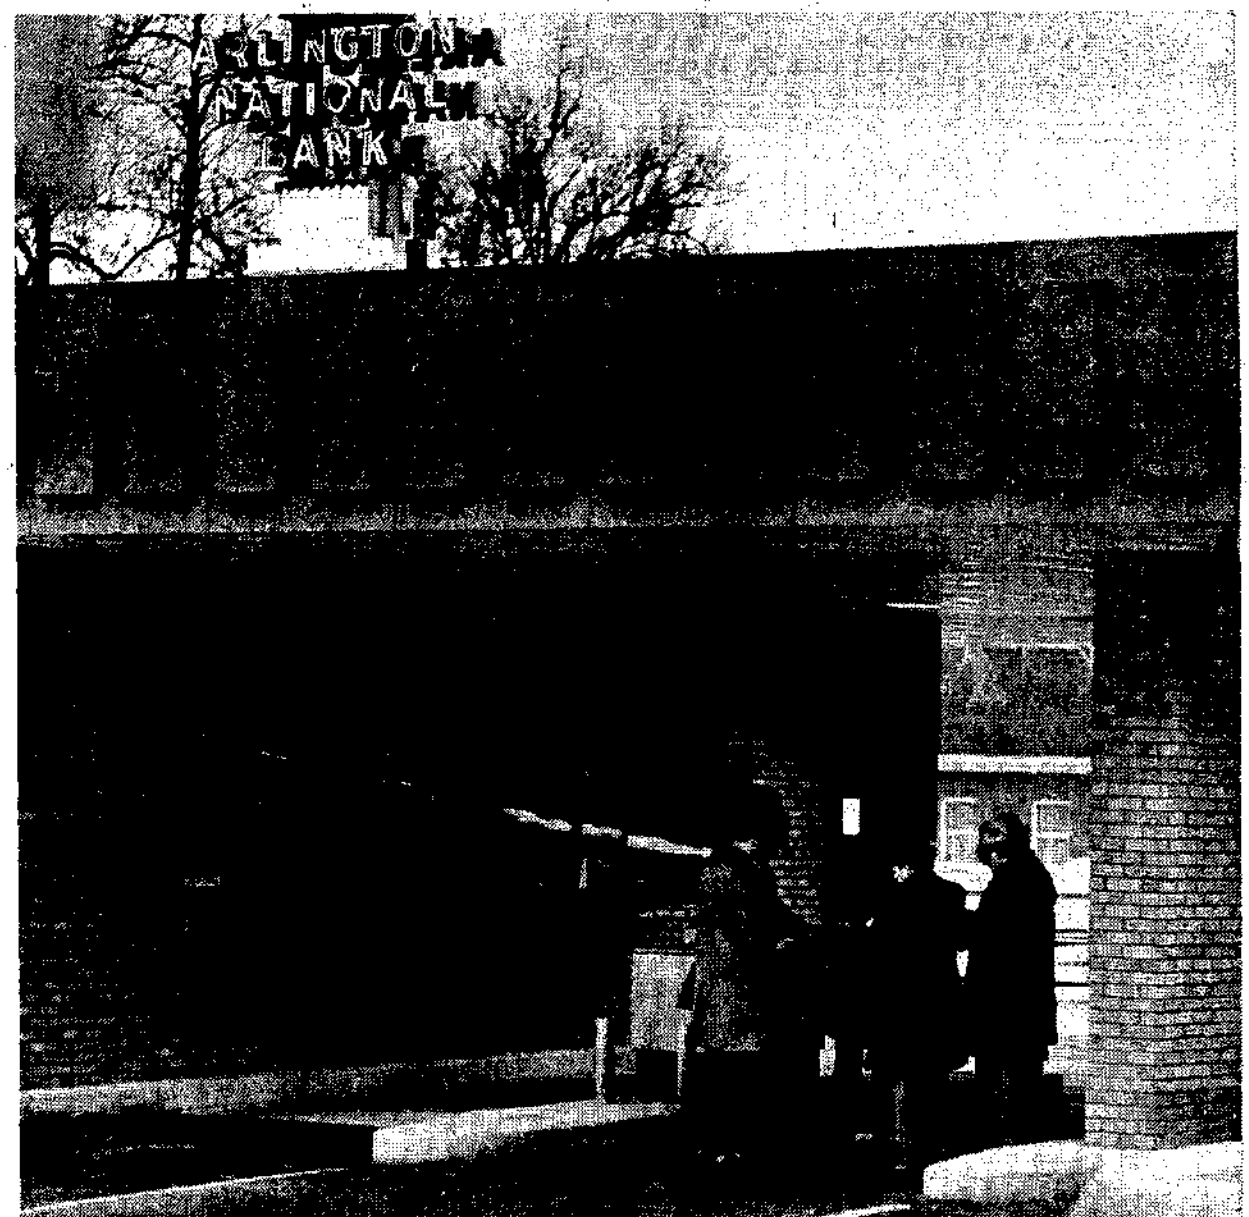

Koeppen said the board was not trying to "run" from the issue. He said, however, the matter could not be discussed because it is in the courts.

WHILE THE residents did not ask about the indictments, one resident asked for a clarification of the village's policy on leaves of absence. Two village officials indicted by a federal grand jury last month have been granted leaves of absence until the charges against them are resolved.

Joan Shelk, 177 Dunrise Dr., said she wanted to know how long a leave of absence is effective.

The board declined to answer the question, with Koeppen again noting the matter was in litigation. The trustees said

331 absent in wake of student's death

Cooper Junior High School, where Dale Chany, 14, of Arlington Heights, was an eighth grader until his death Monday from the rare Reye's Syndrome disease, seemed almost deserted yesterday. Officials of the Buffalo Grove school said 331 of the approximately 750 students were absent and the number is expected to go up today. "I'm sure if a parent was trying to decide if a child was ill enough to stay home, when he heard about Dale's death, he had to make the decision," said Principal Larry Weaver. Medical experts said they do not believe the syndrome, which seems to follow flu or chicken pox, is contagious, but many parents apparently do not want to take any chances.

Stavros linked to 2 firms

James Stavros, indicted former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, has admitted he works for two construction companies that he allegedly forced a developer to hire as part of a zoning shakedown scheme. The admission came to light in the court record of a $310,000 damage suit against two drivers filed by Stavros and William Bieher, Wheeling building and zoning director indicted Jan. 31 along with Stavros by a federal grand jury. Bieher and Stavros were driving northbound near North Avenue on the Tri-State Tollway at 6:40 a.m. Jan. 16, 1973, when their car was involved in an accident with two other autos, according to a state police report.

Sparks may run after all

Allen Sparks, Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 School Board president who had announced his retirement from the board, has now taken out nomination papers for the April 13 school election and is "keeping my options open."

Teacher charges rights violated

An East Maine Elementary Dist. 63 teacher has charged in a lawsuit that the school board violated his rights by placing a warning letter in his personnel file after an incident in which he allegedly threatened two custodians during a labor dispute. The teacher, Jerome Slowinski, is asking a federal court to order the school board to remove the letter. The letter was a "clear case of reprisal" for union activities, said Curtiss Platt, executive director of the Illinois Education Assn.

Chase ends in death

A 16-year-old Franklin Park youth, pursued by police from five departments because his car's license plates were expired and headlights were out, was killed early yesterday when the auto hit a utility pole near Elk Grove Village. The youth, Jerome L. Ludmann, fled Cook County Sheriff's Police when they tried to stop him near Wolf Road and Grand Avenue about 1:30 a.m. Four other departments joined the chase, which ended when Ludmann's car swerved off the road and into the pole by Elk Grove Village police after it had crashed a road block and struck an Elk Grove Village squad car.

Jury fails to indict police

A County grand jury has refused to indict several Cook County Sheriff's policemen suspected of involvement in a theft scheme at the J.C. Penney store in the Golf Mill shopping center. The grand jury, which heard evidence last Thursday and Friday, returned a "no bill" against the policemen. The probe, centered on reports that a policeman moonlighting as a Penney security guard may have been involved in replacing cash from store receipts with bogus checks.

Gov. Walker promises support

Campaign on to sell RTA to suburbs

by STEVE FORSYTH

The big guns of state politics were leveled at the Chicago suburbs yesterday in a kick-off campaign to flood the suburbs with information during the final month before the Regional Transportation Authority referendum.

Gov. Daniel Walker, Lt. Gov. Neil Hartigan, Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, and a scattering of other legislative leaders shared the spotlight in a boisterous reception at the Bismarck Hotel to start the final month of work before the March 19 referendum.

Earlier in the day, opponents of the RTA bill met in the State of Illinois Building, State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, gathered several mayors and village presidents from each of the six counties in the proposed RTA area to support his claim of region-wide opposition to the referendum.

Walker promised the pro-RTA crowd at the hotel that he would appear as often as possible in as many areas of the suburbs as possible to convince voters that the RTA is based on good legislation.

The suburban mayors assembled by Schlickman called the bill "sloppy legislation" that will work to the disadvantage of the suburbs. Mount Prospect Mayor Robert Teichert said the mountains of arguments over meaning of the legislation prove it is a bad bill with ambiguous wording.

"THREE OR FOUR amendments could make this bill acceptable to most suburban mayors," he said.

To counteract reports that suburban mayors support the RTA bill, Schlickman provided a list of 29 municipal leaders, 18 city councils, village boards and township boards, eight park districts and 16 civic groups and community organizations that oppose the referendum.

Although the mayors at the morning meeting agreed they would like to see some form of RTA, they said the present bill is unacceptable. Teichert said the greatest problems could be solved if the RTA board members were elected instead of appointed, and if every county had some representation on the board.

SCHLICKMAN SAID representation could be achieved through weighted voting, which would not create an unwieldy board of more than 60 members. He said the present system is described as conforming to one-man, one-vote principles, but Cook County is not getting its share. Schlickman said the population ratio of the city and suburban Cook County is five to three, not two to one. The RTA bill would give the city four seats and the suburbs only two.

Many of the mayors charged taxation is unfair and unlimited in the RTA bill. Although Teichert said he doubted anyone would tax private garages or driveways, "We've got Randhurst and village parking meters, and I'm sure there's a tax in store for them."

In between the two RTA gatherings yesterday, the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission sponsored an information session for park districts and forest preserve board members.

At that meeting, State Rep. Daniel Pierce, D-Highland Park, promised to introduce an amendment to the RTA bill that would remove RTA's condemnation power over park and forest preserve property.

Park districts and associations have expressed concern over the power to take over their land. Pierce and State Sen. Harris Fawell, R-Naperville, asked them not to try to sink the whole RTA bill because of that one objection.

Reye's Syndrome threat reported lessening here

The threat of Reye's Syndrome, which has killed seven children in the Chicago area in the past 12 days, appears to be lessening, according to a U.S. Public Health Service official.

Dr. Robert Rubin, of the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, said yesterday it appears that influenza-B virus is on its way out of the Chicago area. Reye's Syndrome, known to affect children from 6 months to 18 years old, usually follows influenza-B or the chicken pox virus.

But Rubin warned that Reye's Syndrome could take as much as a week to appear after a child has had an upper respiratory or flu infection. During that time, the child would appear to be fine, he said.

Dr. Rubin stressed the disease is "definitely" not contagious.

Two Northwest suburban youths have died from the disease. Extensive testing at Alexian Brothers Medical Center showed yesterday that 13-year-old Donald Rohrich, 622 Carol St., in Elk Grove Village died of Reye's Syndrome. Hospital officials had said "it was not probable" according to autopsy findings.

Rohrich, a student at Grove Junior High School and Queen of the Rosary Catholic School, died Friday night at the hospital. Hospital spokesmen said he was admitted Feb. 10 in a coma. Relatives said Ronald appeared to be getting a cold a week ago last Saturday and the next day had convulsions.

According to Evanston Hospital officials, autopsy findings yesterday confirmed that Dale Chany, 14, of 816 Britany Dr., Arlington Heights, died of the disease. A student at Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove, Chany had the flu for a week before he started vomiting and experiencing severe stomach pains.

A 12-year-old girl was admitted to Children's Memorial Hospital in Chicago late Monday night with the disease. A hospital spokesman said she was in poor condition. Another Reye's Syndrome patient at the hospital was reported to be in poor condition, but slightly improving.

Four children have died of the disease at Children's Memorial; another died Feb. 9 at Highland Park Hospital. Wyler Children's Hospital in Chicago reported yesterday a patient with the disease was still in critical condition.

RUBIN ADVISED parents not to worry. He said chances of a child with the flu getting Reye's Syndrome are less than "one in a thousand."

Dr. C. Kallick, associated professor of pediatrics at Rush Medical School and affiliated with the Illinois Department of Public Health, estimated those chances at "one in 50,000."

Kallick said he "would not be surprised" if adults get the disease, but that doctors call it something else. He said it is unknown why only certain children get the syndrome after the flu, while others do not.

Rubin said other recent cases of Reye's Syndrome have been reported in Wisconsin, Michigan, St. Louis, Oklahoma, New Mexico, New York and Pennsylvania, where there have been large outbreaks of influenza-B.

According to a Kansas health official, six children there have died from the disease.

Solid State Service

by Ed Landwehr

In a previous article we wrote that solid-state electronic service is less costly because quick diagnosis is made and modules are replaced without the time consuming details of ferreting out specific tiny breakdowns. So someone asked at Landwehr's Home Appliances, "If solid-state is so much better and long lasting, won't it put you out of business?"

It's true that solid-state needs less maintenance than tube electronics, but the increase in total sets for our population explosion is actually causing a TV technician shortage. Also many homes have two and three sets now. We don't see our customers as often, but we have many, many more service stops. Some of our customers bring their sets to our shop and pick them up on the way back from their jobs.

Use the TV phone number 885-0700 for service at your convenience, or drop your set off at 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights for a saving on the home call. You will be pleased with our work.

6 million gallons? Some is coming

by LEA TONKIN

At least 750,000 gallons of the elusive 6 million gallons of gasoline which was supposed to be siphoned to Illinois from other states should be on its way to some Chicago area dealers this week.

Harry Rinkema, regional vice president of sales for Amoco Division Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, made the announcement Tuesday, saying dealers are being notified of added supply shipments. This should ease shortages the last 8 or 9 days of February, he said.

The added gas supplies for Amoco dealers will mean a 2.2 per cent boost in their February allocations. "I don't know where the rest of the 6 million gallons is coming from," said Rinkema. "You'll have to ask the FEO."

Rinkema was among the oilmen who spoke at a Chicago seminar sponsored by the Illinois Petroleum Council. The gathering was sponsored to dispel "considerable misinformation circulating about fuel shortages."

The estimated 6 million gallons of gasoline would be diverted to Illinois under a program devised by the Federal Energy Office. The boost in supplies had been announced earlier, but there were many complaints that the supplies hadn't materialized. Rinkema said Standard cleared its planned diversion of gas supplies to the Chicago area with the FEO, to avoid charges of discrimination.

Standard of Indiana also asked the state of Illinois to allocate 1.2 to 1.5 million gallons of the state's February 1.8 million gallons of reserves (earmarked for priority users) to be directed to the Chicago area.

Spring and summer gasoline shortages "will be slightly worse" in the Chicago area, Rinkema said. Amoco's inventory of gasoline is slightly higher as of Feb. 1 than a year earlier, but supplies of crude oil were down.

Rinkema and other oilmen pooh-poohed recent criticisms of oil company profits and operations. Conceding that a credibility gap exists between the industry and the public, Rinkema said the Amoco profit increase of 36 per cent during 1973 should be compared with increases in other industries. He said inventories of gasoline were not held back to boost profits. The "rolling stock" of motorists carrying a quarter of a tank more gasoline than a year ago does affect the gasoline pinch, he said.

T. W. Mathews, Chicago regional manager for Union Oil Co. of California, Union 76 division in Hoffman Estates, said the energy shortage is "real and it's here for the decade of the 70's." A switch to increased gasoline production (5 to 6 per cent of refinery capacity) could boost area gas supplies within a month, he said, but the FEO regulations which limit refinery output to 76 per cent of capacity will more than offset this boost.

20 states to get gas 'injection'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy Director William E. Simon, saying President Nixon had ordered him to reduce long lines at service stations, announced Tuesday an "emergency injection" of gasoline to the 20 states hit hardest by the crisis. Illinois is among them.

Simon said the move should give consumers relief from the long waits "within a matter of days."

Leaving the White House after a meeting with the President, Simon told reporters that 2 million barrels (84 million gallons) will be drawn from the current reserves of refiners — not from other states' allocations — to provide a 5 per cent increase to 10 of the states and 2 per cent to the remainder.

Simon said the extra fuel would be provided to the states during the remaining days of February. He said he would not hesitate to take the same action in March if the situation does not improve — again drawing on the estimated 219 million barrels of gasoline in producers' storage tanks.

Getting a 5 per cent increase are Alabama, Arizona, Georgia, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Oregon, Vermont, Virginia and West Virginia. The 2 per cent boosts go to Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, New York, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island.

Illinois and Maryland were also on a Feb. 9 list promised 2 per cent more. The difference, the FEO said, is that the Feb. 9 list was for some states to get gasoline shifted from other states, and "very little" had actually been shifted because it depended on availability. Tuesday's list will be assured the additional gasoline because it will come from inventories and not from other states' supplies, the FEO said.

Noting that he has asked refiners to shift emphasis from home heating oil to gasoline now that the worst of winter weather is over, Simon said the "emergency injection" was intended to help gasoline-short areas until longer-range nationwide changes can be made in allocation regulations.

He urged states and localities in the interim to adopt, as needed, the growing practice of allowing drivers with license plates ending in odd digits to buy gasoline on odd-numbered days and vice versa.

Kissinger back to Mideast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon Tuesday announced that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will make another trip to the Middle East next week in an effort to disengage Syrian-Israeli troops and bring about an overall Arab-Israeli peace.

The President made the announcement after meeting for nearly 90 minutes with Foreign Ministers Ismail Fahmy of Egypt and Omar Sakkaf of Saudi Arabia.

The Egyptian entered the meeting saying he had "good news" for Nixon, but it apparently was not about oil. Sakkaf told reporters later there was no immediate hope for lifting of the Arab petroleum embargo.

Nixon, for his part, walked away without answering when a reporter asked him if there had been any discussion on lifting the embargo.

Nixon said he had asked Kissinger to go back to the Middle East — his fourth visit in recent months — "where he will meet with Syrian and Israeli officials with the objective of getting talks started" on the disengagement of armed forces in the Golan Heights area.

Kissinger is flying first to Mexico City Wednesday for a meeting with Latin American foreign ministers. White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the secretary would leave Sunday or Monday for the Middle East.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Golda Meir and Defense Minister Moshe Dayan split over formation of a new coalition government, throwing Israel into a political crisis.

Both Mrs. Meir and Dayan said they would not serve in Israel's next cabinet unless their clashing terms for a government coalition are met. Deadline for formation of a new government is today.

Political sources said Mrs. Meir refused to continue with her month-long efforts to form a coalition cabinet at the price of bringing in the right-wing opposition Likud bloc.

Spokesmen for Dayan said he would not serve in any government without Likud. The rightwing Likud was one of the principal critics of Dayan's conduct of the October war but both favor a tough line in any settlement with the Arabs.

'Sting', 'Exorcist' lead Oscar race

From Herald news services

Hollywood's 46th annual Oscar derby began Tuesday, with "The Exorcist" and "The Sting" each capturing 10 Academy Award nominations.

Both "The Exorcist," a box-office phenomenon which caused a national preoccupation with the occult and a wave of fainting, and "The Sting," a comedy about a pair of Depression-era con men, were nominated for best picture.

Also nominated for best picture: "Cries and Whispers," "American Graffiti," and "A Touch of Class." Those three and "The Way We Were" trailed the leaders with five nominations each.

Among other key nominations: Best actor: Robert Redford, "The Sting"; Marlon Brando, "Last Tango in Paris"; Jack Lemmon, "Save the Tiger"; Jack Nicholson, "The Last Detail"; Al Pacino, "Serpico." Lemmon's nomination was his fifth, and Brando's his seventh. Brando has twice won, including last year when he sent an Indian woman to reject the prize.

Best actress: Ellen Burstyn, "The Exorcist"; Barbra Streisand, "The Way We Were"; Joanne Woodward, "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams"; Marsha Mason, "Cinderella Liberty"; Glenda Jackson, "A Touch of Class."

Best supporting actor: Vincent Gardenia, "Bang the Drum Slowly"; Jack Gilford, "Save the Tiger"; John Houseman, "The Paper Chase"; Jason Miller, "The Exorcist"; Randy Quaid, "The Last Detail."

Best Supporting actress: Linda Blair, "The Exorcist"; Candy Clark, "American Graffiti"; Sylvia Sidney, "Summer Wishes, Winter Dreams"; and Madeline Kahn and Tatum O'Neal, both for "Paper Moon."

The winners will be announced April 2.

Hanrahan, policemen can be tried for Panther raid: court

From Herald news services

The U.S. Supreme Court yesterday let stand a decision holding that former Cook County state's attorney Edward V. Hanrahan and seven Chicago policemen can be tried on charges stemming from a 1969 raid that left two Black Panthers dead.

Without comment, the court refused to hear arguments that Hanrahan and other defendants were immune from prosecution under an 1871 Civil Rights Act because they were merely performing their proper duties as state officials in planning and executing the raid. Illinois Panther Chairman Fred Hampton, and associate Mark Clark, were killed during a pre-dawn raid Dec. 4, 1969. Two other Panthers were wounded and seven arrested. No one was ever brought to trial on any charges connected with the raid.

The court also: —Agreed to rule on the constitutionality of a Louisiana statute that excludes women from jury duty unless they formally declare they wish to serve.

—Agreed to rule in an Ohio case whether the rights of public school students are violated if they are suspended without being first allowed to present their case at an informal hearing.

End Watergate hearings

From Herald news services

The Senate Watergate Committee voted Tuesday to end its public hearings in the scandal, leaving open only the "small possibility" that the hearings would be re-opened if new developments warrant.

Committee Chairman Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., said the committee would focus its attention on appealing the recent federal court ruling denying it access to five White House tapes and on writing its final report by May 28. Ervin said the committee didn't want to interfere with the impeachment work of the House Judiciary Committee and the prosecution of Watergate criminal cases by Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski. He said he has indications indictments will be handed down soon.

The committee had planned to resume public hearings this year on contributions to President Nixon's campaign from Howard Hughes and the dairy industry, but now that apparently will be done in private.

In related developments: —Federal Judge John Sirica called in Jaworski and presidential lawyer James St. Clair to get what he called a pledge to stop "continued public comment" about presidential tapes.

—The conspiracy and perjury trial of former Cabinet officers John Mitchell and Maurice Stans began with jury selection in New York federal court, and an immediate defense request that all charges be thrown out or the trial be moved elsewhere.

• There are a lot of explanations sprouting over Democrat Richard Vander Veen's stunning and handy upset win over Republican Robert Vander Laan in Michigan's 5th Congressional District, but they all spell gloom for the GOP. Vice President Gerald Ford, who quit the seat last fall after holding it for 25 years of a 64-year GOP domination, first saw it as Watergate fallout, then amended that to say the outcome was due to economic turmoil and campaign blunders. GOP National Chairman George Bush was stunned, admitting it was one seat the party was sure it would hold. House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., feasted on the news, saying it meant the "the Democrats are going to sweep the nation this year." And AFL-CIO President George Meany, an old presidential foe, said it showed Americans "don't want Watergate to go away; they want President Nixon to go away." Vander Veen made Watergate his No. 1 campaign issue.

• Politicians are used to people not believing them, so Sen. Norris Cotton, R-N.H., made a "final and irrevocable" announcement Tuesday that he will not seek re-election when his current term — his fourth — expires in January. He first said so last summer, but you know how it is with speculation.

• Then there is Latin American politics, where apparently you get used to everything. Thus it was that Argentina's President Juan Peron announced he paid little attention to a report from his own police last week that they had broken up a leftist plot to assassinate him. "I've been in government for 30 years," said Peron, "and every day they are selling me some plot."

• Exiled Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn took a swipe Tuesday at the poetic license of some Western journalists, admonishing them to "write only the truth." He described as "nonsense" and "childishness" some of the things written about his activities since his banishing last week, saying he fought against official lying in the press in the Soviet Union and "will not stand for" invention in any form in the Western press.

• There was a little hitch Tuesday in the first full day of Thomas Gatch's balloon flight across the Atlantic: he aimed for Europe but was headed for Africa. Nevertheless, if he makes it, Gatch — a 48-year old Army Reserve colonel from Virginia — will be the first person ever to make such a crossing. He left Harrisburg, Pa., Monday night in a gondola hoisted by 10 balloons and appears headed for a landing in northwest Africa about 10 tonight.

• All those rumors about Sonny and Cher ended in truth Tuesday, as Sonny Bone filed for legal separation from his wife and singing-comedy co-star. They're now living apart, but their show — on national TV — will go on.

• The world's most famous and most injured motorcycle jumper — Evel Knievel — is resting up from his latest mishap, a painful "impression fracture" in his lower back suffered when he cleared 11 trucks at a Texas dragstrip performance last week. He's getting ready for a half-mile jump on a jet-powered aircraft over Snake River Canyon near Twin Falls, Idaho, in July, which he says will be the last jump of his career. He may be right.

The right to die: Part 3

What if the doomed person is YOU?

The idea of allowing a close relative's life to expire is difficult enough, but what if the person doomed to an early death is you? What decision must the person who knows death is coming make? In this, the fourth part of a series on the question of dying, Herald staff writer Karen Blecha talked to people who know they will soon die.

by KAREN BLECHA
Her laughter rings out into the hallway from the office where she sits behind a desk cluttered with reminders of things left undone.

She smiles even as she tells her story, which by no man's measure is a funny one. "I'll talk if you don't identify me," she said. For she cannot tolerate pity.

She is an unmarried, 33-year-old Schaumburg woman, a juvenile diabetic for 22 years. Since average life expectancy for a juvenile diabetic is usually 28 to 30 years after the onset of the disease, she figures she has only eight years left. So now she is drawing up legal papers to make sure nothing extraordinary is done to keep her alive when her time comes.

JANE (not her real name) is one of a growing number of people exercising their right to die. These people know that death can be a best friend, a blessing for the person wracked with pain or trapped in a hospital bed he'll never be able to leave. They realize extraordinary treatment, the machines that pump air into the lungs and keep the heart beating, only prolong the inevitable. They envision the burden, both financial and emotional, keeping them alive will put on their families.

As a result, doctors find patients, particularly those with cancer, refusing life-extending treatments. Dr. S, a Northwest suburban internist, who did not want to be named, had one such case involving a 38-year-old man who had cancer of the pancreas. His condition had stabilized, but not improved. He told Dr. S he wanted to stop treatment because the quality of his life was no good. The doctor warned him it could be fatal and tried to convince him to continue. He said he was ready to die and he did.

It is hard to think about death when you are 33 years old, happy, independent and successful. Jane has a good job and enjoys being alive. But death was something she had to face. She came to grips with it only about eight months ago; she had blocked it out before.

"EVERYONE HAD told me that if I take good care of myself, I would live longer," she said. "But I know that isn't true. I can look forward to a not pleasant end. I am prone to vascular disease and can look forward to severe heart attack, stroke or kidney failure where people can be kept going on machines. I don't want that."

Jane said fear of pain or religious belief had nothing to do with her decision. It was based on her value of life.

"The quality of life is very important to me," she said. "That does not necessarily mean a happy life, but a life without many physical restrictions. Since a teen-ager I have had restrictions and I know what they are. I am very independent and would resent being confined to a bed."

"If I had a stroke I don't feel I would nor give advice which may cause his death.*

—The Hippocratic Oath want to be kept alive because it would be a short period of time anyway in my case," she said. "You don't die of diabetes, you die of all the complications."

A COMMON CAUSE of death is diabetic kidney disease. Impairment of vision, sometimes leading to blindness, is often a complication. Jane is not sure just how she would handle life if she became blind.

"That does concern me since most of my pleasures are with the natural world," she said. "Were I to become blind, that is one thing I could do nothing about. It is not within my philosophy to actively take my life."

Jane said she feels better now, almost relieved, that she has confronted death. "I'm not morbid or anything," she said. "It is something that has to be thought about. You have to think of the future."

Many people are thinking about the future through the Living Will, distributed by the Euthanasia Educational Council in New York City. The council was formed in 1938 to establish the right to die with dignity and believes that supporting measures should not be used to prolong dying in cases of terminal illness with "intractable pain or irreversible brain damage." To the council, euthanasia simply means its literal translation, "good death."

THOUSANDS OF copies of the Living Will have been distributed across the country. Last year alone the council got more than 50,000 requests for the document. The will states:

"To My Family, My Physician, My

Clergyman, My Lawyer —
"If the time comes when I can no longer take part in decisions for my own future, let this statement stand as the testament of my wishes:

"If there is no reasonable expectation of my recovery from physical or mental disability, I . . . request that I be allowed to die and not be kept alive by artificial means or heroic measures. Death is as much a reality as birth, growth, maturity and old age — it is the one certainty. I do not fear death as much as I fear the indignity of deterioration, dependence and hopeless pain. I ask that medication be mercifully administered to me for terminal suffering even if it hastens the moment of death."

"This request is made after careful consideration. Although this document is not legally binding, you who care for me will, I hope, feel morally bound to follow its mandate. I recognize that it places a heavy burden of responsibility upon you, and it is with the intention of sharing that responsibility and of mitigating any feelings of guilt that this statement is made."

The Living Will is then signed, dated and witnessed.

NEXT: Should the right to die and "pulling the plug" be legalized?

Manhunt on for gunman

$20,000 stolen from bank —or was it $100,000?

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman escaped with possibly as much as $100,000 or as little as $20,000 from an Arlington Heights drive-in bank Tuesday in a predawn holdup, setting off a wide police and FBI manhunt.

The First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility, Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road, was robbed at 6:45 a.m., apparently by two men, who police believe fled town and escaped on the Northwest Tollway.

Police bulletins of the robbery placed the take as high as $100,000, but bank spokesmen placed the figure at "$20,000 and even that could be high."

POLICE SAID a 23-year-old woman teller arrived at the drive-in facility at Eastman and Arlington Heights Road about 6:45 a.m. and was confronted by a masked man. The man brandished a blue steel automatic pistol and reportedly said, "I know you have the keys. I've been watching you for some time."

The gunman forced her to open the building and to turn off the alarm system. The teller then opened a small safe and gave the man two bags of cash which he placed in a blue cloth bag.

The teller was then taken out of the building and the gunman locked her keys inside. She was ordered to run south on Arlington Heights Road.

The teller told police she heard the man running and then the sound of a car driving away. She then ran to the main bank building at Dunton and Campbell streets, about four blocks away, where she telephoned police.

A POLICE TAPE recording of the call said, "I've been held up at the bank at Eastman and Arlington Heights . . . it's too late, he's gone."

The teller was crying and recordings of the police radio calls indicated there was some confusion about which facility was robbed. The first squad car arrived at the drive-in facility within a minute of the teller's call, according to the tapes.

Bruce Dodds, executive vice president of the bank, said an armed guard usually opens the drive-in bank at 6:45 a.m. but was late for work yesterday. He said the girl had picked up the keys to the facility from the main bank after she saw the guard was not there yet.

It was on her return to the drive-in building that she was surprised by the gunman.

THE BANK IS protected by an alarm and automatic camera system, according to Dodds. Arlington Heights police said the alarm is not directly hooked into the police station.

Dodds said the automatic camera operates at random intervals around the clock. Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall said the camera was not in operation at the time of the robbery.

McDougall said the gunman was calm and "professional" during the holdup. He said the gunman was not abusive to the teller and reassured her he just wanted the money and would not hurt her if she followed instructions.

McDougall said another person may be involved. He said it was significant the girl did not hear the sound of a motor starting before the getaway car left.

THE ROBBER was described as a black man about 35 years old and wearing a nylon stocking and sun glasses over his face. McDougall said the mask distorted his features making a composite sketch of the robber difficult. He was wearing a light brown raincoat.

The car is believed to be a large dark sedan, possibly a Ford, police said. It is thought to have been driven south on Arlington Heights Road.

McDougall said there was nothing to indicate at this time the robbery was an "inside job." Dodds said the guard had been employed by the bank for more than five years and the teller more than two years.

Dodds said an exact amount could not be placed on the robbery. Of the reports of $100,000 being taken, he said, "It doesn't take that kind of money to run a drive-in facility."

Police said there was more money than usual at the facility because of the extended holiday weekend.

The money is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case immediately.

The drive-in facility opens for business at 7 a.m.

Stavros contractor jobs are revealed

when it was rezoned three years ago.

Four of the developers that hired Country Service also were victims of Stavros' demands, the indictments state. Harmony Builders paid Stavros $30,000; Wickes paid Stavros $50,000 plus $1,700 in furniture for Bieber; Zale Construction Co. paid $30,000 to Stavros and $500 to Bieber; and Hollywood Builders Inc. paid Stavros $30,000.

Officials of Rock Road and Country Service refused comment yesterday on Stavros' employment.

The firms are listed in a deposition that Stavros signed after filing the Feb. 6, 1973 civil accident suit in Cook County Circuit Court.

STAVROS AND BIEBER are asking $310,000 in damages resulting from a three-car accident on the Tri-State Tollway Jan. 16, 1973.

They are seeking $65,000 and $90,000 respectively from each of the two other drivers — Susan Lettrich, 10552 W. Touhy Ave., Rosemont, and Eileen Wosick, of 10315 Grange Ave., Hales Corner, Wis.

The suit states that Bieber was driving northbound near North Avenue on the Tri-State with Stavros in the car about 6:40 a.m. Jan. 16 when the southbound Lettrich car jumped the median and collided with Mrs. Wosick's Chevrolet.

Mrs. Wosick's auto then struck the front-end of Bieber's 1966 Cadillac.

THE ILLINOIS State Tollway Police report filed after the accident indicates injuries to both Bieber and Stavros. Car damage on the police report was listed as $930.

The Bieber-Stavros suit charges that Bieber's car was damaged beyond repair and that both men were injured in the wreck. The Lettrich woman was charged with driving too fast for conditions and pleaded innocent in Mount Prospect traffic court.

In a deposition filed July 3, 1973, Bieber claimed injuries to his neck, head, shoulders, arms, back and legs. The suit states that he was hospitalized at Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge from Jan. 20 to Feb. 15, 1973 (cost $1,561); from Feb. 19 to March 2, 1973 (cost $1,338) and from April 8 to April 14, 1973 (cost $775). Bieber states that he lost about $7,500 in wages from the village and that he returned to part-time work April 18, 1973.

STAVROS' DEPOSITION, filed after two court orders, claims injuries to his right arm, left leg, head, neck and back although he received only emergency room treatment at Lutheran General on Jan. 16.

Stavros stated that he was unable to work after the accident and that Country Service, of 3300 Milwaukee, Northbrook, and Rock Road Construction, 125 W. Armstrong, Des Plaines, were his employers.

At a Feb. 6 hearing, attorneys for one of the women have requested that Stavros provide complete employment information and details of his claimed wage loss.

Additional costs listed by Stavros were $47.40 for treatment at Holy Family Hospital, Des Plaines, Jan. 23, 1973 and $47 for Superior Ambulance. The ambulance reportedly drove Stavros to Lutheran General from the tollway O'Hare Oasis about 7:40 a.m., more than an hour after the accident.

Trustees refuse comment on indictments

the residents would find the matter clearly explained if they read the newspaper accounts of the leave of absence issue.

Exchange students to speak tonight

Foreign exchange students now attending Wheeling High School will talk about their experiences in the United States during an open house at the school tonight.

Marvin Jimenez from Costa Rica, and Philippe Bottet and Jean Luc Piotrowski both from France will speak at 8 p.m. in the home economics room. Students, parents, host families and families interested in becoming hosts next year will attend. Coffee will be served.

The two village officials granted leaves of absence are Building Director William Bieber and Environmental Commission Chairman Michael Valenza. They were named in indictments issued last month following a year-long investigation into alleged shakedowns in Wheeling.

BIEBER is charged on 15 counts, including extortion, perjury, conspiracy and filing a false income tax return. He pleaded innocent on all counts.

Valenza was indicted for extortion and conspiracy to commit extortion in connection with the delivery of more than $1,700 of furniture which he allegedly received as part of a shakedown of Wickes Inc. He also has pleaded innocent.

Also indicted and pleading innocent are James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman and behind-the-scenes influence in Wheeling government; Nicholas Phillips, a Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals employee and Stavros' cousin; Ira Colitz, a county zoning board member who resigned after the indictments, and William Hart, a former Wheeling trustee.

Village board members have been reluctant to comment on the indictments ever since they were issued Jan. 31. They have repeatedly said that the charges should be resolved in court without any prejudgment by either residents or village officials.

Heard any good Euell Gibbons jokes lately?

HOLLYWOOD — Naturalist Euell Theophilus Gibbons has become a national joke making television commercials in which he fortifies a breakfast cereal with goodies he has found in the wilds.

When a football player was asked recently if he liked playing on astroturf, he replied, "I don't like playing on anything that Euell Gibbons can't eat."

One man announced on a talk show that his 200-year-old elm tree died and he suspected Gibbons of nibbling away the bark.

Gibbons accepts his overnight celebrity with misgivings. He has been a wild food forager most of his life. At age 65 he sees nothing particularly humorous about his hobby.

EVEN THE TITLES of his books fail to elicit a chuckle from him: "Stalking the Wild Asparagus," "Stalking the Blue-Eyed Scallop," "Euell Gibbons' Beachcomber's Handbook" and his newest, "Stalking the Faraway Places."

Ever alert for nature's bounty, Gibbons spent an hour or so before taping a Johnny Carson show for forage around a vacant lot in Burbank.

Gibbons is a stocky man with wavy gray hair, seamed face and deep-set intelligent eyes. His skin shows the leathery effects of the elements and his shoulders are slightly stooped, perhaps from keeping his eye on the ground.

He picked up a weed, peeled back the outer skin. "Dock," he said. "It's wild rhubarb. Sweeter out here than back east!" He nibbled on it before plucking other wild plants.

TV notes

NBC's "Go" program, a Saturday half-hour for children that gives them insight to various phases of real life, has been renewed for a second season, beginning next fall.

Norman Rosemont is producing for future ABC use a one-hour entertainment special, "Variety," with a format patterned after the noted trade publication of that title which covers all phases of show business.

Anthony Costello and Marianne McAndrew will costar in "Mr. and Mrs. Cop," a half-hour series that Viacom is producing for CBS. The two play a married couple working on a police force.

The Hollywood scene

by Vernon Scott

He identified a half-dozen unappetizing greens as being edible but he didn't taste them.

"MOST OF THESE edible wild plants are utterly delicious when properly prepared," he said. "Some are bland and some are horrible. But they all give you vitamin A and C. Keep you from getting scurvy."

Gibbons was reminded scurvy was relatively rare these days.

"I don't mean to be an eccentric," he said, "because I'm no more eccentric than a hunter or fisherman. I can't stand to kill innocent animals but I don't mind the scream of a dandelion."

"Some ecologists say we should fence off nature from man. No. I believe in man and nature together, involved. Man should be in conquest of nature, but intelligently. There's nothing eccentric about that."

"My image is one of a man with tough taste buds and a cast iron stomach who could eat the tailgate off a truck. One woman said she was afraid to wear a green dress around me."

"I consider myself a gourmet. I have sensitive taste buds. And in nature I can eat delicacies the richest men can't buy unless he goes out and gets them like I do."

GIBBONS DOESN'T subsist on wild foods alone. He can be found at the supermarket with his wife as often as the next guy. But almost every meal involves some wild food, even if it is just a condiment.

Frequently Gibbons takes his wife and grandchildren on 3-to-10 day survival trips, living off the land. There are store-bought provisions, to be sure, in the event wild provender is scarce.

Gibbons, who makes his home near Troxville, Pa., said, "I'm not a food faddist. I eat wild foods because I like them, not because there's any particular virtue in it. It's fun."

Camouflaged profits aid sellers, but hurt consumers

by CARLTON SMITH

It's heartening to learn that there are at least a few effective defenses against inflation.

Not if you're merely a consumer, we hasten to add. There isn't a great deal you can do to prevent inflation from gnawing the corners off your dollar bills, when you're on the buying end of an inflationary spiral.

But when you're a seller . . . well, that's quite a different story. There is LIFO, for example — a magical device which the merchant or manufacturer can use to make his profits look lower. That, of course, can justify price increases, and at the same time result in lower income taxes.

A knowledge of how LIFO works can be quite instructive to consumers who keep wondering how prices can keep leaping upward like kangaroos, despite price freezes, price controls, cost of living councils and the like.

ONE OF THE "Big Eight" national accounting firms recently recommended that its clients consider using LIFO — which is a method of valuing inventories,

"in a period of rising prices, since it increases the cost of sales (on paper) and, therefore, reduces profits" — again, just on paper.

Thus a company (a) can show that its profits are so low that it needs a price increase, and (b) by reporting lower profits, it pays less income tax.

Not making less profit. Only reporting less. As the accounting firms explain: "Of course, using LIFO does not change the true economic situation of the company. It merely changes the method of reporting profits on sales."

YOU FIND SUCH sleight-of-hand difficult to understand? It's not, at all. Let's say you've sold a certain amount of merchandise and want the figures on your profit.

That depends, of course, on how much the merchandise cost you — and that, in turn, can depend on which shelf you took it off of.

LIFO, which stands for "last in, first out," means you assume that the last piece of merchandise put on the shelves is the first one you take off and sell. (The alternative method is FIFO, or "first in, first out.") WHETHER FIRST is first, or last is first, can make quite a difference, as we shall now see.

Personal finance

You sell widgets. On Jan. 1 you had 100 on the shelves. They cost you $1 each. But there's inflation. In March you bought another 50 at $1.20 each, and in June another 50 at $1.50.

You are selling your widgets for $2 each, and by the end of June you've sold 100 — $200 worth. Now, which 100 widgets did you sell?

If you decide that you sold the 100 you had in January (those that were "first in"), they cost $100. Profit: $100.

BUT IF YOU sold those you bought in March and June, they cost you $135. Profit: only $65.

Thus, you are free to utter the magic word "LIFO" and a two-fold blessing ensues. You pay tax on a profit of only $65, not $100. And you can take your books to the Cost of Living Council and sob: "See how little money I'm making! I need a price increase or my children will starve."

You have, of course, the same amount of money in the till either way, LIFO or FIFO. As the accountants remind us, using LIFO "does not change the true economic situation of the company . . . (merely) the method of reporting profits."

Pure magic. Not just imaginative arithmetic; more like pure magic.

It seems to work so well, in fact, that we urge consumers be allowed to choose between FIFO and LIFO. Then, when you had to BUY a widget, you could say:

"TWO DOLLARS? Very well, I shall pay you in FIFO dollars — the first that went into my savings account back in 1966."

"They are now worth 73 cents each. I therefore hand you this $1.46, which means that you are receiving two FIFO dollars in payment for your widget. And remember, sir, that the true economic situation has not changed."

Nothing wrong with that, is there? Fair is fair.

Kemper makes a name change

The Kemper Insurance Group, based in Long Grove, becomes the Kemper Insurance and Finance Companies today.

"Because of the expansion and diversification of the organization in recent years, Kemper Insurance, as a descriptive entity, became an increasingly inadequate term for describing the range of our diversified financial services," James S. Kemper Jr., president of the Kemper Insurance and Financial Companies said.

Under the newly devised corporate identification system, the entire Kemper organization will be described as the Kemper Insurance and Financial Companies. The publicly held holding company, nee Kemperco, is now Kemper Corp. Major operating components will be known as Kemper Insurance Companies, Kemper Life Insurance Companies, Kemper Financial Companies and Kemper Reinsurance.

Newly designed logo, alphabet and system of identifying Kemper companies will be central to the system. It will be used by all of the more than 35 companies in the organization.

Plastics shortage would affect all: exec

by DONALD C. BROWN JR.

BATON ROUGE, La. — Imagine a naked housewife, her feet chilled by the concrete slab floor of a kitchen packed with unpainted appliances.

The walls of the kitchen are also unpainted. There are no handles on the refrigerator or the stove, no knobs on the pots and pans. But that's unimportant. The appliances won't work anyway because there is no insulation on the wiring.

That's one of the bleak illustrations J. Dudley Atkinson III, president of the National Assn. of Plastics Manufacturers, uses to show what may happen if his industry is not protected during the energy crisis.

ATKINSON doesn't stop with the plastics and petrochemicals found in clothing, floors, paint and appliances. There's furniture, cars, boats, water pipes — the list goes on.

"There's no other industry like that. When you talk about petrochemicals and plastics you're talking about everything from floor tile to panty hose, birth control pills, contraceptives, the whole deal," said Atkinson.

He said the plastics and petrochemical industry normally uses 5 to 10 per cent of the available oil and natural gas for feed stock and the energy used to produce the plastics. But the energy shortage has cut into that percentage.

"There has been no primary allocation of feedstocks for the petrochemical industry so we're just having to fight to get what we need or at least the manufacturers are having to fight and we're having to take what they can get," he said.

ATKINSON, a boyish-looking 33, is executive vice president of Gulf Wandes, a Baton Rouge-based firm that buys plastics from manufacturers and sells pipe, sheet, rods and tubes to industrial users and small fabricators.

Business today

According to an industry-commissioned study, a 15 per cent cutback in petrochemicals could put 1.6 million people out of work and cost the economy $65 billion annually in production value.

Atkinson said that in some instances his company already has been cut back more than 15 per cent.

"With one particular manufacturer we were allocated 80 per cent of what we bought in 1972 which, with a business growing as rapidly as ours, came to about 50 per cent of what we needed," he said.

Atkinson said the removal of price controls to provide incentive for new plant capacity could offer a way out of the petrochemicals shortage.

Mother starts a life of physical fitness at age 55

I had viral hepatitis and didn't listen to my doctor. I had a daughter to send through school, alone and an ill mother. I am a widow.

I never stopped long enough to rest five minutes. In three months I was taken to the hospital unconscious and toxic with plenty of liver damage and wrecked nerves.

Now I am on total disability, my mother has passed away and my last child married. I never did drink, but I smoked three packs of cigarettes a day for 30 years. After I was left alone, I would make a pot of coffee and sit down with my cigarettes and my pot of coffee. I lighted one cigarette off the last one while I watched my favorite TV programs, then I would eat and smoke more for hours.

One night I saw a religious program on TV, and I have never smoked since, but I gained 75 pounds. My doctor put me on a diet, and I have lost 40 pounds, but I still don't and won't smoke any more.

Now I have started a new life at 55. The only exercise I can take is to walk, so I walk a mile a day and am losing weight. My bad problem now is my abdominal muscles. I can't lie on the floor and take exercise.

Do you know anything I can do while walking my mile that will tighten my stomach muscles? I have lost inches every place from my walking, but don't know any exercise I can take standing up to help my stomach muscles. My dieting, my walking, my not smoking are worth all it has taken.

The doctor says

Congratulations on a big improvement in your lifestyle. It may save you a lot of trouble later on. I hope you have also cut down or eliminated that coffee habit.

I'm not sure why you can't lie down on the floor to do exercises. You must lie down sometime. If you can lie on your back in bed you could do exercises such as lifting the legs up and down to strengthen abdominal muscles or do sit-up exercises. If you do sit-up exercises, try them with your knees bent upward so you will be using mostly your abdominal muscles.

The sit-up exercises are good for the upper abdomen. Even lifting and lowering the head will have some effect. Leg lifts are good for the lower abdomen. If you are not strong enough to lift both of them, you can lift one leg at a time until you get stronger.

You can also simply tighten your abdominal muscles as much as you can by forcibly pulling in your muscles then holding your stomach muscles in that contracted position for at least 30 seconds. Repeat this exercise as often as you can until you develop some muscle tone.

You can also do the abdominal muscle tightening exercise while standing up. If you are able, you can bend over and repeat the process by increasing the number of these you do and repeating them several times a day, you will soon be on the road to stronger abdominal muscles and lost inches off that waistline.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Double finesse doubles your fun

Any expert would bring six no-trump home with today's cards. He would go after the clubs by leading the 10 from dummy.

An East player might solve his problems by covering, but an expert East would duck quickly. It wouldn't do expert East any good. Expert South would let the 10 ride!

He would do this because it's the best play. He plans to take a second finesse later on if the 10 loses to the king or queen.

Let's see why this is the best play. There is no way to avoid the loss of two club tricks if West holds K-Q-4; K-Q-2 or K-Q-4-2. This play of two finesses will also lose to K-Q doubleton, but it wins any time East started with either one or both of the honors.

The next best play is to lay down the ace. This will win against K-Q doubleton in the West hand, any other 2-2 break or any 3-1 break with divided honors.

The worst play is to let the 10 ride with the plan of playing the ace next. This wins against all 2-2 breaks and against any combination including both king-queen in the East hand, but it loses to all 3-1 breaks with divided honors.

Incidentally the respective chances of success of the three lines of play are 76 per cent for two finesses; 66 per cent for banging down the ace and only 62 per cent for one finesse followed by the play of the ace.

Clark Mollenhoff's 'Watch on Washington'

'Jaworski's an effective replacement for Cox'

by CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF
WASHINGTON—In his fourth month as special Watergate prosecutor, 69-year-old Leon Jaworski has emerged as the right man for the job of investigating and prosecuting the highest officials of President Nixon's administration.

His firm and carefully stated position on the credibility of former White House Counsel John W. Dean III has convinced the most skeptical of the Watergate watchers that the firing of former Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox was a blessing in disguise.

With months of hindsight, President Nixon's closest advisers now view the dismissal of Cox last October as an even greater disaster than it appeared in the days following the President's order. That order was followed in rapid succession by resignations of Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson and Deputy Attorney General William French Smith.

There are reliable reports currently circulating that the White House has been sounding out Congress on the impact of a Jaworski firing.

From the outset, Cox, a liberal Democrat and a friend and supporter of the Kennedy family, had a high political vulnerability, particularly with middle-of-the-road and conservative Republicans. Any action by Cox, a Harvard law professor, a member of the Americans for Democratic Action (ADA) and a personal friend of Senator Ted Kennedy, was suspect.

Cox, aware of this vulnerability, was cautious to the point of leaning over backward in his decisions to avoid an appearance of bias against President Nixon and his administration.

By contrast, Jaworski, a former president of the American Bar Association (ABA) and a conservative Texas Democrat, was so closely associated with former President Lyndon B. Johnson and former Texas Governor John Connally that he was initially suspected of being "a plant" to neutralize the special prosecutor's office.

In the wake of the Cox firing, it was apparent that the naming of Jaworski had the personal approval of President Nixon. The President's comments in the next few weeks and those authorized for White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler drew distinctions between the much despised Cox and his liberally oriented staff and the new special prosecutor Jaworski.

President Nixon promised a different relationship with the new prosecutor and pledged full cooperation with Jaworski.

Jaworski, who had rejected the special prosecutor job at the time Cox was appointed, found the new assurances of "complete independence" fully acceptable and essential in the wake of the infamous "Saturday Night Massacre."

The first reassuring thing Jaworski did was to retain the Cox staff, although there were several weeks during which insiders were uncertain as to whether this represented a true desire to go forward or was simply a clever lawyer's manner of lulling the Congress and the public into complacency.

But as the weeks moved on, lawyers on the special prosecution staff became convinced that Jaworski was a better man for this particular job than the more studious but less certain Harvard professor.

Archibald
Cox

Jaworski

Jaworski to answer political statements from the White House or from Senator Scott, it was not only proper but his obligation to defend the integrity of a key witness in the court of U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell.

With full approval of Jaworski, Assistant Special Prosecutor Richard Davis told Judge Gesell that the special prosecutor's office had no reason to believe that Dean had lied under oath.

This conclusion is a direct challenge to President Nixon and Senator Scott.

Since Dean's credibility has been argued in open court, Jaworski was able with total propriety to restate the conclusion that Dean was truthful in a national television show. He avoided a direct political argument with the President or with Senator Scott by noting that they might have some information he did not have.

But even while Jaworski gave the White House a temporary out, it was apparent to close observers of Watergate that Jaworski had all of the "relevant" evidence on Dean's credibility. If the White House had additional information on that vital point, it had a responsibility to turn it over to the special prosecutor.

Jaworski, in response to questions, said the White House had not given him all the information he needed. This was in direct contradiction to President Nixon's State of the Union comment that he had provided "all the material he (Jaworski) needs to conclude his investigation."

Clearly, Jaworski can't be coned by presidential praise nor frightened by presidential threats. He has proven he will be an able adversary for anyone the White House hires.

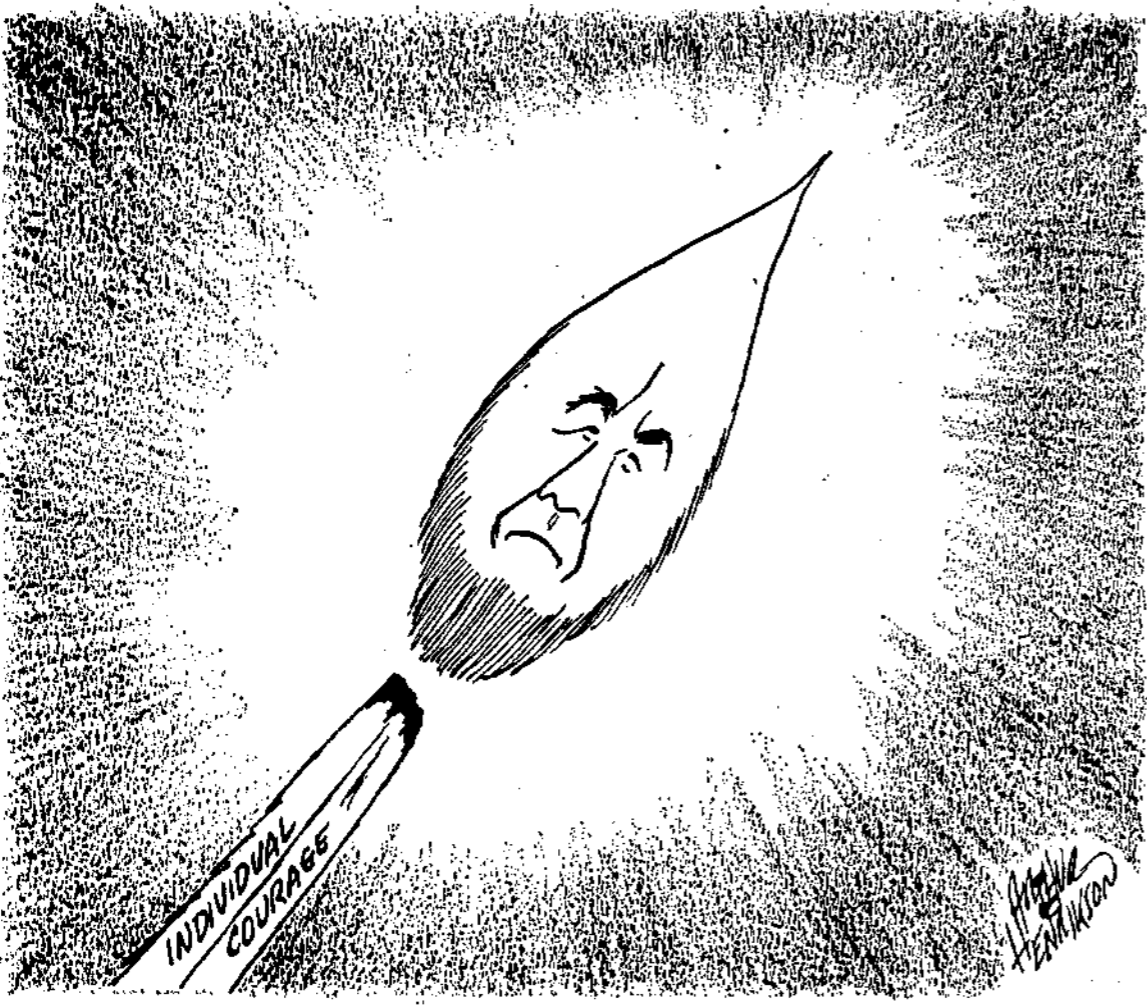

Another White House problem in its relations with Jaworski is the realization that every White House tape or document given to the special prosecutor eventually will be turned over to the House Judiciary Committee, which is studying possible impeachment.

While Jaworski quite properly said he would not volunteer these grand jury documents to the impeachment investigators, his assertion that the House Judiciary Committee "knew the way to the courthouse" was an invitation for the House to seek an order from Chief Judge John Sirica that will produce "all relevant documents."

What could be more "relevant" to the impeachment inquiry than five tapes from which it can be judged with finality whether President Nixon or John Dean is telling the truth?

Solzhenitsyn: a profile of courage...

The deportation of Alexander Solzhenitsyn last week from the Soviet Union tells us nothing new about how governments attempt to stifle opinions and criticism at various times — but it does remind us of the personal bravery of one Russian writer.

The Soviet Union, as any totalitarian country, does not appreciate critics whose version of truth differs from truth as defined in the Kremlin. Change and reform must come from the state — it cannot come from the voices of individuals, whose right to speak out threatens the Soviet government.

As a result, a handful of artists and writers in the Soviet Union, if they are to be truthful, must become prophets without honor under the Soviet flag. In the past, dissidents would have been summarily executed; today, under the shadow of Soviet-U. S. detente, deportation is a more acceptable punishment.

In the United States, deportation of vocal critics would be almost unthinkable. Still, within our borders we have been at times intolerant of dissident voices. One needs to recall the furor over Charlie Chaplin and the Hollywood blacklists during the 1940's to realize that

The trouble with artists — and this is as it should be — is that they should not be trampled or restrained by state-imposed limits. even our government and society, under pressure, can strike out against those who enjoy artistic freedom.

Government — and this is how it is — will all too often strike out against artists regarded as "enemies of the state." It is a sad, but all too present truth, especially in a totalitarian state.

Solzhenitsyn's case is special, because any case of censorship threatens everyone's freedom of thought and expression — and because the Russian Nobel Prize winner writes from a special love and deep experience in his native land.

He fell victim to Stalinist paranoia in 1945, and was arrested and sentenced to eight years in a detention camp. That experience later formed the basis of his first three published novels.

Solzhenitsyn shows how cruel the Soviet system can work, but he is fundamentally loyal to his native land. He is not especially attracted to the West, and he speaks out about the hypocrisy of well-heeled Westerners, with no threat to their personal security, speaking out against repression.

It is difficult, for anyone who has not been a writer, to understand how doggedly Solzhenitsyn must pursue truth. To write the truth, especially when the truth is bad news to government, and to risk deportation, are the lot of Alexander Solzhenitsyn. His plight — separation from his native land — is especially tragic, but in whatever country he lives, his voice will never be stifled.

Background

...while 'Gulag' survives in the West

by LARRY JAMES

MOSCOW — The drama of "The Gulag Archipelago" began six months ago with a tragedy that could have been taken straight from its pages.

A woman named Yelizaveta Voronyanskaya had been given a manuscript copy of the book for safekeeping in Leningrad.

Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn said she was picked up by the KGB secret police and interrogated around the clock for five days.

After 120 hours without sleep and subjected to brutal threats, Solzhenitsyn said, she revealed the whereabouts of the manuscript.

Then she went home and hanged herself in remorse.

Solzhenitsyn already had spirited another copy to the West, but he had not intended to publish until after his death.

His foremost concern was to protect his sources — the more than 200 prisoners and others who had volunteered him information about the underworld run by Gulag — an acronym for the state administration of labor camps.

But once the book was in KGB hands, the need for further secrecy disappeared.

After careful thought, Solzhenitsyn sent word abroad that he wanted the first two of the books (seven volumes) published in Russian first, then in other languages.

His aim apparently was to establish the primacy of his work, since the KGB has been known to plant distorted versions of Russian dissident works in the hands of Western publishers.

Within little more than four months the book was published in Paris by the YMCA Press, a small company that specializes in Russian works.

The 606-page volume, deliberately printed on thin paper to make it easier to smuggle into Russia, went on sale Dec. 28.

It was just before the big New Year's celebration in the Soviet Union.

No sooner had the celebrating died down, on Jan. 2, than the Soviet media unleashed its attack against Solzhenitsyn.

The Tass news agency opened the barrage by saying the book had no literary merit, and was a New Year's gift to the enemies of the Soviet Union.

The Soviet press campaign skirted around the contents of the book, but described Solzhenitsyn as a pro-Hitlerite, pro-Tsarist "traitor."

Even though few if any had seen the book, newspaper readers wrote to revile the Nobel laureate. Some suggested he be deported.

In his book, Solzhenitsyn raised questions which had only been whispered in restricted circles before and which would entail the rewriting of official Soviet history if accepted.

Why, for example, did so many Soviet prisoners-of-war join the ranks of Gen. Andrei Vlasov to fight against their country in World War II?

Solzhenitsyn raised the question and tried to give some answers.

Solzhenitsyn asked whether Tsarism with its thousands of prisoners was worse than Stalinism with its tens of millions of massacres, deportations and imprisonments. He dared even to challenge the official sanctity of Lenin.

Solzhenitsyn said relays of KGB agents kept his telephone ringing from dawn to midnight with everything from obscenities to death threats.

On Jan. 18, Solzhenitsyn struck back. He said the press here had distorted the contents of his book in order to turn his countrymen against him.

"Cite me the pages, you liars," he thundered.

Solzhenitsyn said his antagonizers had "dared to spit in the closed eyes of the dead" by suggesting he wrote "Gulag" for hard currency. The price was being kept low to make sure the book is within reach of all, he said, and any profits would go to the families of labor camp victims.

At the turn of the month, the press campaign tailed off. Solzhenitsyn predicted the KGB would start forcing the recanting of ex-prisoners who had volunteered information for the book.

He said the campaign against him would continue because the Soviet elite has "an animal fear of exposure."

On Feb. 3, a policeman knocked on the door of Solzhenitsyn's apartment with a summons to appear before a state prosecutor which his wife rejected.

The summons came back on Monday and the author rejected it with a written statement telling authorities to "learn how to fulfill the law before expecting citizens to obey it."

Solzhenitsyn failed to appear before the prosecutor Tuesday morning. A few hours later, seven policemen muscled into the apartment and took Solzhenitsyn away with what his wife described as a considerable degree of violence.

Almost a day later he was in West Germany, stripped of his Soviet citizenship. (UPI)

Legislative tax battle shapes up

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A partisan battle over tax relief in the spring legislative session appeared to be taking shape Tuesday after leaders of both parties unveiled differing plans to ease the burden on Illinois taxpayers.

House Minority Leader Clyde Choate, D-Anna, said he will sponsor a plan to cut the state income tax for individuals by $130 million and boost the tax on corporations by some $85 million.

House Speaker W. Robert Blair, R-Park Forest, earlier outlined a plan to abolish the user-paid utility tax and extend "circuit breaker" property tax grants to all families with incomes less than $10,000 a year. He said his plan will save taxpayers some $61.5 million a year.

GOV. DANIEL WALKER is expected to offer a third tax relief plan next month, giving lawmakers another proposal to choose from. Last year squabbling over Democratic and Republican tax relief plans prevented any tax relief measure from going through the General Assembly.

W. Robert Blair

In a speech to steelworkers meeting in Springfield, Choate called for an increase in individual exemptions from the current $1,000 per family to $1,500. He said for an average family, it would mean a "50 per cent slash in their state income tax bill."

For a family of five making $10,000 a year, Choate said, his plan would mean a savings of $62.50 per year. CHOATE also called for an increase from 4 per cent to 5 per cent in the corporate tax rate to help finance tax relief for individuals. That measure, he said, would require a constitutional amendment to change a provision that ties the two tax rates together at an 8-to-5 ratio.

"I want to do away with the special treatment corporations successfully lobbied for during the 1970 constitutional convention," Choate said. "The new constitution now protects corporations by prohibiting an increase in corporate taxes without an increase in the individual tax rate."

Choate said by "forcing corporations to pay a fairer share of the tax burden, we can finance tax relief for the people without losing the revenue we need to fund social services."

Blair, addressing a news conference, said the Republican plan calls for total abolition of the 2 per cent public utilities tax now paid by residential users. He said such a step would result in an annual saving of $41.5 million statewide and would save the average taxpayer $14.70 per year.

Ex-Dist. 59 board member seeks obscure county post

A former Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school board member is a candidate for election to a county school board so obscure that no election had been held for it two years ago.

Sharrie Hildebrandt, of 303 E. Lynnwood Ave., Arlington Heights, is one of seven candidates who will be running for two six-year terms on the Cook County Board of School Trustees March 19.

The county board of school trustees is responsible for ruling on any annexations and boundary changes proposed by existing school districts and on petitions to form new school districts within the county. In 1972 the terms of two of the seven board members expired, but no election was held for the posts because no candidates filed. The two board members agreed at that time to serve for an extra two years on the board.

This year, however, candidates include Mrs. Hildebrandt and six others running for two six-year terms and two persons running for three four-year terms on the board. The distribution of candidates means that one place on the board will remain open, unless filled by a write-in candidate.

MRS. HILDEBRANDT, who retired from the Dist. 59 board last year, said she decided to run for the office because "I do see possibilities in the job." She said she hopes the board can be activated to study questions of school district organization in Cook County and to do research on school boundaries and growth problems.

"It has been a very inactive board," she said. "It meets four times a year or on call, but they've had a difficult time getting quorum. Everyone I've talked to has been happy that someone is running for the board who will be conscientious."

The school trustees will be elected during the March 19 county primary. However, their names will appear on a separate paper ballot rather than on the voting machines, Mrs. Hildebrandt said. The posts are unpaid and nonpartisan. No more than one person can be elected to the board from each township in the county.

RUNNING FOR six year terms along with Mrs. Hildebrandt are Michael D. Rothmann of Lincolnwood; Joseph F. Tomask of Stickney; Steven D. Crowin of Skokie; Dr. Lester A. Nathan of Skokie; Blas I. Olivares of Oak Lawn, and Arthur W. Luers of LaGrange.

Running for four-year terms are Patricia C. Siebert of Evanston and Catherine Folsom of Chicago Heights.

The first six students will graduate on March 2 from the specialty internship in clinical nutrition at Lutheran General Hospital, Park Ridge.

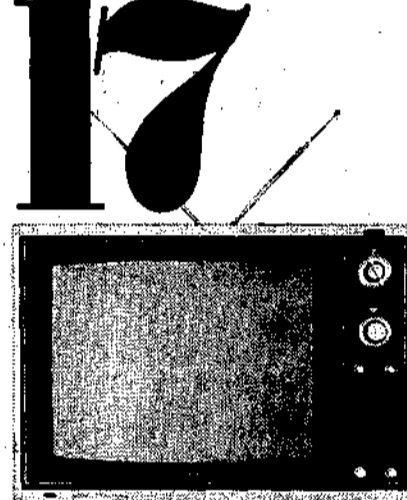

Two six-month internships are conducted each year at Lutheran General. The program is designed to help alleviate the shortage of nutrition specialists in the United States.

Enrollment is limited to six students per class to permit individualized instruction. Qualifications for this program are determined by the American Dietetic Assn. # Wrestlers battle for state spots in sectional action

by KEITH REINHARD
Wrestling Editor

The fun is over and now the serious business begins. Sectional wrestling gets underway at seven sites around the state this weekend and it's a last mighty hurdle for the nearly 700 grapplers who survived district competition last Saturday.

After this coming Saturday the list will have been pared to 168 and they will join with 24 more big winners from Chicago's tournament to contend for Class AA state championship titles and glory at Champaign's Assembly Hall March 1-2.

While district and sectional tournaments are just about the same, structurally, they differ by a mile in content. Everyone qualifies for the district meets and it isn't unusual for a weight class — or a whole meet — to turn into a laughter.

But the big chips are all in the pot now and the pennies are back in the pocket. At sectionals there are gatherings of the eight best matmen at each weight from a whole giant slice of the state. There might be one or two ringers in the bunch but any qualifier who starts approaching one of his opponents that way stands to be one of the first to move over to the sidelines.

Herald area wrestlers continue to be spread around the map. Unlike 1973 when practically everyone from North-east Illinois siphoned into Evanston's gigantic sectional, the local grapplers will be off to West Leyden, Elgin and Barrington this trip.

There are 47 of these area youngsters still in contention, including 34 Mid-Suburban League standouts, and the best from Maine's East, West and North and St. Viator. By the law of averages possibly only a dozen or so will overcome the big barrier immediately in front of them and gain a coveted berth in the state finals.

By that same law East Leyden figures to bring four, five or even half a dozen entries into the big dome at the University of Illinois two weekends from now.

SPOTLIGHT ON WRESTLING

Last weekend they were involved in one of those aforementioned laughter . . . and qualified 12 out of 12 for their upcoming sectional at West Leyden.

At Barrington the battle for team honors appears to be better balanced. Glenbrook North has the edge on the strength of eight qualifiers — several of them blue chippers — and perennially tough Waukegan can't be counted out either but big noise may come from less auspicious groups too, like Libertyville or Mundelein, or even Buffalo Grove.

At Elgin a departed conference rival could come back to haunt MSL contestants. But while Glenbard North will definitely have some say in the action, the main power is expected to lie with DeKalb, West Chicago, Naperville, Glenbard West, Downers Grove North and Addison Trail in what quite likely will evolve into the toughest sectional in Illinois for 1974.

The law of averages is great for statisticians, a boon to sportswriters and even helpful occasionally to coaches. At this time of the year though, the ingredients for success lie less and less in the coaching and more and more in the makeup of the individual wrestler.

There's still a bit of luck involved. Pure strength is certainly an asset and savvy is necessary. The biggest factor of all though is mental and emotional preparedness.

At this juncture, for any one of 672 athletes a three-bout winning streak earns a

AT WEST LEYDEN

Forest View's John Gross opens against the best at 98 — Fenton's unbeaten state finals vet Walter Dye. That should give him a good opening up through the wrestlebacks while Dye for Tony DiGuida of Ridgewood, also unbeaten, in the finals.

At 105, sectional returnees Jerry Sandman of Crown and Vito Vee of Notre Dame figure to pair off. The other bracket is wide open with Fremd's Paul Morales and Bryan Real of Maine West both in contention.

The 112 class has some toughies. Returning state qualifier Mickey Rossetti of New Trier West and Arlington's Mike Bryan are one good possible finals combination. St. Viator's Tim Marwitz looks to rule at 119 but will probably have to get past East Leyden's Bill Parkinson and Gary Feinglass of Niles North in that order.

East Leyden's Alex Riccomini is a heavy favorite at 126 with Evanston sectional veteran Jerry Whitaker a sound bet to meet him for the title. At 132, Eagle Ernie Krist can probably advance to the big showdown by getting past his opener and John Morocco of Holy Cross is a good possibility for the other side.

Ridgewood's Gary Carr easily heads up the field at 138 while 145 is a tossup.

Returning state qualifier Randy McAlister of Palatine has a nice shot but so do about seven others including recently healed Rod Holland of East Leyden, also a state finals vet.

There are some excellent candidates at 155. Look for the four district champs including Pirate Lon Marchel and Mike Schumacher of Maine North to meet in the semis.

The race at 167 is wide open with Perry Acerbi of East Leyden perhaps having a slight edge. The opening 185-pound headliner between East Leyden's Pete Froelich and Notre Dame's Al Marzano could produce the champ although neither Jim Whitfield of Glenbrook South, Paul Karg of West Leyden or Hersey's Jeff Reinhard can be ruled out.

One strong eventuality in the heavy-weight bracket is a showdown between Maine East's Ron Grant and Don Murray of East Leyden, if the latter can get past Maine West's Stan Cordts.

AT BARRINGTON

At 98 pounds Bison Bob Daulton could be in the thick of things. Look for Mike Sullivan, Carmel's only entry, to advance up one side while either Daulton or Dennis Jones of Rockford East make it on the other and Jim Dugo of Deerfield comes up through the wrestlebacks.

There are some excellent records at 105 for Grove's Jim Brough to contend with. If he can get past Woodstock's Jesse Watson, he might have a crack at the finals. At 112 teammate Rich Wilhelm might be in slightly better shape with touted Scott Shaffer of Aptioch and returning sectional qualifier Mike Ruefer of Rockford Boylan both in the other bracket.

At 119 Lonnie Parker of North Chicago, Dom Poeta of Highland Park and Jack Cotto of GBN are all sectional returnees. Poeta and Parker clash first and that winner will likely advance to a finals showdown with Cotto.

Returning state qualifier Dale Eggert of Libertyville is the class of 126. This should give Wildcat Rich Moran a shot back up through the wrestlebacks. At 132 Deerfield's Drew Meches has to be favored and at 138 the winner of a semi bout between John Trice of Zion-Benton and Leonard Simon of Rockford East could take it all.

Crystal Lake's John Dobbie has a head start on one side of the 145-pound showdown with Nick Liakos of the Spartans and sectional vet Bruce Niemi of Warren likely battling for the other finals berth. At 155 Antioch district runnerup Harold Ohlrich of Woodstock could be a sleeper.

A showcase showdown should develop for 167 honors if two undefeated grapplers and returning sectional qualifiers can get past two more hurdles. That would pit Wheeling's Ken Smith against Mundelein's Brian Willman.

At 185 two more 1973 sectional returnees — GBN's Terry Flannery and Rockford East's Joe Devries — pair off in the first round. On the other side Mustang Bill Shea has the inside track, giving 'Cat Ed Wargo a likely opportunity in the wrestleback.

State qualifier Steve Montgomery of Libertyville should breeze through heavyweight, knocking off possibly George Wojtowicz of Rockford East in the finals.

AT ELGIN

Starting off on a tough note, Larkin's sectional returnee Jeff Jarka has the edge in the upper bracket at 98 but the loaded lower half could go to Keith Hackney of Lake Park or the winner of a Mike Farina (York) versus Zane Bussler (West Chicago) lifter.

Things get worse at 105 where Schaumburg's Gary Evans can go for broke right away against sectional veteran Joe

The warfare was waged on four fronts this year and when it began the legions of men numbered over 200.

Less than one fourth of them remain now to do battle again. So it goes this year, as it has for many past seasons now that the state championship wrestling tournaments are under way.

The trail to Champaign, and the finals, commenced with district action last weekend and representatives from 17 area clubs began the ascent. For 47 of them, it is still a path of high hopes and aspirations after nailing down sectional qualifying berths at Hersey, Elgin-Larkin, Ridgewood and Wheeling.

For so many others, however, it is a road of broken dreams. Among the casualties:

Keith McCreary (Conant) 18-5, a qualifier last year, unable to even compete because of illness.

Neal Kendall (Wheeling) 19-7-1, a qualifier last year, relegated to third in a super tough weight class at Wheeling.

Bob Wahl (Palatine) 16-3-1, a qualifier last year, not recovered from an injury sufficiently to compete in the conference or district meet.

Dennis Beach (Forest View), Don Isacson (Maine East), Randy Cherwin (Prospect), all qualifiers in 1973 and all knocked off in a potent 138-pound bracket at Ridgewood.

John Loneragan (Palatine) 27-7, this year's MSL conference champ, edged in the semis at Hersey and not afforded the opportunity to come back. He also qualified in 1973.

Dave Weber (Arlington) 16-3, a top prospect at 132 injured just before the conference meet and finished for the year.

Brian Nelson (Hersey) 18-7-1, a qualifier last year, bumped out of second at Hersey by someone from the wrestlebacks. Joe Hannon (Schaumburg) 17-3-3, another MSL conference champ, upset in the first round at Elgin-Larkin.

Mike Petran (Forest View) 17-7, also a conference champ, turned back twice in a strong heavyweight bracket at Ridgewood.

There were others to be sure . . . top notch wrestlers with good records and other respectable credentials. For many of them there is always next year. Just about all of the above are seniors though who will not be afforded another chance.

On a brighter note there were the 47 matmen from the Herald area who did survive the rugged district grind. 22 of them by claiming championship honors.

Some were repeaters, others were expected, still others were surprises. Here's how they did it, by tournament:

AT HERSEY

The Huskies, with some unexpectedly dazzling performances from Mark Furlong and Eric Strutz, outdistanced seven other squads at their own tournament, qualifying five en route.

Furlong, at 138, turned back Arlington's top notch entry John Schroeder 8-5 in the semis and then polished off Dundee's Low Puls, who had previously upset Loneragan. Loneragan wrestled back to third but could advance no further.

Strutz, a short time later, pulled off a stunning 11-4 triumph over Palatine's Randy McAlister in the 145 finals. A state qualifier last year, McAlister had lost only twice this season.

Another potent performance was turned in by St. Viator's John Breen at 167, rebounding from an opening loss to eventual champ Tom Bullen of Fremd, he worked his way through the wrestlebacks to nose out Hersey's Nelson

Bryan eased out a 6-5 decision here and went on to win the championship at this weight while Carlstrom wrestled back for third.

BACK BERNER. Maine West's Paul Berner rides out Larry Burkhardt of Prospect on route to a 6-0 semifinal decision at Ridgewood's district tournament Saturday. Berner won again later in the day to capture the 145-pound title and a sectional berth.

Late afternoon, early evening best for fishing through ice

Snow conditions in Wisconsin are superb for downhill and cross country skiers and good to excellent for snowmobilers. But for ice fishermen, things are much short of spectacular.

There are some bright spots around, however. Although fishing pressure has been light, success in southern and southeast Wisconsin has been good. The best catches of panfish are coming from Phantom and Pewaukee lakes in Waukesha County and from Big Cedar Lake in Washington County. Bluegills are being caught in Lake Marie in Kenosha County and walleyes are beginning to pick up again in Okauchee Lake and Pike Lake.

Best fishing through the ice is in the late afternoon and early evening, just before dark. Live bait fishermen in Powers Lake are taking some good northern pike. Several large northerns were also taken out of Starkey's Bay in Racine County on dead smelt.

Best perch fishing is in Wind Lake, but even though the fishing is good, the fish are small and it takes a bucket-full to make much of a meal.

Trout fishing has been fair to good along the Wisconsin and northern Illinois shoreline. Kenosha Harbor has been particularly productive. Open water fishermen at Commonwealth Edison's fishing bridge in Waukegan are taking small to medium-sized fish daily.

North and inland, walleye fishing is slow on Lake Winnebago, but it's definitely picking up along the west shore of the lake where some limits have been taken. A few lake trout have been caught in Big Green Lake with minnows as bait and some northerns have been taken on the cutoff in the Wisconsin Chain of Lakes in Waupaca County. The Upper Chain of Lakes and White Lake, in that same area, are both producing walleyes.

Snowmobiling is very good throughout Wisconsin, except that many of the lakes are no longer safe. Still, there are miles and miles of groomed, safe, marked trails for the machines, providing you can get the gasoline to get out of Illinois.

THE DEPARTMENT of Natural Resources Energy Information Center (Wisconsin), reports that there is a good supply of gasoline in Wisconsin for the weekend, but advises travelers to do some planning, particularly if they will be driving late Saturday afternoon or Sunday. Travelers should contact the activity or accommodation at their destination and have a turn around supply of gasoline guaranteed them.

The note also states that travelers who will need to fill their tanks more than once should contact the nearest Wisconsin Tourist Information Center for a list of the stations open near their midpoint fueling area.

ANOTHER "BIGGIE," is the Snow World Series at Eagle River, Feb. 22, 23, 24, which is offering $29,000 in prize money to snowmobile racing drivers. This is the big race for the U.S. Snowmobile Association high point champions with more than 700 champion drivers representing associations from throughout the nation competing.

The World Series is unique in that it is a traveling competition. It has been held in Rhinelander, Ironwood, Mich., Boonville, N.Y., and Malone, N.Y. This weekend it will be at the Eagle River Pleasure Island Track, recent site of the World Championships. Racing begins at 11 a.m. Friday, 10 a.m. Saturday and the finals at 10 a.m. Sunday.

Sunday afternoon, Snopro races will be held, matching the nation's top drivers in factory-sponsored machines. Among the professionals will be Gilles Villeneuve, riding an Alouette. Villeneuve was the 1974 world champion in the January races at Eagle River. Other champions present will be Charley Lofton on the Arctic Cat team, plus drivers from Polaris, Kohler, Kalamazoo, Yamaha and Suzuki.

OTHER COMING EVENTS: "Hobby Night" for members and guests of Wall-eyes Unlimited at the Antioch Country Club south of Antioch on Route 59. Demonstrations will be given on rod-making, jig tying, plastic worm making, taxidermy, locator interpretation, use of the balsa minnow and some tips on nitecrawlers and their conditioning. Visitors and newcomers are welcome. For more information, try Bob Johnson at 815-385-6277.

THE 1974 MIDWEST Open is set for Saturday, April 27 and Sunday, April 28 this year. An annual event, the Midwest pits anglers against each other in two-man teams, battling for the minimum $2,000 purse offered, plus trophies. Team entry fee will be $50. Anglers fish for bass, walleyes and northern pike in the Illinois Chain of Lakes. More information: Bob Lang's Fishing Center, 395-9887 on Lake Marie.

THE BASS FISHING professionals wound up their first event for the 1974 season on the St. Johns River in Florida with Billy Westmoreland taking down the $4,140 top prize with 49 lbs., 2 ozs. of largemouth bass. Fishing out of the tournament launching ramp at Trail Boss Campgrounds in Welaka, Westmoreland facetiously declared that he had the energy crisis in mind, because he didn't fish more than two miles from "home."

The 36-year-old Dale Hollow marina owner and fishing bachelor noted that high winds and bitter cold had scattered the fish in the gin-clear waters, so he merely searched them out in the shoreline weed beds while the other pros were zooming all over the Rodman pool in their hotrod bass boats.

Worth noting, too, the Bass Anglers Sportsman's Society, sponsor of the professional bass fishing circuit, has finally gathered its senses and established mandatory horsepower limits for competition bass boats. The regulation will become effective for the 1975 season.

Since the development of the new, super equipped and trimly designed bass boats, fishermen have been rigging them with bigger and bigger outboard power, until they have become super fast, but, also, super dangerous. Next year, anglers in BASS contests will be required to conform to the horsepower capacity plate on the craft, as regulated by the U.S. Coast Guard.

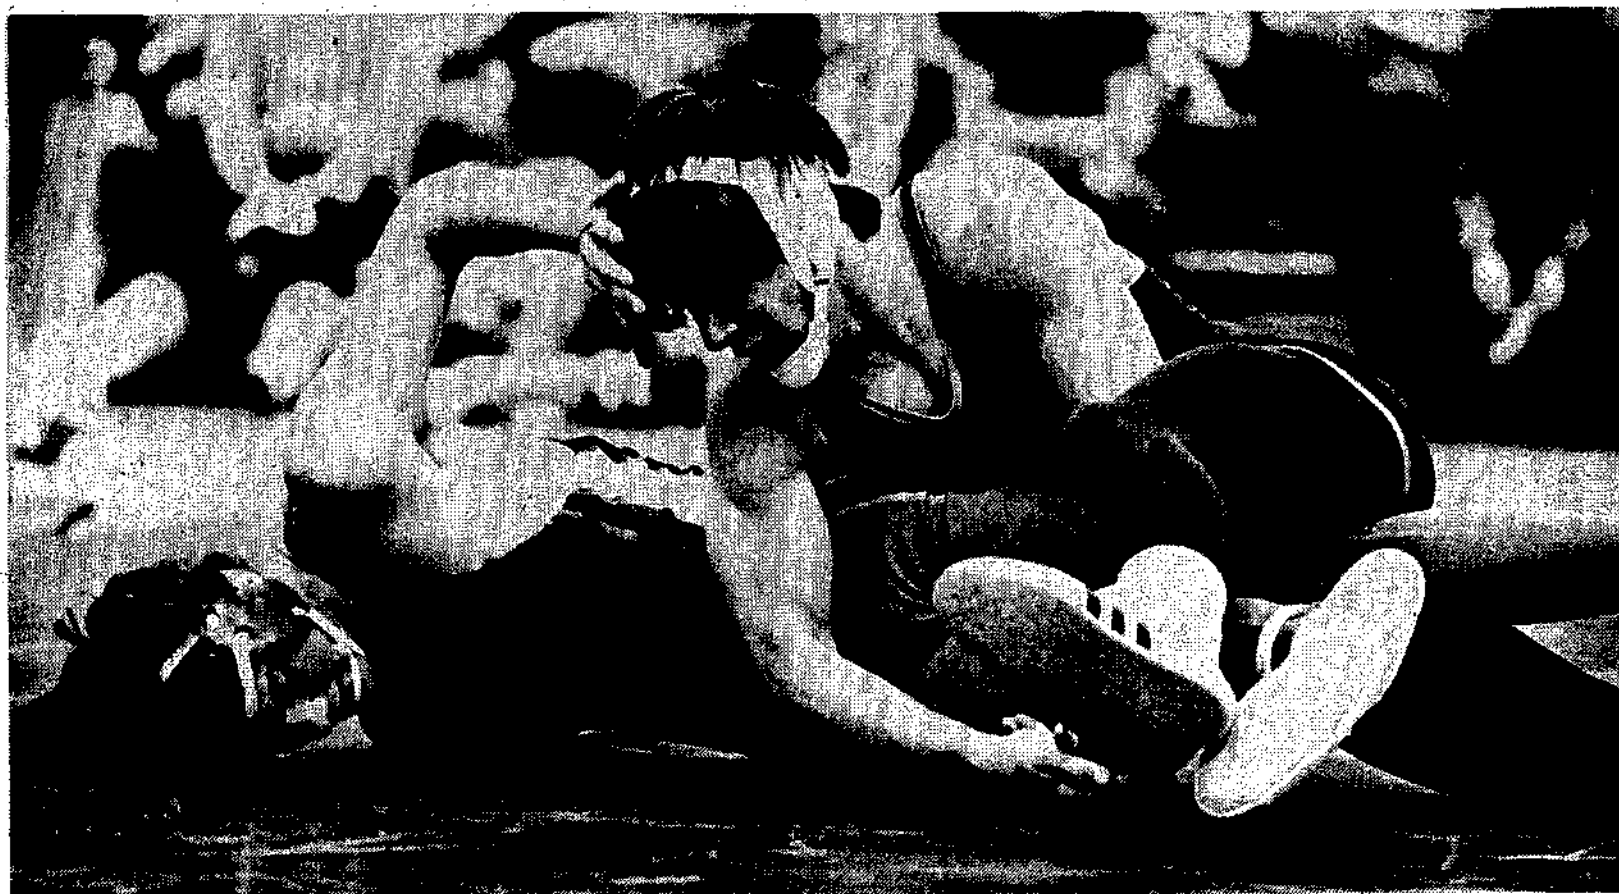

The professional tournament trail has done much to popularize the unique bass boats, but it has also done equally as much to encourage overpowering fishing boats. Believing that the angler who reaches the "honey hole" first, is likeliest to win the big money, contestants have been going to bigger and bigger engines. Most competitive rigs, these days, sport a 150 h.p. outboard at their stern, and one tends to feel that if the marine manufacturers had a 200 h.p. outboard, that someone would hang it on his boat. As BASS president Ray Scott put it, "Most of our rigs are just accidents, looking for some place to happen."

Generally, the 16- to 18-foot bass boats, are built for 85 h.p. to 115 h.p. limits. Besides restricting engines to safe power ranges, BASS will also require all boats in national tournaments to be rigged with a "kill switch" that cuts off the engine should the driver leave the driver's seat for any reason. Boats using stick steering, with the operator perched high at the bow will be restricted to 33 h.p.

Other goal scorers for the Cardinals were Ron Pretlac, Ian Lutes, Vic Ollikainen, Don Cesario and Ron Byrne. On Sunday, the game was an even match for the first twenty minutes only, with Bud Kolbrener for St. Louis and Ted Kaminski for Chicago turning back all shots on goal. Chicago turned on the scoring power to hit for two markers in the middle period and seven more in the final frame to fashion the easy 9-0 rout. Vic Ollikainen led the scoring parade with a three-goal hat trick. Other goals were credited to Ron Byrne, who notched two, and Russ Streeter, Vic Ollikainen, Gene Stoney and the irrepressible Shellenberger.

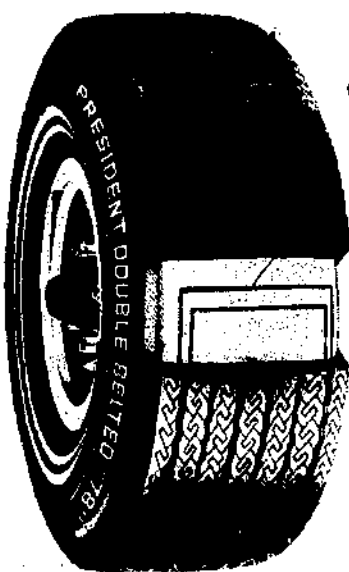

The Cardinals are idle at Ramhurst until March 2 and 3 when they meet the Ann Arbor Generals. The Saturday game begins at 7:30 p.m. and the Sunday meeting at 2:30 p.m. Advance tickets for adults, students and children are on sale at the arena box office daily, with an attractive discount for pre-game purchases.

Saturday's contest was close throughout, despite the 7-3 score. It wasn't until into the third period that Chicago moved comfortably in front. Chuck Shellenberger — the team's runaway leading goal scorer with 33 going into the game — notched two more goals and added two

STRUTZING ALONG. Eric Strutz of Hersey locks up Dundee's Ron Jones in their semifinal district match at 145. Strutz won 7-1 and later upset Palatine's Randy McAlister 11-4 in the title tilt at the Huskie-hosted district tournament Saturday.

Chicago Cards take two from St. Louis Saints

Chicago's prolific Cardinals posted two more wins this weekend at Ramhurst Twin Ice Arena in Mount Prospect to extend their league-leading North American Hockey Association record to 23 wins against no losses and two ties.

Victimized by scores of 7-3 and 9-0 were the St. Louis Saints — fortified to no avail by All Star players from the Peoria Blades and the Chicago Wildcats.

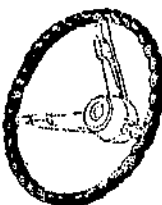

It would be hard to choose a scoring hero for the weekend's work as five players accounted for 25 points of the team's total 38 points resulting from 16 goals and 22 assists. Known as a fast-skating and hard-shooting group, the Chicagoans lived up to the image by managing a shooting-gallery total of 98 shots on goal against a meager-by-comparison total of 52 for the visitors in the two games.

Saturday's contest was close throughout, despite the 7-3 score. It wasn't until into the third period that Chicago moved comfortably in front. Chuck Shellenberger — the team's runaway leading goal scorer with 33 going into the game — notched two more goals and added two

Sullivan wins seven; men's race tightens

by GENE KIRKHAM

Ten Pin Bowl hosted the Paddock Classic and as usual somebody figured out a way to tighten up the standings.

At the moment two teams are tied for first place with the sixth place team only six points out.

Sullivan Pontiac was the big reason the league is getting crowded at the top as they won three close games and the series over Des Plaines Ace Hardware for the only seven point sweep of the night.

Sullivan rolled 931, 952 and 976 for a 2859 series as Des Plaines stayed in every game with 922, 947, and 942 for 2811. Bob Glaser led Sullivan with 188, 196, and 232 for a 616 series as Bill Smith added 222, 213, and 174 for 609.

For Des Plaines Ace Hardware, Barry Stjernberg rolled 633 with games of 194, 235, and 204.

Formco Metals moved into a tie for first place as they defeated Nameless Five five of seven points. Formco won the first two games with 873 and 970 while Nameless Five won the final game with 837 as Formco took the series point with 2749.

Formco was led by Mike Heffner's 587 while Ron Garr of Nameless Five had 178, 221, and 221 for a 620 series.

Gaere Oil Company won four of seven points over Krole Realty to stay in a tie for first place.

Gaere won the first two games with 974, and 932 as Krole Realty found the range for a 1025 game to win the game and the series point 2714 to 2710. Al Parkhurst was the leader for Krole Realty as he rolled 186, 200, and 228 for a 614 series while Al Haase led Gaere Oil with a 597 series.

Commercial Embroidery won five of seven points over Hoffman Lanes winning the second and third games with 908, and 924 and the series point by 10 pins 2731 to 2721.

Hoffman won the first game with 936.

Randy Aubert of Hoffman Lanes topped the league in this night's individual scoring with a fine 658 series as he rolled games of 244, 211, and 203. Ron Garlisch led Commercial with games of 227, 211, and 183 for a 621 series.

RUGGED-CHECKING Joe Laino of Triton takes a Harper Hawk out of the play, as Kevin Bowens controls the puck for the Hawks in last Saturday's hockey action at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex. Harper got two goals from Steve Bird and one each from Paul Buck and Dave Connelly to defend the Warriors, 4-3, extending its record to 9-1 and strengthening its bid for a full varsity hockey program.

Decision ahead on Harper hockey

by ART MUGALIAN

Harper hockey coach Bob Downing will go out on a limb to predict big things for his team.

"Next year, this area is going to see a junior college hockey team that will rival the powerhouses in Minnesota," the young student coach promised, "if we get varsity status like we were promised."

On Feb. 28, the Harper student senate will hear a motion designed to elevate the hockey team to permanent varsity standing. The proposal has been made before, but never in the past has the hockey enthusiasm been so great at Harper.

"We have to put it all together at once," Downing said. "The student senate needs to approve it. The athletic department supports us. The school itself is behind us, and the administration is backing us. We just have to put it all together."

On the ice, the Harper Hawks already have the pieces in the right places. Downing's squad improved its record to 9-1 with a 4-3 victory over Triton College Saturday at the Rolling Meadows Sports Complex.

"We don't have as much to work with as we'd want," Downing noted, "but when you've got 18 guys like this, you really can't lose."

The Hawks jumped out to a quick 3-1 first period lead Saturday on goals by Dave Connelly, Paul Buck, and Steve Bird, but Triton scored twice in the second period to tie the game.

"Sometimes that's a real problem," the coach said. "We get ahead and we let up. But, fundamentally, you couldn't ask for more."

The teams battled through most of the third period looking for the chance to score the winner. Tim Paulsen, in goal for the first time for Harper, made several crucial saves, but the outstanding performance was turned in by the Triton goalie, Darrell Ford, who stopped Buck, Bird, and Dennis Soboj on point-blank shots. Another time, Ford ranged far out of his crease on a breakaway by Connelly, sweeping the puck off the stick of the charging Hawk.

But with five and a half minutes to play, Bird came away from a center-ice scramble with the puck on his stick, and he headed straight for Ford. The big Harper forward faked once to his right, drew the puck to the left, and shoved it past the outmaneuvered Triton goalie.

Downing watched all this action from his sideline vantage point, standing with hands spread wide on the railing in front of him. Wearing a brown corduroy coat and a full, black beard, he looks like almost anything but a hockey coach. When he yells instructions and encouragement to his team, though, he exudes the confidence and leadership inherent in a good coach.

"If you were to just stand out there, it would be impossible to control the game," Downing offered. "But I've been very fortunate in having kids who let me tell them what to do. They take my word for it — they don't question my decisions."

"It can make a difference in the game," the coach continued. "For instance, tonight, when I was juggling the team in order to get the best combination on the ice. They don't want to come out of the game, but they don't question it."

The Harper hockey program has come a long way in just a couple years, but it can come a lot further. Technically, hockey is still a club sport at Harper, even though the Hawks have been playing a varsity schedule. The players themselves have been partly responsible for funding the team this year.

But if Downing and his Hawks get the nod from the student senate to go ahead with a varsity program, next season could be a very interesting one.

"This is a very young team," said the coach, who is only 21. "Most of them will be coming back — almost all of them are in their first year at Harper."

A lot of people will be awaiting the results of the faceoff before the Harper student senate on the last day of February.

Harper claims No. 1 hockey rank after win

How does a hockey team get to be No. 1?

Just beat the No. 1 team, that's how.

The Harper Hawks can claim the unofficial title of top hockey team in the state's junior college rankings after winning, 4-3, over the College of DuPage, previously rated the No. 1 squad in Illinois.

The Hawks journeyed to Lisle Sunday afternoon for a rematch with the Chaparrals, who beat Harper earlier in the season. Right from the start, Bob Downing's Hawks were at a disadvantage — they arrived a half hour late for the game and were penalized for it.

The Chaps' Carmen Furio scored an immediate power play goal at :25 of the first period, and the Hawks had to fight from behind at the outset.

Second period goals by Tom Langer and Kevin Bowens gave the Hawks a temporary lead, only to be reversed on a pair of markers by DuPage's Jeff Kennedy and Randy Froelich.

But Langer's seventh goal of the year tied the score and Paul Buck won the game with his 15th goal of the campaign.

Dave Connelly and Dennis Soboj each had two assists for the Hawks, and Buck and Bowens had one apiece. Harper goalie Mark Caslin stopped 29 shots.

Including a victory over the Loyola junior varsity team, the Harper Hawks are 10-1 on the season.

Three sweeps; Striking Lanes in lead

by GENE KIRKHAM

Hosted by Fair Lanes Rolling Meadows Bowl, the Paddock Women's Classic Traveling League again saw the lead change hands as three teams won seven points.

Striking Lanes regained first place by defeating Sullivan Pontiac in a seven point sweep as they won with games of 836, 900, and 884 for a 2620 series.

St. Cloud downs Nordics

The first two road games of a three-game trip to Minnesota went against the Chicago Nordics as they fell to the St. Cloud Jr. Blues Saturday and Sunday 5-3 and 8-3 in Midwest Jr. A Hockey League action.

Saturday night's game was a "squeaker" according to Coach Ken Wharram, who expressed satisfaction with his team's last period effort. Chicago trailed 4-1 at the start of the third period and rallied to narrow the gap to 4-3. When the Nordics goalie, West Pierce, left the net unattended in the game's waning moments in favor of a sixth attacker, the Blues managed to slide the puck into the empty goal.

Chicago's scores were by Brano Stankovsky, assisted by Mike Stoltzner, and by Scott Cariveau — unassisted — and by Frank Nardella, with the help of Bob Cademartori and Mark Pellegrini.

Thirty penalties marked Sunday's rough contest as both teams played a physical, bruising game. Bill Milner worked the nets for Chicago and had 43 shots leveled at home to Chicago's 29. Mark Pellegrini scored for the Nordics, assisted by George Ciran, as did Scott Cariveau, assisted by Mike Stoltzner, and Bob Cademartori, aided by Frank Nardella and Cariveau.

The Nordics return to Chicago after a Monday night game against the Minneapolis Jr. Stars in Bloomington to play four games in five days at Randhurst Twin Ice Arena in Mount Prospect. Their opponents on Saturday and Sunday are the league's penalty leaders and second-place team, the St. Paul Vulcans. On Tuesday, Feb. 26, and Wednesday, Feb. 27, they meet the Minneapolis aggregation. All games begin at 7:30 p.m., except Sunday's contest which is an afternoon affair at 2:30.

WGN to televise state cage tourney March 22-23

Five Chicago area high schools will be represented in Champaign March 22-23 when eight of the biggest and the best in the state send their teams to compete in the annual Class AA Illinois High School Association basketball tournament.

Even if you can't be on hand to see all the action and excitement firsthand, you can catch it on television. Harry Fitzhugh, executive secretary of the IHSA, announced today that Illinois Bell and Western Electric will co-sponsor TV coverage of the tournament over WGN (Channel 9). The games will be broadcast live and in color from the University of Illinois Assembly Hall.

This marks the 67th consecutive year of the IHSA basketball tournament. And, as it has been for the past two years, the tournament will be divided into two parts: the Class A tournament on March 15-16 for the 463 schools with enrollments of 750 or less; and the Class AA the following weekend when the Chicago Public League champion will meet finalists from the 241 schools with more than 750 students. (In the Class AA division, the Chicago Public League champion and four Chicago area schools will be guaranteed berths in the quarter-final rounds to be played in Champaign, March 22.)

WGN coverage of the Class AA tournament will begin with the two quarter-final games at noon Friday. Illinois Bell-Western Electric sponsorship of the tournament will start with the quarter-final round Friday evening at 7 p.m. and continue through Saturday's games. The semi-final round will be broadcast at noon Saturday, and starting at 7 p.m., the third-place and championship games will be aired.

Nine other stations will also telecast the Saturday Class AA games: WCIA (Channels 3 and 49) in Champaign; WICD (Channel 15) in Danville; WSLI (Channel 3) in Harrisburg; WRAU (Channel 19) in Peoria; WGEM (Channel 10) in Quincy; WCEE (Channel 23) in Rockford; WHBF (Channel 4) in Rock Island; KDNL (Channel 30) in St. Louis; and WICS (Channel 20) in Springfield.

Tom Kelly will return for the 15th year to head up the broadcast team. He'll be joined this year by Floyd Brown of WGN Chicago.

This is the 23rd consecutive year Illinois Bell has sponsored the telecast, and the ninth for Western Electric, the manufacturing and supply arm of the Bell System.

KURT'S BUCKET. Forest View standout Kurt Maaland shakes off the defensive pressure of Prospect's Mike Bzdelik (25) to drop in two of his 21 points in Falcons' impressive 68-56 win. Maaland was incorrectly credited with only 17 points in Monday's Herald, but he hit for eight baskets and five three throws.

Indoor track continues; Vikings, 'Cats win duels

by ART MUGALIAN
Track and Field Editor

WHAT SEEMS LIKE an epidemic outbreak of influenza has been decimating area high school athletic teams for the past several weeks, but the plague of upset tummies didn't stop the Fremd indoor track squad from registering its best meet performance to date.

Pat Brogan's trackmen buried Deerfield in a dual contest, 76-32, Saturday, capturing 11 first place finishes and six seconds.

"We had a lot of kids home with the flu bug and so did Deerfield," the Viking coach said, but his healthy boys were feeling fine, evidently.

Jeff Brisson and Wilson Fieldhouse paced the Vikings in the running events. Brisson took a first place in the 50-yard dash with a time of :05.6 and another first in the 440 with an exceptionally good indoor clocking of :53.4. He also led the eight-lap relay team to a top finish in 2:56.2. The other members of the team were Jeff Oversen, Dan Robinson, and Dave Wickum.

Fieldhouse ran first in the two-mile run (10:17.2) and he finished second in the 880 (2:12.2) behind Fremd's Dave Scott, who clocked in at 2:10.8. Scott also grabbed first spot in the mile with a 4:57.5 on the tough indoor circuit.

The Vikings' Steve Whitel took a first place in the 50-yard high hurdles with a :08.9 and a second in the 50-yard lows with :06.8. Steve Rohrer finished right behind Whitel in both events for Fremd with times of :07.9 and :07.2. Brogan's four-lap relay team was also victorious — Oversen, Robinson, Ted Ake and Dan Beyer ran the event in 1:20.2.

Rounding out the win for the Vikings were a long jump first for Oversen (19-5 1/4), a first in the shot put for Rich Sharp (45-1 1/4), and a top pole vault by Randy Gray (12-0). John Gurney took a second place in the shot (44-1 1/4) and Mike Mueller pole vaulted 11-6 for a runner-up spot in that event.

SCHAUMBURG'S TRACK team opened its season with a pair of second place finishes in a triangular meet Thursday and a quad on Saturday. First, the Saxons scored 48 points to Crown's 59 and Glenbard North's 30, then they were runners-up with 50 to Niles West's creditable 104. Schaumburg headed Rolling Meadows with 31 and Taft with 27.

"It was a good start for us," Saxon coach Dennis Garber noted. "It was our first meet — the other teams had already opened up."

Schaumburg's outstanding distance runner, Arnold Jackson, was out of town Saturday, but on Thursday he picked up where he left off last season. Jackson won the mile and the two-mile with times of 4:36 and 9:47.1. In each race, the Saxons' Mike Palmer finished third (4:34.7 and 10:31).

But leading the Schaumburg trackmen was Ed Martin, who took firsts in the 60-yard high hurdles (:07.8), the long jump twice (19-11 1/4 and 19-7 3/4), the triple jump (39-7 1/4), and the 50-yard lows (:06.4).

Bruce Mahlig won the pole vaulting event in both meets for Schaumburg, once with a jump of 13-6 and once at 12-0. On Thursday, the Saxons' Steve Kropke finished second with a vault of 11-6. Mark Hoerich took first for Schaumburg in the 880 on Thursday with a 2:06, and a third on Saturday with a 2:05.5 clocking.

Dave Wodek took a third and a second in the shot put with heaves of 45-2 and 45-5 1/4. On Saturday, the Saxons' 12-lap relay team finished second with a time of 4:14.4. The runners were Hoerich, Frank Lipko, Jim Sunberg, and Joe Baseo. Lipko also finished third on Thursday in the 440-yard dash (:58.9), and Roger Biver placed third for Schaumburg with a :06.0 in the 50-yard dash. On Saturday, Scott Mielke high jumped 5-4, good for third spot.

ROLLING MEADOWS COACH Joe Vitton was pleased with his team's showing Saturday. "It wasn't bad," he said. "The kids are coming along okay. We're getting points from the guys who can score."

The only first place finish for the Mustangs was turned in by John Sloan, who captured the shot put event with a toss of 54-11. Jim Hupp ran the 440 in :57.2, good for second place, and Mark Harris took third in the pole vault at 12-0. Jeff Ramas ran the 60-yard highs in :07.1 for a third spot, and Greg Bowen and Harris finished two-three in the 50-yard dash with times of :05.7 and :06.0. Tom Donlon took third in the shot with a throw of 42-11 3/4.

PRIOR TO THE START of Wheeling's indoor season, head coach Jim Nagel had said that, despite the absence of any really outstanding individual talent, his team would score just as many points as last year.

Nagel was right — at least in so far as the season opener is concerned. The Wildcats topped Glenbrook South, 76-43, running up nine first place finishes and sweeping three long distance races.

August Zicarelli captured first place in the 880 (2:07.5), Steve Erikson took second (2:15.4), and Jim Murphy got third (2:15.5). Zicarelli grabbed first in the mile run with a 5:01.6, Rich Reese was second with 5:02.3, and Erikson took third with 5:06.3. In the two-mile event, Reese ran first with a 10:28.2 clocking, Bruce Messinger was second at 10:43.7, and John Messinger came in third with 10:50.6.

Art Subrin notched first place finishes in the 50-yard dash (:05.7) and the long jump (18-7 1/2). He also teamed with Ken May, Bill Frank, and Pete Piet to capture a first in the four-lap relay with a time of 1:11.8.

John Lortz set a new school record of 6-2 in the high jump, taking first spot, and Jim Lemke won the pole vault competition with a mark of 10-6. Boris Kusyk led the field with a triple jump of 36-7 1/4 and Piet was second with 36-7.

Lemke was second in the 50-yard highs (:07.2) and May was third (:07.6). Lemke also took a third in the 440 (:58.7) behind the 'Cats' Mark Dunsmore (:57.9), who came in second, and May got a second in the 50-yard lows (:06.8) just ahead of Frank (:06.9).

Erikson grabbed a third place spot in the long jump with a leap of 17-4 1/4. Randy Gruber took a third for Wheeling in the shot put at 44-10 1/4, and Greg Benaventi finished third in the pole vault with a jump of 10 feet.

ELK GROVE'S TRACK start resulted in a 89-29 loss to Addison Trail, but coach Jim Wendler is cautiously optimistic. "It might not look too bright right now," he said, "but we've got a decent group of freshmen and sophomores coming in, and when we get some of the basketball players, we'll do alright."

Brian Walker paced the Grenadiers with a first spot in the long jump (19-4 1/4), a second in the pole vault (12-4), and a third in the triple jump (34-9 1/4). Dave King of the Greens took the 60-yard low hurdles with a :07.7 clocking, and Elk Grove's 12-lap relay team — Jim Raetzman, Tom Roberts, John Faust and John Willard — won with a time of 4:21.8.

Raetzman grabbed a second place spot in the 440 (:56.8), and Willard took a third in the 440 (:58.3) and a second in the 50-yard dash (:05.8). Tom Wentzle finished third in the two-mile run with 13:05, Tibor Nagy placed third in the mile at 5:22.2, and Larry Mitsch pole vaulted 10-8, good for a third spot in that event.

Personal appearance

Grooming reveals what you think of yourself

by GENIE CAMPBELL

"A little powder, a little paint . . . makes a woman what she ain't" was one patient's quick retort to an invitation to join a good grooming program at Elgin State Hospital.

Poke fun as some people might, personal appearance is very revealing.

The success of plastic surgery, society's admiration for the slender, youthful body and a demand for all kinds of skin softening, blemish hiding, beautifying cosmetics, all suggest that physical attractiveness and interpersonal relationships do have much in common.

Putting your best face forward or choosing not to (either action is highly indicative) is an important form of communication, psychiatrists agree. It often reflects one's general well-being, self-worth and even choice in friends.

"AN INTEGRAL PART of a person's psychological assessment is his personal appearance . . . whether or not, for instance, he is well groomed or poorly groomed," said Dr. Gary Almy, a psychiatrist at Forest Hospital, Des Plaines.

"A deterioration in personal appearance can indicate psychosomatic disorders. One facet of it is self-neglect, a loss of interest in one's worth," said Dr. R. Buckland Thomas, director of the mental health unit at Alexian Brothers Medical Center.

Dr. Almy emphasized, however, that a person is appraised individually "according to his environment and culture."

Often a person will adopt a certain manner of dress and style to belong to his peer group. Or in some instances, Dr. Almy pointed out, such as the adolescent who dresses to break all rules of conservatism, an individual will indicate with which peer group he doesn't care to be associated.

PRISONS AND mental institutions are now utilizing charm programs as one segment of a total rehabilitative program to help inmates and patients improve their self-images.

"Helping an individual realize he can look like other people improves his self-worth," continued Dr. Almy.

"Self-Esteem Through Femininity," a 10-week session of classes in posture, good manners, skin care, feminine hygiene and wardrobe that was first instituted for testing at the Illinois State Reformatory for Women in Dwight four years ago, is now being utilized at 60 prisons across the country.

"If they look better, they are going to feel better," said Susan B. Harris, who helped develop the feminine development program sponsored by Correctional Programs, an arm of the W. Clement and Jessie V. Stone Foundation.

"WE ALSO DISCUSS attitudes and personality and include role playing in connection with job seeking," continued Miss Harris.

"We attempt to work from the outside

Physical attractiveness helps to enhance one's self-image.

in, concentrating on an effective non-threatening manner."

Statistics show that female inmates who enroll in the charm program have a much better attitude. They are friendlier and more willing to cooperate. The return rate of all women released from Dwight has been drastically reduced, Miss Harris said.

Fashion shows are often included as a graduation exercise and some prisons have introduced body dynamic programs in providing further incentive for women to improve their appearance.

MOTIVATING incarcerated individuals to take more pride in their general appearance so when they do return to society they are more readily accepted is an idea being carried over into mental institutions where there is today a greater emphasis on allowing patients to take a more active personal interest in their own good grooming. Independence is stressed.

A bowl type haircut, nicknamed the "bughouse bob," that was automatically given to the majority of mental patients was a dehumanizing procedure in the past. Now at Elgin State Hospital there is a beauty salon and all female patients are allowed at least one appointment a week.

Laundromats have been installed on the campus so patients may care for their own clothes. No longer do garments have to be prominently marked with name and address.

Modern beauty aids, such as hot combs, rollers and makeup, are available for the patients to use.

"The image of themselves is greatly improved and this helps to build up self-confidence," said one ward employee. "It also makes other people take notice."

PRICE IN ONE'S appearance is often what prompts a woman to go out and buy a new dress or have her hair cut and set after experiencing a disappointment or suffering a personal setback, what might be considered a mild depression.

But what is more important than the material reward is playing an active role.

"She is showing she is taking control, taking decisive action and proving yes. I can handle that after all, I can still do something that pleases me," said Dr. Almy.

"It is easier for women to use those tactics to perk themselves up, though it is becoming much more acceptable for men too. In the past they had to turn instead to some he-man outlet."

Going out to hit golf balls or strenuously work out are two examples cited by Dr. Almy.

"BUT WITH THE LIBERATION of stereotype roles, women can now turn to more physical and mechanical means of release," he continued, "as there is also a lessening emphasis on women's physical appearance."

"Beauty used to be an exclusive kind of word. Today it is hard to define. Stress and tension have been reduced on women for there are now other ways to achieve feelings of well-being. It is easier to be considered beautiful. The word today includes personality, what a person does and how he relates."

And how has fashion affected the individual, particularly with today's more open attitude that anything goes?

"I really don't think western culture has changed that much over time. While there is more choice, fashion is still just as greatly emphasized," said Dr. Almy.

"THOUGH THERE is more of an emphasis on individual freedom, one doesn't see it exercised. People still follow what fashion dictates," added Dr. Thomas.

Crisis reaction

Researcher predicts more luxury spending

Diamonds are a crisis victim's best friend.

That's the way a man who's made a profitable career of studying human motivation looks at the way American consumers will react to the current economic crisis. He doesn't see us tightening our belts at all.

Rather, we'll head for the luxury products because as humans we "overreact, overcompensate."

"The diamond, jewelry, watch and expensive gift industry would be the ones that I would be betting on," says Dr. Ernest Dichter. "People at times such as these look for solid, lasting value."

"Do not be surprised, therefore, if the luxury market in America does not soften . . ."

The consumer, he believes, will look for more self-enjoyment, the "desire to squeeze more fun out of life will prevail . . ."

"During the Second World War," Dichter continues, "women used more cosmetics than ever before. Now we are going to dress in a more colorful fashion to cover up the grayness of economic gloom. Colorful ties, suits, shoes and other wearing apparel will become desirable."

"GOURMET FOODS, interest in art, colorful products, et cetera, will represent new trends."

Dichter's forecast is in the current publication "Findings," a regular look at consumer reactions, published by his Institute for Motivational Research, Inc.,

Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y.

Dichter says, "It is typical for Americans not to wallow too long in the classic role of suffering victims."

"Americans get mad and then if they feel that no help may be forthcoming from father-figures, such as government, they will decide to solve some of the problems themselves."

Here, he says, is where the industrialist and business leader will have entirely new opportunities. New services will have to be provided . . . to help people cope with the new conditions of life, such as "diagnostic centers for living."

"A plethora of new transportation ideas will have to be developed such as supermarket delivery of purchases . . . car pooling, and lower mass transit fares."

HE SUGGESTS that transit fares may have to be eliminated altogether.

As inflation increases, consumers become more demanding.

"We have found," says Dichter, "that the housewife revolts when she must pay more for exactly the same thing. She is less annoyed, however, if she finds that the manufacturer or package designer has shown that he is willing to give her more for the additional money she has paid."

"We shall be less willing to accept bargains in a bargain basement atmosphere." We will not accept the "lack of consideration on the part of many stores and industries."

Suburban Living

ESPECIALLY FOR THE FAMILY

Speaking of . . .

The progress of women: jobs

by KAY MARSH
(First of two parts)

Though commentators haven't elaborated much on it, it is significant that President Nixon, in January of this year, proclaimed 1975 as Women's Year in the United States. He said, "This administration is committed to providing an opportunity for women to participate on an equal basis with men in our national life."

Pledging support for the Equal Rights Amendment, he also said, "We are moving vigorously to ensure full equal employment opportunity for women in the federal service, and we are enforcing the law requiring similar efforts in business and institutions which receive federal contracts or assistance."

Just how much progress have women made in this past year? Oh, it's easy to find all kinds of "firsts" in recent months. It's encouraging to read, for instance, that just last month Deborah Doane became the first woman to enroll in the 30-year history of the Maine Maritime Academy, and that Kim Brown became the first woman floor trader in the 91-year history of the Midwest Stock Exchange.

There were, of course, numerous "first ladies" in 1973: Emily Howell, the first female hired to become a pilot on a scheduled U.S. commercial airline; Florence Dianna Pohlman, sworn in as the first female military chaplain; six women selected for the first female contingent to attend the Coast Guard officer candidate school.

THE BIG STORY, however, was not in individuals, but in groups. The really important action took place, not in dramatic happenings that made the headlines, but in courtrooms, corporation board rooms, offices, factories, classrooms. This year, more than ever before, concentration was on economic clout: power, pay and promotion for the approximately 30 million adult women who were at work outside the home in these United States.

On an overall basis, it's difficult to prove that many professions or trades employed a significantly larger percentage of women, or that there was any narrowing of the income gap between men and women. Numerous surveys, in fact, indicate the opposite.

Scholarly fashion happening

Dollars for scholars is the aim of Maine West Mothers Club when members present their dinner-fashion show at Casa Royale, Des Plaines, on Thursday evening, Feb. 28.

The event, dubbed "Fashions for Funds," will raise money for scholarships for deserving seniors at Maine West High School, Des Plaines. Last year the club presented a total of $2,000 to help five students continue their education in the college of their choice.

The public is invited to the affair which begins at 6:30 p.m. Women's fashions from the Cynthia Shoppe and male apparel from Allen's Store for Men will be modeled.

Chairmen of the event are Mrs. Tom Bowersox and Mrs. William Parry. Tickets at $6.50 are available from Mrs. Jo Dryanski, 827-2294, or Mrs. Fran Fleming, 824-8529.

IN ILLINOIS a report presented to the Illinois Board of Higher Education in 1973 showed that a fifth of the 10,643, full-time faculty members at Illinois' 13 senior university campuses are women. The report also showed that there were salary inequities totaling $630,000 between men and women faculty members at the same level on six campuses.

In January, 1974, the media publicized, too, a report from the state personnel department indicating that college-educated women and minority group members earn less money working for the state of Illinois than white male employees who have only high school diplomas.

In summary then, most jobs remain heavily sex-oriented. As writer Diane K. Shah reported in a National Observer story last May, "Women still comprise 4.9 per cent of all lawyers and judges, 9.3 per cent of doctors, 97.3 per cent of nurses, and 94.6 per cent of secretaries and typists — much as they did 20 years ago."

Birth rate drops

Two years experience with New York state's liberalized abortion law indicates legalized abortion has contributed to a decline in the birth rate in the United States, according to the Planned Parenthood Federation of America, Inc.

Citing figures for New York City, the Federation notes that, taking into account changes in the age distribution of the population, births in New York City declined between 1970 and 1972 by 25 per cent, or 37,800.

"Of these," according to the Federation, "about one-half (between 17,000 and 21,000) avoided births were directly attributable to impact of the state's liberalization of the abortion law in 1970."

For the United States as a whole, a 6 per cent decline in the birth rate was reported for 1970-71 against an 11.7 per cent decline in California and 12 per cent in New York state.

"While a number of forces determine fertility," the Federation noted, "the far steeper drops in New York and California after reform of state abortion laws compared with over-all U.S. decline suggest that legal abortion was a factor."

The homeline

A stove top rice pudding

Dear Dorothy: So you don't like rice-raisin pudding! Well, your other half and I do. In view of the energy crisis, it would be nice to have one that can be cooked on top of the stove so the oven won't have to be turned on. Do you think a reader might have a good one they'd like to share? — Mrs. Frances Maurer

For that fellow and you and anyone else who would like such a rice custard, I do have a fine one given me by Lu Fleming. Wash one-quarter cup of rice and add to two cups of milk in the top of a double boiler. Cook until soft — 45 to 50 minutes — stirring occasionally. Then add three tablespoons of sugar, one-fourth teaspoon of salt and one teaspoon of vanilla to two beaten egg yolks. Stir some of hot rice mixture into this; then return the whole thing to the double boiler and cook for another two minutes, stirring the whole time. Let this cool slightly while you beat two egg whites until stiff, then beat in three more tablespoons of sugar. Fold this into the partially cooled rice custard mixture. Serve either warm or cold, with or without cream.

Dear Dorothy: Do you have the recipe for dancing mothballs? — Mrs. D. Marcucci

Add a cup of vinegar to a cup of water, then add two tablespoons of baking soda. Mix all this in a large container because it will bubble up. Then pour into a bowl with a few drops of food coloring — and add the mothballs.

Dear Dorothy: Do you know of anything that will keep nylon slips from riding up? — Miss Bessie Dewitt Putting fabric softener in the rinse water ought to take care of it. While I haven't tried it yet, people tell me the fabric softener that is sprayed into the dryer does a fantastic job.

(Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to her in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.)

Everyone is talking about sewing for men, and many seamstresses are even attending the demonstrations sponsored by the pattern companies.

But for the many who need more than just a demonstration, a five-week course is now being offered at Linda Z's in the Mount Prospect Plaza. Classes, during which students will sew two pair of men's knit pants, are two hours each.

One course is now in progress at Linda Z's and a new one begins March 13.

AUTO SHOW

Where's the show? Right here in this special section. Save time, save gas, travel these pages in your own easy chair and see what's new, automotively, in the northwest suburbs.

HERALD

Wednesday, February 20, 1974

THE NEW PLYMOUTH Fury is shorter in over-all length while the wheelbase is longer than in previous models. Styling is all new. There is more glass area for greater visibility, as in this Fury Gran sedan four-door hardtop.

Chrysler-Plymouth notes 50th year with engineering improvements

The 1974 Chrysler-Plymouth car line celebrates Chrysler's Golden Anniversary with major engineering improvements, according to Division General Sales Manager Francis G. Hazelroth.

"The improvements are in the tradition of engineering excellence that has been at the center of Chrysler's marketing philosophy for 50 years," Hazelroth said. "We still believe there is no substitute for finding ways of making our cars mechanically better, and at the same time offering the comfort, convenience and styling that makes motoring a pleasure."

Main changes have been made in the areas of car line identity and appearance, serviceability and reliability, comfort and convenience, and vehicle specification and performance.

The major styling change is in the full-size cars. There are all-new exterior and interior designs for Plymouth Fury, Chrysler New Yorker, Newport, Town & Country station wagons and Imperial.

In the compact, specialty compact, and intermediate lines — Valiant, Barracuda, and Satellite changes are directed primarily at customer value improvement.

There is a long list of engineering innovations ranging from standard four-wheel power disc brakes on Imperial — an industry first for a domestic luxury car — to fuse boxes that hinge down from the instrument panel for easy serviceability on all full-size cars.

The full-size cars look lower and leaner than their '73 counterparts. Side windows are two inches deeper than previous models and provide increased visibility. The front and rear glass area is increased also.

The Fury, Chrysler and Imperial lines are the style setters for 1974. The full-size car market represents the major segment of the automobile business — about 30 to 35 per cent of all U.S. cars.

In 1973, the Intermediate Sebring received the major styling change and paced the Satellite series as the division's strongest sales gainer, running better than 45 per cent ahead of 1972 sales.

The Sebring Plus showed an 80 per cent gain and Road Runner sales registered a 145 per cent jump. For 1974, the Satellite four-door sedan has a new front end to enhance its appeal.

"Valiant set its fourth consecutive record breaking sales year in model 1973 and moved to number one position in compact sales. Since the beginning of 1973, Valiant, led by Duster, has played a major role in contributing to Chrysler's 37 per cent share of the compact car market," Hazelroth said.

"Duster has been running about 25 per cent ahead of 1972 sales and the four-door sedan recording a 10 per cent gain.

"For 1974, the Valiant four-door sedan has a three-inch longer wheelbase — 111 inches — to provide more passenger room than previous models and added comfort appeal.

"Comfort in our full-size cars is a separate story. Comfort means more than just seating ease. It means ease of getting in and out of the car. It means a feeling of easy control of the car and its equipment. It means convenience. It means quietness.

"We are continuing our improvements in quiet, comfortable cars. Fury and Chrysler models have redesigned front and rear suspensions to provide additional deflection on bumpy surfaces."

There are improvements in air conditioning and upper level ventilation. A new air conditioning system incorporates six panel outlets, plus two lap coolers — providing an almost 100 per cent increase in discharge area and greatly increasing air flow.

There is an electric gauge alert system, combining gauge read-outs and warning lights. There's even a light that tells the level of the windshield wiper fluid. Both are standard on Imperial and New Yorker Brougham, optional on other Chryslers. Steel-belted, radial-ply tires are standard on Imperial, New Yorker and New Yorker Brougham.

Full-size cars have easy serviceability built in. In addition to the fold-down fuse block, modular construction of instrument panels allows ease of maintenance.

All instruments, switches, controls and the radio are accessible and removable without detaching the steering column. A removable top cover provides access to most light bulbs and radio speakers.

Underhood access to engine components has been improved due to a wider hood, more compact hood hinges, increased front track, a relocated radiator yoke, and relocated engine.

Instrument panels on Fury, Imperial and Chrysler will be easier to read and use than in previous models because they are more functionally oriented. Controls for car operation are located on the left side of the panel and controls for comfort and convenience situated to the right side.

There is a conveniently located center bin-type glove box with an integrated coinholder for parking meter and toll booth uses. There are hydraulic, energy-absorbing bumpers on most models.

In the area of safety, there is a new passenger restraint system with starter interlock, improved roof intrusion protection, and a supplementary throttle return spring.

There are trailer towing options designed to appeal to this ever-growing market. A customer may order trailer towing packages including complete hitch platforms. He can order a fully-equipped car ready to tow a travel trailer.

A new, high-output version of the 360 V-8 will replace the 340. The optional 360, four-barrel, with dual exhaust, is available in Duster, Barracuda and Road Runner.

Other options range from automatic speed control for Satellite and electric rear window defroster on Valiants and Satellites, to automatic temperature control and electronic digital clock for Fury.

We're in business to make friends. And money.

You, as a consumer, can make or break a business. Since we opened our doors in 1971, over forty thousand people like yourself have had the opportunity to go thumbs-down on Woodfield Ford.

Like so many other retail businesses, we're on trial everytime someone passes through our doors. 80 hours a week. 360 days a year. Whether they buy anything or not. And dealing with thousands of people a year, we have more than a handful of opportunities to create an army of enemies in a business that's already infiltrated with a lot of justified ill-will.

All you're looking for as a customer is the best possible price on a good car, with warranty protection, backed up with a fast, dependable service department that won't gouge your pocketbook.

And all we're looking for is customers who can understand that's exactly what we're here for — to eliminate the headaches of buying and maintaining a car, at a reasonable profit. Thankfully, we've been blessed with thousands of customers who have experienced just that.

We want your business because we can make money by keeping you happy. If we're providing a genuine service to you, other people will hear about it, and we can only get better at what we do best. You're a satisfied customer. We're a successful business.

At Woodfield Ford, that's not a dream. That's an ambition.

We thank you

Our many friends, employees and customers for helping us to win the Ford Motor Company Distinguished Achievement Award and the Distinguished Service Citation in our very first year.

To colorcast Auto Show

The Auto Show in color will be presented by WGN-TV in an entertaining and automatically educational telecast Sunday, Feb. 24, from 5:30 to 7 p.m.

Wally Phillips, Chicago radio personality, will be host narrator for the program which is being presented for the 23rd consecutive year by Channel 9. Phillips will describe the cars and special displays as the TV cameras move through the huge halls in McCormick Place where more than 550 vehicles will be on display.

A number of entertainment segments will be interspersed throughout the telecast featuring such talented performers as Della Reese, John Gary and Dick Shawn. Allan Hall, the producer of the presentation, said that a veteran crew employing the latest type of equipment will work most of two nights preparing the film.

CAR-OF-THE-YEAR award winner for 1973, the Monte Carlo has an even more impressive luxury look in 1974. Highlight of the line is the Monte Carlo S model which features standard radial ply tires, custom suspension and improved acoustics. Landau model equipment features special vinyl roof cover, distinctive trim and special wheels.

Chevrolet models offer styling, safety innovations

Styling and safety innovations are featured on the 1974 Chevrolets that take the spotlight at the Chicago Auto Show.

"The broad-based choice offered in our seven lines of cars for 1974 demonstrates Chevrolet's emphasis on building different vehicles for different wants," says F. James McDonald, Chevrolet Motor Division general manager.

"While there are a number of challenges in the new model year, we feel 1974 will be a good year and that our versatile product lineup is particularly well-suited to all segments of the market... low, intermediate, regular, sporty, luxury and recreational," he said.

Improvements all across the board, he added, include a sporty new Laguna S-3 coupe, a luxurious new Malibu Classic series topping the newly styled Chevelle line and a new, lively look for the award-winning Vega small car.

Further excitement is being added during the 1974 model year, he said, with the introduction of the special performance Cosworth Vega as a limited production option, featuring the Cosworth Vega engine with dual overhead camshafts and 16 valves... four per cylinder in Vega's aluminum alloy block power plant.

"Even greater variety in utility, sportiness and recreational vehicles is offered by Chevrolet trucks which passed the one million unit plateau in sales the past year," McDonald said.

In addition to the various styling and mechanical advances, Chevrolet is equipping all cars in 1974 with a sequential "Conservative" operating habits and proper vehicle maintenance can reduce tial ignition interlock in the seat belt system that calls for the driver and front seat passenger to be seated with belts buckled before the car will start. Seat sensors and buckle switches operate sequentially to help prevent defeating the system.

There are three distinct bumper systems on Chevrolet cars in compliance with the more stringent government impact regulations.

They include the hydraulic-pneumatic energy-absorbing systems on the regular Chevrolet, Chevelle, Monte Carlo and Nova; the new spring-mounted aluminum bumpers on Camaro and Vega; resilient bumper impact strips on the Camaro, and the body-colored urethane "soft" bumper covers with aluminum and cast iron reinforcement and draw bolts on the Corvette.

Engine power ranges from the Vega's aluminum alloy block four-cylinder 140-cubic inch power plant and the standard 250-cubic inch six-cylinder on up to an optional 454 cubic-inch V8.

Proper operation, maintenance help conserve gasoline

fuel consumption and extend engine life — whether the vehicle is new or old, small or large, reports the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Assn.

Fuel economy has suffered in recent years — the victim of added weight, stemming mainly from government mandated equipment additions, new systems for controlling vehicle emissions and buyers' opting for more power-driven equipment such as air conditioning, brakes and steering.

Among tips for better mileage, MVMA says that gasoline is wasted by driving at high speeds, "hot rod" accelerations, excessive engine idling, making short trips and driving at varying speeds.

Rapid acceleration and high speeds demand more engine power and hence more fuel. A study by automotive engineers has found that the difference in fuel economy between a "hot rod" and "Sunday driver" can be about two miles per gallon (mpg) in city driving.

Long engine warm-ups should be avoided. Mileage will improve if the car is driven at moderate speeds even with a cold engine.

Drivers pay for short, convenience trips with greater fuel consumption. A vehicle started cold and driven four miles during one manufacturer's test got an average of 8 mpg. With a longer trip length of 15 miles, economy increased to 11 mpg, while fully warmed up, the test car received 12.8 mpg.

Stop-and-go city driving which is unnerving to drivers is also hard on fuel economy. For best results, try to maintain a fairly constant speed and avoid red lights and other conditions requiring stops or frequent speed changes, says the MVMA.

Driving a car faster than about 40 mpg generally lowers fuel economy. Peak fuel economy occurs in all car sizes — sub-compact, intermediate and full-size sedans — in the 30 to 40 mph. However, when driving on freeways minimum speed levels — usually 45 mph — must be observed.

Following the manufacturers' maintenance schedule for tune-ups, cleaning and adjustments will increase fuel economy for most vehicles. A manufacturer's study showed that a spark plug misfiring half the time at 60 mph dropped fuel economy by 7.3 per cent. Replacing worn spark plugs can improve average fuel economy by 5 to 6 per cent. Under-inflated tires and improper front wheel alignment are other vehicle conditions that cost drivers money by increasing fuel consumption.

Nine-day Auto Show opens Saturday

The largest and most complete Automobile Show of them all opens to the public Saturday in McCormick Place.

The nine-day event is power-packed with sporty cars, economy cars, luxury cars, recreational and utility vehicles. In all more than 550 U. S. passenger cars, imports, campers and commercial vehicles will be on view in the two huge halls in the lake front exposition hall.

Mayor Richard J. Daley and Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett are expected to participate in the opening ceremonies at 10:30 a.m. Show hours through the remaining days will be 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Weather cooperating, more than 900,000 visitors are expected to enjoy the show and the opportunity of viewing all the 1974 models at one time.

This is Chicago's own automobile show planned and staged by the new car dealer members of the Chicago Automobile Trade Association which is made up of more than 630 new car dealers in the greater Chicago area. The event has been staged every year since 1901, with the exception of World War II years making it the oldest exposition of its kind on the basis of continuous presentation.

According to David Ostrow, CATA President, this will be the biggest and most complete auto show to be staged in this country this year. He said:

"We have utilized virtually every square foot of available exhibit space and will have more vehicles on display, more special attractions and allied exhibits than ever before. We have a large array of foreign cars — a total of 33 different nameplates, and a wide variety of camping vehicles.

"The cars, of course, are the stars, but there is a supporting cast of motorcycles, accessories, gadgets, tire displays, antique cars, racing cars, comedians, magicians, sports celebrities, a beer garden and beautiful models where ever you look."

Ostrow also added that a number of all new models will be introduced at the show and a few cars, recently introduced by their divisions, but not all have as yet reached dealer showrooms, will be shown for the first time publicly. Ford Motor Company's Chicago assembly plant is now turning out a new Torino Elite, a luxury model of the mid-sized Torino. It will rate a prime spot in the Ford exhibit.

The Chrysler Corporation early this month introduced two new jeep-type utility vehicles — the Plymouth Trail Blazer and the Dodge Ramcharger. Both will be displayed in the corporation's recreational and commercial vehicle area. Volkswagen introduced its Dasher at a national Press Preview in Arizona early this month and that new German model will enjoy its public introduction at the show.

Robert M. Foley, show chairman, said the aim of the show officials has always been to provide an interesting and entertaining afternoon or evening for every member of the family. He pointed out:

"We have perhaps the most varied automotive presentation ever put together. Besides all of the cars, there is much to do and see even if you are not right now considering the purchase of a new car."

"The Buick Division will stage a unique fashion show, with models wearing apparel made from fabrics featured in the 1974 Buicks. Ford Motor Company will raffle off a new car and the Chevrolet division will also give away a number of Chevy Juniors. Other display areas will offer games with a variety of prizes. The Lincoln-Mercury Division will have those Cougars you've no doubt seen in TV commercials. They'll be well chaperoned, of course."

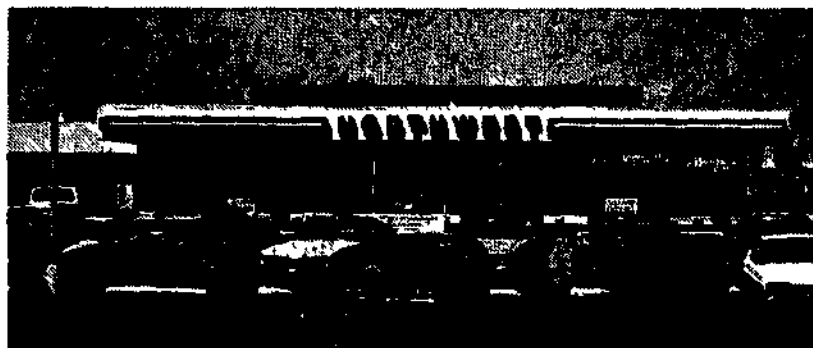

Foley also reported that the Oldsmobile Division will stage a demonstration of the air bag, the passive restraint that has drawn considerable comment — pro and con. A special half car will be featured and the air bag operation will be slowed down so visitors may be able to see the complete action.

Adding to the change of pace attractions, a ring of antique cars, featuring one of the Kings of the Classics, a 1919 Duesenberg 225 J, perhaps the most luxurious American car of its day, will be present. An array of competition cars will include a jet-propelled vehicle expected to make a try at the land speed record on the Utah Salt Flats in the near future.

Special booths will include the Secretary of State's exhibit at which any questions regarding car or driver licenses, or Illinois road laws, will be answered. The Chicago Police department's mobile unit, containing a number of animated exhibits depicting various activities, will also be on hand and the Police Canine Unit will demonstrate its methods in the use of trained dogs in police work at various times throughout the day and evening.

Show hours are from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. every day through closing night, Sunday, March 3. Admission is $1.50 for adults and 75 cents for children 12 and under.

Hey, I'm trying to figure out why Mustang II is sticker priced higher than Plymouth Duster.

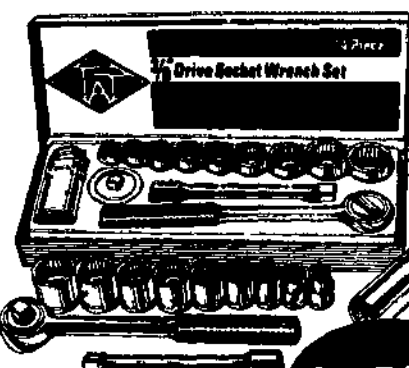

What I mean is it can't be the room. Because Duster holds more people than Mustang II. And it can't be the trunk, because Duster's almost three times bigger. Duster's even got a standard electronic ignition that virtually eliminates ignition tune-ups. And it's still priced lower than Mustang II. Guess that's what separates superstars from other cars.

Cougar stars with elegance in mid-size package

Whether visitors to 1974 auto shows prefer to see economical, compact cars with a flair, sporty imported models or highly personal luxury cars, they will find what they are looking for at the Lincoln-Mercury Division exhibit.

With 33 models competing in more than 85 per cent of the automotive market, Lincoln-Mercury leads the industry in market coverage.

"We really are the division that offers more kinds of cars for more kinds of people," William P. Benton, Ford vice president and division general manager, said. "From our compact Comet to the classical Continental Mark IV, Lincoln-Mercury's cars appeal to buyers seeking more comfort, luxury and economy of operation."

According to the Ford Motor Company sales executive, the star at this year's auto show will not be a small car or a large luxury car but an all-new, mid-size Mercury model — the 1974 Cougar XR-7.

"The new Cougar is a result of our efforts to make highly personal styling and elegance available in a smaller, mid-size package," Benton said. "It has the luxury, comfort and convenience features usually found only on much more expensive cars."

Designed to compete in the booming intermediate personal luxury car market, the new Cougar XR-7 reflects recent product innovations which have given Lincoln-Mercury three consecutive model years of all-time-high sales.

Cougar XR-7 and Capri join the full-size Mercury, Lincoln Continental and Continental Mark IV in offering steel-belted, radial-ply tires as standard equipment.

Also available on Montego and Comet models, these longer-wearing tires are cooler running, provide more precise steering and directional control, have less rolling resistance and deliver a superior ride at highway speeds.

New safety and damageability features for 1974 include more protective impact-absorbing front and rear bumpers for all models and a new Seatbelt Interlock System.

New solid-state ignition is standard on all 1974 Lincoln-Mercury models equipped with 400-cubic-inch-displacement (c.i.d.) 2V with 460-c.i.d. 4V engines.

The completely redesigned mid-size Cougar XR-7 two-door hardtop features new sheet metal, new body/frame construction and new front and rear suspensions. The 1974 Cougar's exterior design retains the long hood/short deck and distinctive grille work that are Cougar hallmarks.

Following Cougar tradition, the standard equipment list includes full instrumentation, 351-2V-V8 engine, automatic transmission, power front disc brakes, steel-belted radial-ply tires, luxury wheel covers, power steering and a power ventilation system.

Cougar for '74 has a much more luxurious interior than its predecessors. Buyers can choose between sporty bucket seats with console and floor-mounted gear-shift or the convenience of Twin Comfort Lounge seats.

The full-size Mercury models for 1974 offer a variety of design refinements and engineering improvements.

The front and rear of all models are freshly styled with new grille and tail lamps. They also feature new exterior and interior color selections and new seat-trim styles.

The smooth-running 460-c.i.d. V8 engine is the new standard power plant on Marquis and Marquis Brougham passenger cars, replacing the 428-c.i.d. The 400-c.i.d. 2V V8 replaces the 351-c.i.d. 2 V V8 as standard equipment on Monterey models. All full-size Mercurys have the new solid-state ignition.

Significant power-team changes, a new, more formal front appearance and a refined rear appearance, as well as a number of new options, are highlights of the 1974 Montego line.

Montego's front appearance is more formal for '74 and the rear appearance is completely new with three-pod horizontal-design tail lamps located in the lower back panel.

Comet — Lincoln-Mercury's popular compact entry — offers exterior and interior design refinements and new optional front disc brakes for 1974. Comet's new manual disc brakes are similar in design to those of larger Lincoln-Mercury cars, but are tailored to the car's smaller size and weight.

Comet's sporty GT model, one of three models available in 1974, adds cut-pile carpeting and a leather-wrapped steering wheel as standard equipment. An AM/FM monaural radio is a new option for '74.

The standard power-team for all Comets is the 200-c.i.d. IV six-cylinder engine and the fully synchronized three-speed manual transmission. Optional engines are the 260-c.i.d. IV Six and the 302-c.i.d. 2V V8, both coupled to a standard three-speed manual transmission.

Comet's most luxurious package, the Custom option, includes exterior and interior appointments that add to appearance, comfort and convenience. Additions to the package for 1974 are a luxury steering wheel with color-keyed leather-wrapped rim, a glove box light and a dome/map light.

The four 1974 Lincoln Continental models continue their look of understated elegance with redesigned front vertical-bar die-cast grille and grille housings and a new bumper.

Rear appearance also is new, with wide horizontal design wrap-around tail lamps mounted in the sheet metal above the bumper.

New deep plush, cut-pile carpeting is standard on the base two-door coupe and four-door sedan. Standard on two-door models is a convenient automatic front seat-back release. A new luxurious headlining fashioned of flocked nylon over extra-soft urethane foam is standard on the Town Car and Town Coupe.

New luxury wheel covers feature simulated turbine fins around the periphery and a die-cast Continental star inset at the center. As an added styling touch the area surrounding the hub is keyed to the color of the vinyl roof.

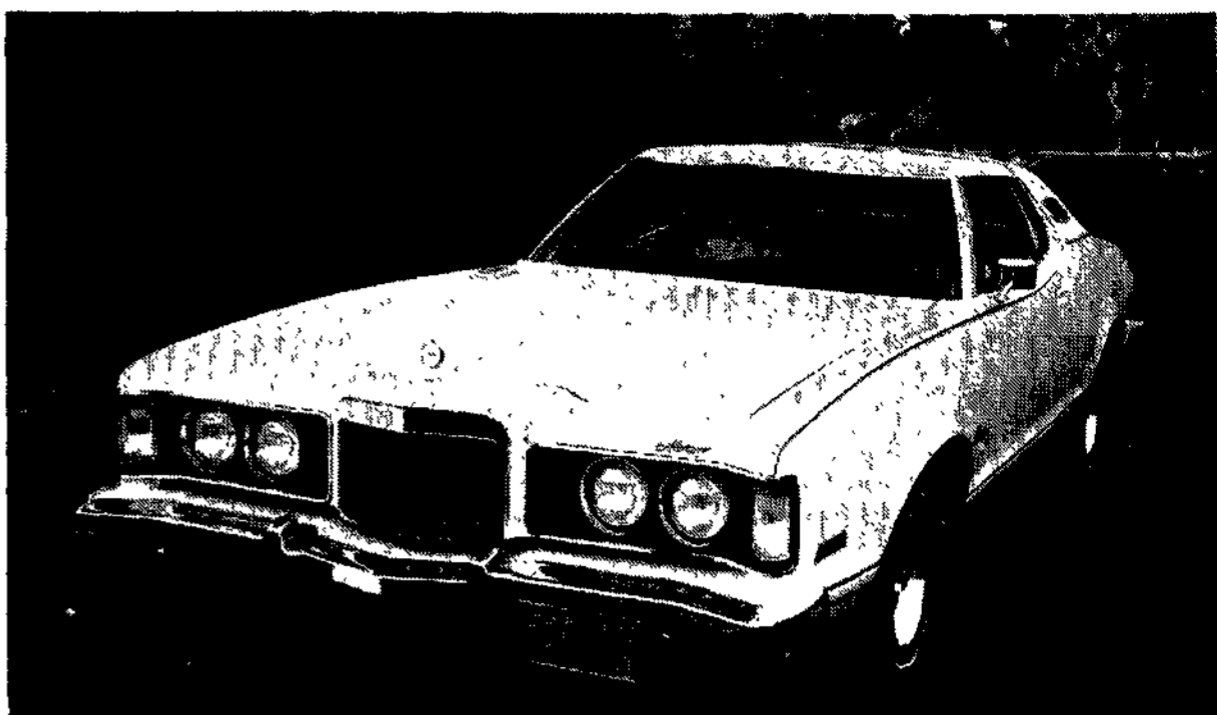

The 460-c.i.d. 4V V8 engine and automatic transmission remain as the standard and only power-team available on Lincoln Continental.

The classic yet contemporary 1974 Continental Mark IV presents a new rear appearance, refinements to its already elegant interior and several technical improvements.

Although the rear appearance is new, the traditional Mark IV spare tire theme is retained. The new wrap-around tail lamps are positioned in the sheet metal above the redesigned bumper.

Interior refinements include new optional Media Velour seat upholstery, flocked nylon-over-urethane foam headlining and new soft arm rests with mold-er foam pads.

Twenty-six changes were made to the Mark IV interior sound package for 1974. These refinements are designed to improve the already quiet interior at all speeds and under all road conditions.

A quick defrost electric windshield rear window system similar to the type used on jet aircraft is a notable added option.

Wiper-mounted windshield washer jets also are new for Mark IV in '74. With this design the washer nozzle is located about halfway up the wiper arm, spraying the washer fluid on the windshield as the wiper moves.

Capri for 1974 has new front and rear bumpers, interior refinements and several technical improvements.

A new high-performing 2800-cc V6 engine replaces last year's 2600-cc V6 engine. New standard equipment includes steel-belted radial-ply tires for both Capri models and an instrumentation group for the Capri 2000 model.

The new molded urethane bumpers, called Hi-Flex, are mounted close to the body and are color-keyed to the exterior paint.

Capri's interior has new door panels with a more luxurious appearance and new arm rests with a more convenient door handle.

Integrated air-conditioning and an AM/FM monaural radio are new factory installed Capri options.

THE CAR WHICH most exemplifies the newness of Cadillac for 1974 is the redesigned Coupe de Ville. The standard front end features a new lighting arrangement. New bumper guards are wider and lower. The bumper impact strips are standard and are silver gray in color to blend into the chrome bumper. An all-new rear quarter panel has enabled Cadillac designers to create this smart appearing fixed rear coupe window. A custom Cabriolet vinyl roof option is now available for the 1974 Coupe de Ville.

Cadillac restyles interiors

The 1974 Cadillac, restyled in front and rear, features an exclusive look to the new Coupe de Ville, a dramatic change in the interior of all models and engineering innovations adding customer value benefits in fuel economy and safety.

"Nine models offered in three series, Calais, De Ville and Fleetwood, are available," according to Robert D. Lund, general manager of Cadillac Motor Car Division and vice president of General Motors.

"In size, overall length for all models is increased 2.2 inches as a result of the new rear bumper system," Lund said.

He pointed out that the new bumpers meet all federal and state mandatory requirements and in addition, the front bumper guards are wider and lower. The standard bumper impact strips are a unique silver gray color to blend into the chrome bumper.

Lund added, "The top surface of the rear bumper has been lowered, and the horizontal stop, backup and tail lamps have been relocated in a tough urethane body colored bezel for increased protection. The flexible bezel is easily removable for servicing of tail lamps and bulbs.

"A striking change to the Coupe de Ville and Calais Coupe upper has been accomplished by the new design of a fixed rear quarter window," Lund said.

In the standard Cadillac a new front-end appearance is enhanced by the relocation of parking lamps and head lamps.

"The familiar cross-hatch grille in the standard Cadillac has been designed with a bold motif, the square grille openings highlighted above and below the bumper," Lund reported. As in 1973 the grille on all models is mounted to the bumper, telescoping under hood and fenders on impact.

In describing the Fleetwood Eldorado series which again includes the coupe and convertible, Lund said, "This model also has a newly styled front end, the focal point being the uniquely styled fine mesh grille.

"The grille again extends down below the center bumper bar and is protected against impact by two short guards.

"The side appearance is accented by a narrow body molding which protects the side of the car from parking lot damage. In addition, bolder striping and new wheel discs highlight the classic Eldorado lines," Lund said.

"The rear of the Eldorado has been restyled to provide improved protection. New bumper outers extend vertically and incorporate the rear side marker and reflectors," according to Lund.

Turning to the significant improvements in the interior of the 1974 Cadillac, Lund explained, "All models have a redesigned wood grained instrument panel which extends in one continuous sweep from one side of the car to the other. Immediate functional information for driving is separated from conditional information. A color coded fuel gauge and warning lights are contained in a horizontal 'strip' across the upper portion of the panel.

Included in this 'information band' in the center of the instrument panel is a new precision crystal controlled digital clock, standard on all models. The speedometer, transmission indicator and turn signal lights are in the housing over the steering column for easy eye contact. The instrument panel is designed for improved convenience."

Standard on all models is a three-point shoulder-lap belt interlock system, except for the Eldorado Convertible, which has a lap belt interlock only.

New interior trim sets include three-color brocades, crushed velours, herringbones and leathers.

"To further enhance a customer's preference for personalizing his or her choice of a Cadillac, there are three new 'Special Edition Cars' available in 1974," Lund said.

"The first is the new Fleetwood Talisman. It has four individual seats, with a reclining front passenger seat back. Interiors are fully trimmed in Medici cloth velour including covered consoles between seats. A right-hand visor illuminated vanity mirror is standard. Outside, it features a vertically mounted wreath and crest, 'Fleetwood Talisman' script on the sail panel, a fully padded elk grain vinyl roof, and deluxe wheel discs.

"The Brougham d'Elegance option which was introduced last year is again available and the limousine will also have a d'Elegance option on a special order basis.

"Further, there is a new dimension for the De Villes for 1974. There is a De Ville d'Elegance option with a distinctiveness of its own, available for both the Sedan and the Coupe. On the outside, there is a new standup see-through crest and body, hood and trunk lid striping. Inside, there is a new velour called Mardi Gras. Other features include deluxe door pads, storage pockets in front seat backs, and deep pile carpeting with matching floor mats.

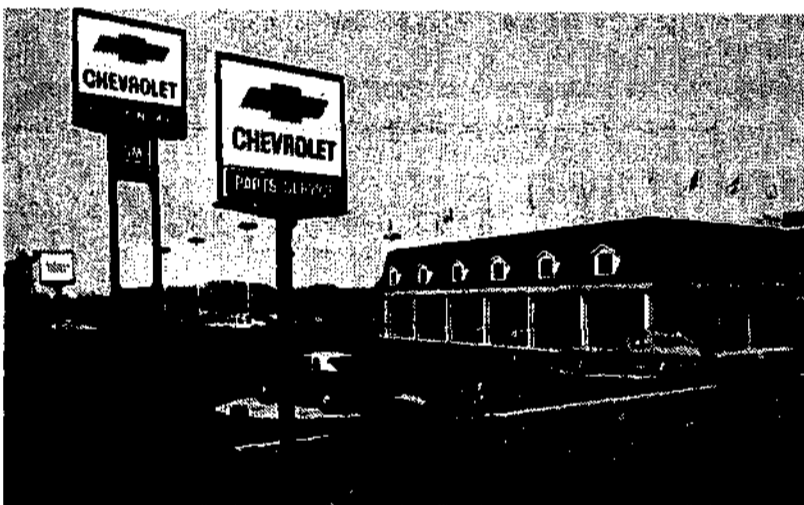

"In addition, the custom Cabriolet vinyl roof option is available for the Coupe de Ville. The half-top design is similar to that used on the Eldorado Cabriolet."

Lund reviewed engineering innovations in the 1974 models. These include refinements to the 472 cubic inch engine used in the standard Cadillac and the 500 cubic inch engine in the front-wheel-drive Eldorado.

"New engineering developments for 1974 include a new faster burn combustion chamber, lower overlap camshaft, more highly damped engine mounts, a new clutch fan and a new inlet air silencer including cold air intake.

"For improved starting at moderate temperatures, a vacuum reindexing feature has been added to the choke.

Drivers under the age of 25 comprise the largest group of licensed motorists in the United States, the Federal Highway Administration estimates.

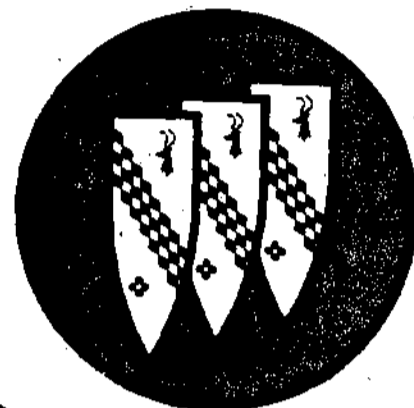

Of the more than 122 million licensed drivers, 22.3 per cent have not yet reached their 25th birthday. The second largest group 25 - 34 - represents 21.7 per cent of the total, followed by the 35-44 age bracket with 17.6 per cent.

Drivers in the 45-54 age range amount to 17 per cent, while those in the 55-64 category comprise 12.5 per cent of the total. Motorists over 65 make up the smallest group with 9.3 per cent.

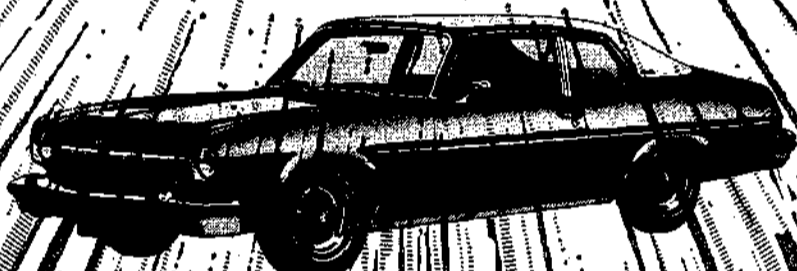

The record number of 122,594,000 licensed drivers is greater than the total U.S. population in 1929, which was only 121,777,000.

Unique fashion show highlights Buick line

Visitors to the Buick exhibit at the Chicago Auto Show will see a unique style show with wearing apparel made from an extensive array of interior fabrics found in the 1974 Buicks.

The fashion show will accent the almost doubled number of trim sets available in the new line and will be presented hourly in Buick's Wonderful World of Color, the exhibit's pivotal attraction consisting of a carousel on a king-size turntable.

In a separate exhibit for the 1974 Opel Mantas, Buick will display the Butter Diplomat CD, a candy-red special coupe show car from Germany.

Named for its designer, Erich Bitter, the car stresses functionalism and aerodynamic styling. The interior is velour with genuine rosewood trim and the cockpit is specially set up for easy accessibility to all controls.

There will be several styles of seats in the Buick area and each will be covered with different fabrics of blending hues. Panels, two feet wide and six feet high, will be draped with some of the newest fabrics to provide visitors an opportunity to "feel the merchandise."

The restyled Riviera, new LeSabre coupes and a four-door Regal sedan, the newcomer to the Century family, will highlight the Buick display totaling 24 models.

All models of the Apollo, Buick's newly-engineered compact, will be shown with the spotlight on the GSX, which features body striping, specific wheels and ornamentation.

The new styling for the Riviera marks the third major change since it was introduced in 1963. Extensive changes in the rear include a squared-off deck lid that incorporates high level auxiliary taillights under the back window.

Both the Riviera and LeSabre coupes feature their own distinctive version of the colonnade-style roof which proved so popular on the Century series last year. Each of these cars has a new pillared roof design with a fixed rear side window.

Also in the LeSabre series, a new model called the Luxus succeeds the Centurion and LeSabre Custom nameplates, combining popular features of both cars — Centurion interiors and Custom exterior ornamentation.

All regular and intermediate models have substantial changes front and rear, featuring new bumpers, grilles and taillamps.

The new four-door Regal sedan is offered as a companion model to the highly popular Regal coupe and offers the same degree of luxurious interior trims.

The ultimate in luxury and styling elegance in the Buick line for 1974 are the landau coupes offered in the Regal, Electra and Riviera. This option includes a heavily-padded, vinyl half-top with a molding down the center of the hood, a stand-up hood ornament and the "Landau" nameplate on the sail panel.

A high-energy ignition system and steel-belted radial ply tires built to General Motors specifications highlight changes in the performance department.

The new ignition is standard on all Stage I engines and optional on all V8s. It produces greater voltage than regular breaker or conventional solid-state ignition systems and firing is more precise because distribution of the charge is accomplished electronically rather than mechanically. It also improves starting in cold or wet weather and minimizes ignition tune-ups because there are no points or rubbing block to wear out.

All models are equipped with energy-absorbing bumpers in the front and rear, and the interlock ignition system which prevents the engine from being started until both outboard front seat occupants have their lap and shoulder belts fastened.

Visitors to the show can view demonstrations of ride and performance of the new 1974 models in special mini-theaters resembling television.

Gran Torino Elite leads Ford's new car lineup

Ford's new Gran Torino Elite, a one-of-a-kind Mustang II show car, and a talking robot will be featured with Ford Division's 1974 cars and light trucks in the Chicago Auto Show, Feb. 23-March 3 at McCormick Place.

Models from Ford Division's six car lines plus several light trucks and recreational vehicles will be displayed.

The Gran Torino Elite is a new mid-size luxury car that offers new front end styling, twin opera windows, 15-inch wheels and luxury interior with full instrumentation. It is available as a two-door hardtop model.

One of the highlights of the Ford Division exhibit is the Sportiva II, an experimental roadster version of the new Mustang II. It has a removable roof panel, roll bar integrated into the roof, a rumble seat and an elegant, hand-fashioned interior with sporty gauges.

Showgoers will receive an invitation to make a Ford car commercial on color television and then see themselves on instant replay.

Freddie Ford, a second-generation talking robot, has been a popular attraction at auto shows for four years. It can see, hear and even answer questions. The robot is made of Ford Division products, such as Mustang gas caps for knees and engine oil pans for feet.

The production vehicle display will highlight the 1974 Mustang II, Ford Division's newest small luxury car. Standard equipment for Mustang II includes front disc brakes, rack-and-pinion steering, bucket seats, cut-pile carpeting, tachometer, full instrumentation, four-speed manual transmission and a 2.3-liter four-cylinder engine.

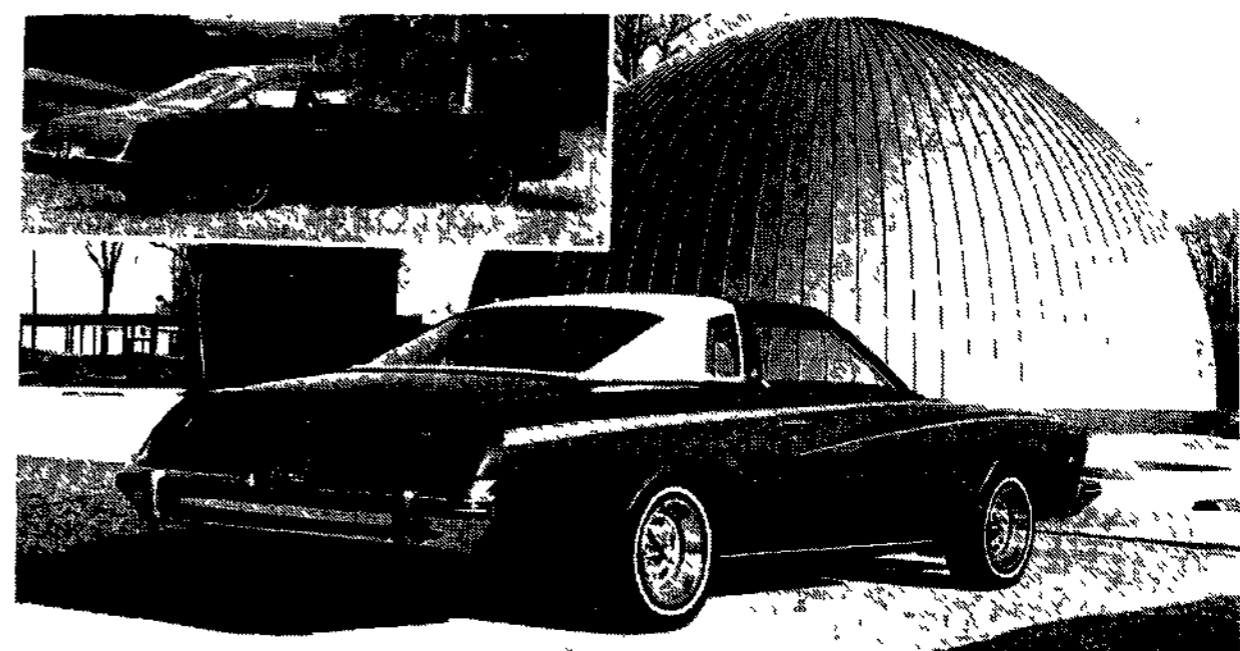

The 1974 Ford car has new grilles for all models, optional luxury groups for the LTD Brougham and Country Squire, and standard steel-belted radial-ply tires on upper-series models. Torino, pace-setter in the intermediate market, sports new front and rear appearances.

Maverick offers optional front disc brakes for the first time, and Pinto has a 2.3-liter engine available as an option to the economical 2-liter version. Thunderbird has a new rear appearance and an optional see-through moonroof.

A cutaway of an F-100 pickup truck will demonstrate the features of the 1974 Ford pickup.

See, be seen

Are your fellow drivers flashing their lights at you? Improperly aimed or burned-out headlamps are distracting and dangerous to other motorists. The Car Care Council urges your checking headlights and taillights regularly for condition and proper aim.

THE CENTURY 350 Landau coupe, a newcomer to Buick's popular intermediate group, features a landau-style vinyl roof with modified rear quarter windows, gold accent stripes along the sides and gold-styled wheels. The insert photo shows the Century 350 coupe in standard trim with a conventional roof, which can be ordered with a regular vinyl covering.

HOSKINS CHEVROLET

175 NORTH ARLINGTON HEIGHTS RD., ELK GROVE VILLAGE 439-8900

"WE BUY USED CARS"

A COMPLETELY NEW five-passenger Matador coupe joins American Motors' intermediate car series for 1974. Its 114-inch wheelbase is four inches shorter than the Matador sedan or station wagon, yet the new design provides generous passenger space and luggage capacity. Three versions of the coupe are offered by AMC — the standard model, a sporty X with standard 304 CID V-8 (shown here), and the premium Brougham.

American Motors to feature Cassini matador coupe

Five 1974 Matador coupes, including a Brougham model featuring a new D/L formal window package, will hold the spotlight in American Motors' 22-car exhibit at the Chicago Auto Show.

A high point in the display of the all-new coupes is the first Chicago and land showing of a duplicate of the Matador race car being campaigned this year on the NASCAR Grand National Circuit by Roger Penske racing under the direction of Mark Donohue.

Another show feature is the Cassini Matador coupe model, which brings the "total look" concept of noted U. S. designer Oleg Cassini to American Motors' series of high-fashion cars.

Rounding out the AMC car exhibit are six 1974 Hornet models, including a hatchback with a "Levi's" interior; four Gremlins, two of which have the popular "blue jeans" upholstery; a Javelin and Javelin AMX and Matador and Ambassador sedans and station wagons.

In the show's recreational and commercial vehicle section, American Motors will have a display of 13 1974 Jeep vehicles the exhibit includes four of the new Cherokee sports/utility vehicles; three Wagoneers, four CJ-5's and two Jeep trucks. Also on display will be a complete chassis equipped with Quadra-Trac, American Motors' unique full-time four-wheel drive system, and a World War II Jeep, the predecessor of today's Jeep models.

Brightest star in American Motors' galaxy of 14 models for 1974 is the all-new Matador coupe.

Several inches lower and with a wheelbase four inches shorter than other intermediate-size Matadors, the new coupe is a sporty automobile package that combines the best traditions of European Gran Turismo road cars with American requirements for passenger space and riding comfort.

Three versions of the new coupe are offered — the standard model, an "X" model that comes with V-8 power, and the premium Brougham. Variations in exterior ornamentation, interior trim, upholstery and appointments differentiate between them.

In addition to the coupe, all AMC's car lines present fresh appearances for the new model year due to extensive refinements of inside and outside trim and ornamentation.

A new frontal treatment for hoods, grilles, fender caps and grille gives the Ambassador Brougham sedan and station wagons a look of elegance befitting its role as AMC's premier luxury series. The hood features a new flexibly-mounted stand-up ornament and accent striping that contrasts with body colors.

Redesigned hoods and grilles are important appearance features of Matador station wagons and four-door sedans. Vertical grille fins, headlamp bezels and the grille perimeter molding are chromed to accent the new front end treatment.

Gremlin sports a new three-piece color-keyed grille and restyled rear quarter panels, while interiors offer a wide range of lively and youthful trim choices.

Hornet sedans, hatchback coupe and Sportabout wagon have a variety of special trim and appearance packages that allow customizing to individual preference. Among the more prominent exterior refinements are new lower back panel treatment and ornamentation, relocation of the nameplate from hood to front fenders and a new finer-grained vinyl roof material.

Trim changes mark the seventh generation of the four-passenger Javelin and Javelin AMX personal cars. Several optional packages allow for added convenience and stepped-up performance characteristics.

For the third successive year, American Motors has turned to the fashion world for unusual optional styling packages. Newest in its exclusive series of cars bearing the imprint of internationally-known designers is the Cassini Matador coupe, which achieves an understated coordinated look by harmonizing interior color, fabric and texture with exterior paint and striping hues.

Cloth upholstery, door panel inserts, headliner and sun visors come only in jet black, accented by copper floor carpeting and other interior trim details. Copper also is the basic accent color used for the vinyl roof covering, hood and body striping, rub rails, rear license plate depression area, grille and custom wheel covers. Oleg Cassini's crest is mounted on the front fenders and appears as an insert in the front-seat headrests to further identify the special Matador coupe model.

The popular "Levi's" blue jeans upholstery package again is available on both Gremlin and Hornet hatchback models. Since its introduction last year, more buyers have ordered "Levi's" trim than any other optional AMC interior in the company's history.

Technical improvements for Gremlin, Hornet, Javelin, Matador and Ambassador include stronger bumper systems for increased damageability protection, and easy-to-use three-point lap belt and shoulder harness safety system, and numerous mechanical innovations for increased customer satisfaction.

RVs on display at show

Vacationers who choose to take their homes with them will tell you of that wonderful sense of independence one enjoys in the knowledge that one can eat and sleep dry in any place that is level enough to park on. That's why one of the most popular areas at the Chicago Automobile Show is the recreational vehicle exhibit.

There's a wide variety of the homes on the road from a simple fold up camper to a huge motor home with all the comforts including lounge, bathtub and kitchen. Some models even include microwave ovens, stereo tape decks, television mounts, built-in vacuum cleaners and sanitary units by which the sewage is burned up by the exhaust heat.

Display areas have been taken by the divisions of Chevrolet, Dodge, Ford, General Motors Truck and Coach, Jeep and Toyota. Also, the Datsun and Mazda exhibit area will contain both recreational and work vehicles.

AN EXCLUSIVE for the Chicago show will be this special Cutlass S with a GMO package. It has a specially padded white vinyl top, chromed sports mirrors, a special stripe package and emblems.

Cutlass GMO to key Oldsmobile exhibit

Oldsmobile will feature two special purpose cars, an air cushion restraint demonstration unit and 16 new Oldsmobiles in its 1974 Chicago Auto Show exhibit.

Exclusively for the Chicago show, a special Cutlass S will be on display. The package is called the "GMO" (Gallant Men of Olds) and carries a specially padded white vinyl top, chromed sports mirrors, a special stripe package and emblems. Designed by Oldsmobile in cooperation with its 46-member Chicago marketing group, the "GMO" will be available for sale through many Chicago Oldsmobile dealerships.

A Hurst/Oldsmobile has been named the official pace car for the 1974 Indianapolis 500. Sharing the pace car duties will be an open roof Cutlass, a W-30 Cutlass coupe and a Delta 88 convertible. On display in Chicago will be the open roof Cutlass Hurst/Olds which will carry out pace car duties in Indianapolis in May.

Oldsmobile recently moved into production of its first air cushion restraint system equipped cars. The new safety system, available on all Delta 88s (except station wagons and convertibles), Ninety-Eights and Toronados, will be demonstrated at the show and a detailed explanation of the widely discussed new option will be made.

Oldsmobile's 1974 Cutlass lineup features the new two-door Salon. For 1974 the Salon has become a full-fledged series with the addition of this coupe model.

Based on Oldsmobile's most popular body style, the Salon coupe and sedan are equipped with nylon velour-covered or perforated vinyl reclining front contour seats and a handling package built around 15-inch GM specification steel-belted radial-ply tires. The Salon also features a headline dimmer switch in the turn signal lever and center console as standard equipment.

The intermediate station wagons are extended to the Cutlass Supreme series with two and three-seat models available. Both two and three-seat Vista Cruisers continue to be available with the Vista Vent glass roof ventilator and vinyl woodgrain applique among the standard equipment items.

The 4-4-2 appearance and handling package is available as an option on the Cutlass and Cutlass S coupes.

The new Ninety-Eight Regency coupe features nylon velour fabrics formerly available only on the Regency sedan and a 60/40 divided front seat with dual controls. The standard Ninety-Eight coupe has been discontinued.

All Ninety-Eights have a new front appearance with large dual grilles mounted in the fiberglass front end panel. A deflectable stand-up hood ornament is standard.

The most extensive exterior change in the Olds line for 1974 is in the Delta 88 and Delta 88 Royale hardtop coupes. A new upper design features more glass area with improved visibility.

Four models of Custom Cruisers will again be offered in 1974 with two and three-seat versions with or without vinyl woodgrain body side inserts available.

Another new model formerly offered only as an option is the front-drive Toronado Brougham. Velour fabrics in five colors and white vinyl are available on the standard 60/40 front seats with dual controls. Center armrests front and rear also are standard.

The compact Omega, introduced in 1973, receives new front-end appearance changes including a bright plated die-cast grille with a hydraulic energy-absorbing bumper system front and rear replacing the rigid system used in 1973.

The new GM specification steel-belted radial-ply tire is standard on the Cutlass Salon models and optional on all other 1974 Oldsmobiles. It offers a variety of improved performance factors over conventional tires, including better handling and ride, improved tread life, better hazard resistance and traction and slightly increased fuel economy.

Flu, illness, fright cut Cooper attendance almost 50%

by JILL BETTNER
A locker slams and the sound, magnified several times by the silence in the nearly empty halls, resounds through Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove.

Normally jammed with students, laughing and jostling each other as they hurry to classes, the halls are virtually deserted, drained by a wave of flu and similar illnesses that have hit almost half the school's 750-student population.

One Cooper student, 14-year-old Dale Chany, died Monday of Reye's Syndrome, a rare childhood disease that doctors believe usually follows a flu or chicken pox virus.

An autopsy conducted at Evanston Hospital yesterday confirmed that the boy, who resided at 816 Brittany Dr., Arlington Heights, was apparently the latest victim of the puzzling disease that has killed at least six others in the Chicago area in the past two weeks.

ALTHOUGH THE absentee rate at Cooper has been steadily increasing over the past month, the extraordinary number of students out this week indicates that many parents are being especially cautious and keeping at home children who show even the slightest flu symptoms.

About 40 students are absent daily at this time of the year, according to Larry Weaver, principal. Yesterday, the absentee list numbered 331 and Weaver expects the rate to go even higher in the next few days.

"I'm sure if a parent was trying to decide if a child was ill enough to stay at home, when he heard about Dale's death, he had to make the decision," Weaver said. "We've been making announcements, too, that the kids shouldn't come if they feel at all sick. I predict even higher absenteeism the rest of the week, but by then, pretty well most of the kids will have had it and gotten over it."

Assistant Principal Bob White said several parents called the school yesterday expressing concern over the apparent flu epidemic and some were worried that Reye's Syndrome might be contagious. Some parents want to see the school closed, he said, and one even suggested that the building be fumigated.

ACCORDING TO U. S. Department of Health official, Dr. Robert Rubin of the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Georgia, Reye's Syndrome is "definitely not contagious."

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill yesterday said he is not considering closing Cooper or any of the other 16 schools in the district that are also reporting "higher than usual" absences.

"Our information is that there's nothing we can gain by closing the schools," Gill said. "We want parents to keep children home if they feel ill or have fevers, but we do that all the time."

"The thing I'm really concerned about is the panic that could become associated with this kind of thing," the superintendent said. "I know it's difficult because parents are concerned and I can sympathize with them, but we have to try to remain calm."

AT COOPER, students and teachers are "numb" at Dale Chany's death. The eighth grader was a top student and an outstanding athlete.

Memorial services for Dale are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Kolsak of Wheeling Funeral Home, 189 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Dale was a member of the Cooper cross-country track team and a special award for future runners is being established in his memory. The honor will go to the most improved second-year member of the team each year.

94% of those responding say 'yes'

Survey indicates residents favor public transit setup

by JOE FRANZ

Results of a survey conducted by the village show that 94 per cent of residents responding think Buffalo Grove should have some sort of a public transportation system.

In the survey, residents were asked if they think the village should have a public transportation system, and if so, they were asked to check the types of service they would prefer. The kinds of service listed in the survey were railroad commuter service, village commuter service, dial-a-bus service and shopper's shuttle service.

A total of 357 households responded to the survey of which 337 favored a transportation system. Only five per cent of those responding, 17 households, said Buffalo Grove doesn't need a public transportation system. Three households said they were undecided on the matter.

Aside from favoring a public transportation system, 263, or about 73 per cent, said they would like to see a shopping shuttle service begun. The service would consist of shuttle buses to Woodfield, Randhurst and possibly the Hawthorn shopping centers.

IN THE SURVEY, 176 homes, or about 50 per cent, said a railroad commuter service should be extended to other parts of the village. At present, bus service between the Chicago and North Western

Ry. station in Arlington Heights and Mill Creek and Villa Verde is provided by a private company. The service operates during morning and afternoon rush hours and meets specific trains.

About 50 per cent of those surveyed said they were in favor of starting a dial-a-bus service. Dial-a-bus would provide door-to-door service to destinations within the village during non-rush hour periods. To get the service, residents would call the bus company and request a bus be dispatched to their location.

Village officials have indicated if the dial-a-bus service is started and is successful, they will consider expanding it to areas surrounding the village.

Finally, 100 households, or about 30 per cent, said the village should consider starting local village commuter service. The service would take residents to and from destinations in the village during the rush hours.

VILLAGE OFFICIALS have indicated they might consider going as far as Wheeling, Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg with the commuter service.

The survey was announced in this month's newsletter, which goes to homes in the village. A special answering service was set up for two days last week to handle calls from residents.

Trustee Jerry Driscoll, who was in charge of the survey, said yesterday he will present the results to the village board, which will consider the matter and decide what action should be taken.

According to Driscoll, "the survey gives a good indication of what the village wants," but more study should be made before the village adopts a public transportation system.

ALTHOUGH DRISCOLL said he is satisfied with the amount of response to the survey, he said an indication from the majority of residents in the village should be obtained before a decision is made on the transportation question.

Driscoll said the areas of the village with the heaviest response to the survey were Cambridge, and Lake and Cook County Strathmore. The areas that now have service tended to have a poorer response, he added.

He said he was somewhat surprised that more persons were in favor of the shopping shuttle service over the railroad commuter service.

Before the matter is acted on by the village board, Driscoll said it probably will be referred to the village transportation committee which will study it and make a recommendation.

Village officials said the survey was conducted because the village has received numerous inquiries about a transportation system.

But village 'can't afford it now': Larson

Buffalo Grove's current revenue will not permit the start of a village-subsidized public transportation system, according to Village Mgr. Daniel Larson.

"We obviously can't afford it with current tax revenues," Larson said yesterday. "If people want it we'll have to find alternate sources of revenue to finance it with."

Results of a village survey released yesterday showed that 94 per cent of the households that responded preferred some kind of public transportation system for the village.

Only 357 homes responded to the survey, and village officials have indicated further study will take place before the village considers adopting a public transportation system.

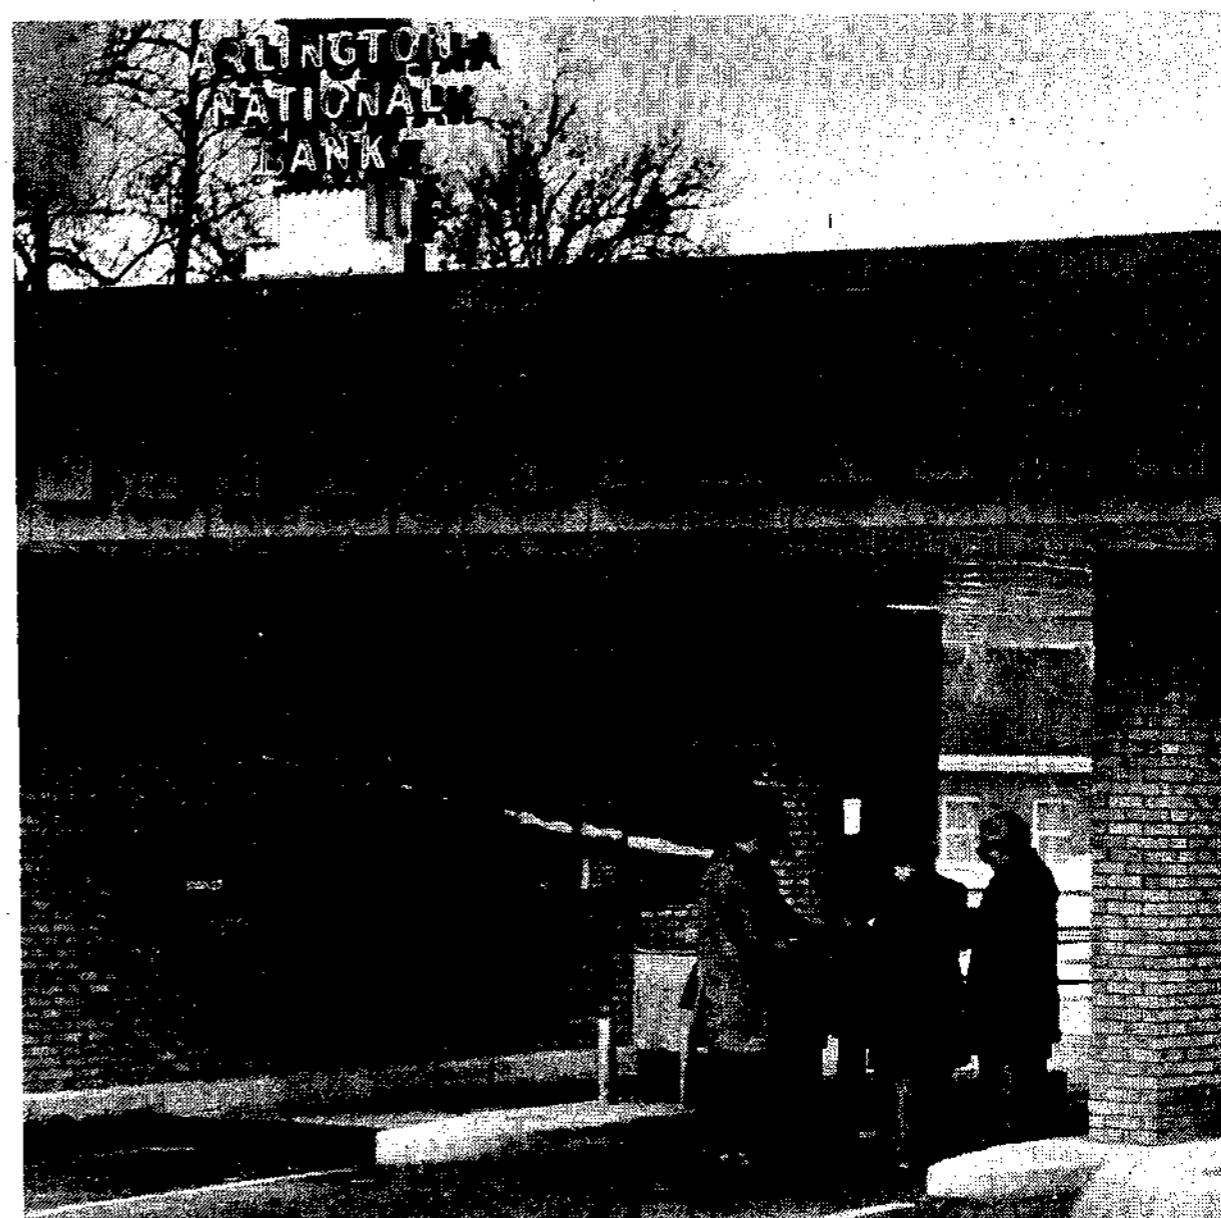

Larson said he wants to see what happens with the Regional Transportation Authority before making a recommendation to the village board. If the RTA is approved by voters March 19, he said a village transportation system might be unnecessary.

IF THE VILLAGE decides it does need a transportation system, Larson said the village will have to look at ways of raising additional money to support it. He said two possible alternate sources of revenue would be increased property taxes or initiation of a utility tax on electric or telephone bills.

The railroad commuter service now being operated between the Chicago and North Western Ry. station in Arlington Heights and Villa Verde and Mill Creek costs the village nothing. The company providing the service has indicated, however, that expansion of service throughout Buffalo Grove only can be done with a village subsidy.

The service in Mill Creek is an expansion of the Arlington Heights bus service. Arlington Heights is partially subsidizing the service.

"Before the village decides to do anything about a transportation system it will have to give it careful consideration," Larson said. "It's nice to have a bus system, but why go broke doing it?"

2 boys charged in 3 burglaries

Buffalo Grove police yesterday charged two youths with three burglaries committed Friday night in the village.

The two boys, Jeffery L. Bradlow, 17, of 335 Wheeling Ave., Wheeling, and an Arlington Heights juvenile, also were arrested last Friday by Arlington Heights police and charged with two burglaries in that community. The pair had been allegedly surprised in the act of burglarizing one of the Arlington Heights residences.

Bradlow appeared in Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court yesterday on the two Arlington Heights police charges.

Blood panel appeals for more donors

The Buffalo Grove Blood Commission is in serious need of donors for Sunday's blood drive at Buffalo Grove High School, Dundee and Arlington Heights roads.

Dr. Harold Gianopoulos, chairman of the commission, said yesterday only seven persons have registered as donors.

"If we don't get some more donors we're going to come up considerably short of our goal of 150 units," he said.

Last Saturday St. Mary's Church, 75 N. Buffalo Rd., had a blood drive which netted 144 pints. Gianopoulos said he is pleased with the response at St. Mary's, but is skeptical about the chance for success in the upcoming drive.

The Northwest Suburban Blood Center will have a mobile unit at the school between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Donors can make appointments for the drawing by calling the village at 537-8984.

UNDER THE village's program, all residents are eligible for free blood replacement anywhere in the United States if four per cent of the population donates a pint of blood each year.

The entire village is now covered, but continued donations are necessary to assure future eligibility.

If for some reason the village is short of its requirement, those who have donated and the members of their immediate family are still eligible. Under the program, persons are given as much blood as they need for as long as necessary.

Donors must be between 18 and 65 and weigh at least 110 pounds. Persons who have had hepatitis are not eligible to donate. Persons can donate blood every eight weeks, to a maximum of five times a year.

Two guest conductors for winter concert

Two guest conductors will appear with the Wheeling High School concert orchestra and wind symphony at the 10th annual winter concert Thursday at 8 p.m. at the school.

Walter Wolodkin of Maine North High School will conduct the orchestra and H.

Robert Reynolds, director of the band department at the University of Wisconsin, will direct the wind symphony.

The two groups will also be conducted by Jack Williamson, director of instrumental music at Wheeling.

Manhunt on for gunman

—or was it $100,000?

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman escaped with possibly as much as $100,000 or as little as $20,000 from an Arlington Heights drive-in bank Tuesday in a predawn holdup, setting off a wide police and FBI manhunt.

The First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility, Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road, was robbed at 6:45 a.m., apparently by two men, who police believe fled town and escaped on the Northwest Tollway.

Police bulletins of the robbery placed the take as high as $100,000, but bank spokesmen placed the figure at "$20,000 and even that could be high."

POLICE SAID a 23-year-old woman teller arrived at the drive-in facility at Eastman and Arlington Heights Road about 6:45 a.m. and was confronted by a masked man. The man brandished a blue steel automatic pistol and reportedly said, "I know you have the keys. I've been watching you for some time."

The gunman forced her to open the building and to turn off the alarm system. The teller then opened a small safe and gave the man two bags of cash which he placed in a blue cloth bag.

The teller was then taken out of the building and the gunman locked her keys inside. She was ordered to run south on Arlington Heights Road.

The teller told police she heard the man running and then the sound of a car driving away. She then ran to the main bank building at Dunton and Campbell streets, about four blocks away, where she telephoned police.

A POLICE TAPE recording of the call said, "I've been held up at the bank at Eastman and Arlington Heights... it's too late, he's gone."

The teller was crying and recordings of the police radio calls indicated there was some confusion about which facility was robbed. The first squad car arrived at the drive-in facility within a minute of the teller's call, according to the tapes.

Bruce Dodds, executive vice president of the bank, said an armed guard usually opens the drive-in bank at 6:45 a.m. but was late for work yesterday. He said the girl had picked up the keys to the facility from the main bank after she saw the guard was not there yet.

It was on her return to the drive-in building that she was surprised by the gunman.

THE BANK IS protected by an alarm and automatic camera system, according to Dodds. Arlington Heights police said the alarm is not directly hooked into the police station.

Dodds said the automatic camera operates at random intervals around the clock. Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall said the camera was not in operation at the time of the robbery.

McDougall said the gunman was calm and "professional" during the holdup. He said the gunman was not abusive to the teller and reassured her he just wanted the money and would not hurt her if she followed instructions.

McDougall said another person may be involved. He said it was significant the girl did not hear the sound of a motor starting before the getaway car left.

THE ROBBER was described as a black man about 35 years old and wearing a nylon stocking and sun glasses over his face. McDougall said the mask distorted his features making a composite sketch of the robber difficult. He was wearing a light brown raincoat.

The car is believed to be a large dark sedan, possibly a Ford, police said. It is thought to have been driven south on Arlington Heights Road.

McDougall said there was nothing to indicate at this time the robbery was an "inside job." Dodds said the guard had been employed by the bank for more than five years and the teller more than two years.

Dodds said an exact amount could not be placed on the robbery. Of the reports of $100,000 being taken, he said, "It doesn't take that kind of money to run a drive-in facility."

Police said there was more money than usual at the facility because of the extended holiday weekend.

The money is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case immediately.

The drive-in facility opens for business at 7 a.m.

This time, bank drive-up teller wasn't so lucky

by BETTY LEE

It was just two years ago Jan. 20 that a gunman appeared at the First Arlington National Bank drive-up window and ordered a 17-year-old woman teller to open the safe.

The tall, heavy set man brandished a snub-nosed revolver and threatened to kill her if she didn't hurry. While the gunman waited nervously outside the teller's cage the girl told him that an alarm would sound off if the door was opened. Then she crept into the cage and pushed a button to set a second alarm. Finally in desperation she threw the vault keys down the vent.

The holdup was thwarted and the gunman fled.

Yesterday a different teller at the drive-in facility at Arlington Heights Road and Eastman Avenue wasn't as lucky.

The robbery, the second at the First Arlington National Bank, whose main office is located at Campbell Street and Dunton Avenue, is the latest of several bank robberies in the Northwest suburbs in recent years.

LAST APRIL, a gunman walked into the North Point State Bank in Arlington Heights and approached a teller, demanding that she put money in a briefcase he carried with him.

He quietly walked out of the bank building with $18,000, unnoticed by other bank employees.

FBI agents are still looking for the gunman.

"The case is still under investigation," said Harry Walker of the Des Plaines FBI office. Walker could not say at the present time whether there were new leads to the robbery.

A PAIR OF MASKED gunmen surprised employees at the Bank of Buffalo Grove in 1972. The two hid in the basement near the vault and waited for the employees with the money.

The two made off with more than $111,000. In the two years since the robbery, no suspects have been arrested.

"Federal authorities have a pretty good idea who the perpetrators were, but being able to prove it is another story," said Buffalo Grove Chief Harry Walsh. He said his understanding of the case is that federal officials are lacking needed evidence to arrest the suspects.

Described as a modern-day "Bonnie and Clyde," Christopher McCarthy and his wife, Elaine, robbed the Des Plaines Trust and Savings Bank in 1971.

McCarthy told a teller at the bank to fill a large envelope with money. He fled with $1,900 in a car driven by his wife.

While on a robbery and kidnap spree McCarthy was killed in a shootout during a New Jersey bank robbery. Mrs. McCarthy fled the holdup scene but later committed suicide.

Boys' Baseball registration coming up

Registration for this year's Buffalo Grove Boys' Baseball program will be the next two weekends, Feb. 23-24 and March 2-3, at Emmerich Park, 150 Raupp Blvd.

The program is sponsored by the Buffalo Grove Recreation Assn. and is open to boys seven through 16 years old.

On Saturdays Feb. 23 and March 2 boys can register between 9 a.m. and noon. Registration will be conducted by age groups so more boys can be accommodated.

The specific times are:

- Farm League (7-8 year-olds) — 9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m.
- Minor League (9-10 year-olds) — 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.
- Major League (11-12 year-olds) — 10:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.
- Pony League (13-14 year-olds) — 11:30 a.m. to noon.
- Colt League (15-16 year-olds) — 11:30 a.m. to noon. Registration in this league is limited to 90 boys.

Registration on Sundays Feb. 24 and March 3 will be from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

The times for each league are:

- Farm League — 1 p.m. to 2:15 p.m.
- Minor League — 2:15 p.m. to 3 p.m.
- Major League — 2:15 p.m. to 3 p.m.
- Pony League — 3 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.
- Colt League — 3 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The league in which each boy is placed will be determined by his age as of July 31, 1974. Proof of age will be required of all prospective players registering in the Farm League and of all boys who have never participated in the program.

The registration fee for families with one boy in the Farm League, Minor League or Major League is $12.50. In addition the boy must pay $5 for five booster stickers which he is to attempt to sell.

Families with two boys participating in one of three leagues above will pay $17.50, as well as $5 for the booster stickers. Any family with three or more boys in the Farm, Minor or Major leagues will pay $27.50, plus $5 for the stickers.

Boys participating in the Pony and Colt leagues will be charged $20 because regulation umpires will be employed. The fee includes five booster stickers. If a family has more than one boy registering for the baseball program, but only one is in the Pony or Colt League, a prorated registration fee will be charged.

Oakton chooses river site for permanent campus

by WANDALYN RICE
The Oakton Community College board last night unanimously voted to choose a site on the Des Plaines River in unincorporated Maine Township as the permanent home for the college.

The action means college officials will now ask the Illinois Community College Board (ICCB) and State Board of Higher Education for their approval of the choice. If the state agencies agree, voters in Maine and Niles townships will be asked to approve a referendum to raise funds for purchase of the land. No exact figures have been released on the purchase price of the land.

The site is 123 acres of land owned by the Chicago Catholic Archdiocese located between Central Road and Golf Road in the northwest corner of Maine Township. College officials had the choice of either that site or the present interim campus college on Oakton Street in an industrial area of Morton Grove. The interim site is 27 acres.

PRIOR TO THEIR vote, Oakton board members heard speakers from Skokie and from Niles Township High School Dist. 219 urge them to choose the interim campus site because it is centrally located for all residents of the Oakton district.

However, board member Ray Hartstein and several other board members expressed the opinion that the Des Plaines River site was more suitable for a college than the much smaller interim site. Hartstein said, "We're going to get more land for less money and I believe we must move in that direction." He added, however, that residents of Skokie and other communities of the southeastern part of the college district could be served by satellite campuses.

Board member Vivian Medak said she voted for the Des Plaines River site even though, "I came on this board pretty much committed to a centrally-located campus."

SHE SAID PROBLEMS with possible condemnation procedures involved in buying the interim site in Morton Grove "will only prolong the problem of site."

The exact purchase price of both campuses is being kept secret because of pending negotiations. However, cost estimates for purchase and development of the two sites given the board in January by real estate consultants say that the Des Plaines River site will cost a total of approximately $17.5 million to develop, while the interim site would cost $18.4 million. The building on the interim site, because of its size, would have to be a high-rise.

This is the third time the Oakton board has chosen a site for the college to be submitted for state approval. The other two sites, including one at the Maryville Cemetery, were withdrawn after protests from residents of the surrounding area.

Grade school teacher suing district for rights violation

by LINDA PUNCH
An East Maine Elementary School teacher is suing the Dist. 63 Board for allegedly violating his civil rights in the aftermath of the 13-month contract dispute.

Jerome Slowinski, a member of the teachers union negotiation team, contends the board violated his rights by placing a letter of warning in his personnel file for allegedly threatening two custodians during the contract dispute. Slowinski, who denies the charges, is asking that the letter be removed from his files.

ROBERT DEFFENBAUGH, attorney for the East Maine Education Assn., said the suit was filed in U.S. District Court last week. He said that summonses are being sent to the board members.

EMEA Pres. Hank O'Neill announced last October that teacher union officers would also file suit against the board for letters of warning placed in EMEA official's files. He said the suit is aimed at board actions against teachers, including a board policy prohibiting teachers from wearing buttons referring to negotiations during class hours.

Deffenbaugh declined to comment on when the second suit will be filed.

Last October, the Dist. 63 Board voted to issue letters of warning to the 15 EMEA directors for committing "acts of unprofessional conduct and breaching teacher contracts." Charges filed against the teachers included organizing an illegal withholding of services in the form of a sick-in on Oct. 25 by teachers and encouraging teachers to remove materials necessary for teaching from their classrooms on Oct. 25.

Although Dist. 63 Board members denied the warning notices were in retaliation for union activities, union leaders termed the action "obvious reprisals."

CURTIS PLOTT, executive director of the Illinois Education Assn., said the Dist. 63 Board "clearly violated" the teachers' rights of free speech when it issued the button policy. The IEA was co-plaintiff in the suit.

In discussing Slowinski's case, Plott said the IEA recently won a decision against the Decatur School Board for reprisals taken against the teacher union leaders there.

"I think this case (Slowinski's) is a clear case of reprisal," he said. "They took action against him on information based largely on hearsay — he had no hearing."

The Dist. 63 board and the EMEA reached a settlement in the 1973-74 contract dispute Oct. 28, narrowly averting a strike scheduled for the following day.

Break-in reported at hospital clinic

Burglars forced their way into a clinic at Forest Hospital, 535 Wilson Ave., Des Plaines, but it was unknown yesterday if anything was taken in the break-in, according to police.

According to reports, the burglars forced their way into an office of the building after an unsuccessful try to make their way in by breaking the glass in a west side door.

Police said a nurse discovered the break-in Monday morning. The burglars are believed to have struck sometime over the weekend.

Jury refuses to indict sheriff's cops

A county grand jury has refused to indict several Cook County Sheriff's policemen suspected of being involved in a theft scheme at a suburban department store.

After hearing evidence last Thursday and Friday, the jury brought the inquiry to a close by filing a "no bill."

"The investigation has concluded with insufficient evidence to prosecute the case," said Assistant State's Atty. Lawrence Bolon. "And it will be terminated unless and until we get further evidence."

The probe was concentrated on an alleged plot in which several Niles division sheriff's policemen were accused of bilking the JC Penney department store at Golf Mill Shopping Center in Niles of about $800.

THERE WERE reports that a theft scheme took place about three years ago in which at least one of the policemen under investigation was moonlighting at the store as a security guard. Cash was said to have been taken from the store's daily receipts and replaced with forged checks made out for the stolen amounts.

The on-off inquiry got its start last October with information supplied by a Mount Prospect woman, Ruth Carbons, convicted last June of killing her husband, a lieutenant in the sheriff's police department.

The slain man, Joseph Carbons, was thought to have been a member of a theft-forgey scheme, according to reports at the time. Mrs. Carbons, who was ordered to serve 20 to 60 years in prison for the murder, reportedly gave information in hopes of reducing her sentence.

A probe was started in December, 1970, shortly after Sheriff Richard Eirok took office but became bogged down due largely to Carbons' death in December, 1971.

There were also reports last October that some Village of Niles policemen were involved in a coverup of the alleged theft scheme.

Bolon said no further probe of the matter is planned.

Haralan Popov

Haralan Popov to speak at church

Haralan Popov, author of "Tortured For His Faith," will speak at the First Baptist Church of Des Plaines, 501 W. Golf Rd., Saturday, at 7:30 p.m.

Popov was pastor of the largest Protestant church in communist Bulgaria for 12 years. He was imprisoned and tortured by the communists for 13 years. After his release he was banned from preaching. Later the Swedish ambassador intervened in his behalf with the Bulgarian authorities and Popov was allowed to join his family in Sweden.

Popov now resides in Glendale, Calif., and is president of "Evangelism to Communist Lands." This organization sends thousands of Bibles, broadcasts by short-wave radio and assists churches in Russia and other Communist lands.

How East Maine solved bus problem

by LINDA PUNCH
Last of a series

Ten years ago, administrators and parents in East Maine Elementary schools faced a dilemma — how to provide safe, low-cost bus service for youngsters in district schools.

Dissatisfied with the bus service provided by the United Motor Coach Co., school officials looked for an alternative to starting their own bus fleet. Like neighboring Districts 62 and 207, East Maine was not required by law to provide transportation to youngsters in the district.

And, like school administrators in the Des Plaines elementary and high school districts, Dist. 63 officials considered the cost of maintaining a bus fleet prohibitive.

EAST MAINE'S solution — a committee composed of parents, administrators and board members to set specifications and seek bids for bus service.

"The district didn't get into busing because we don't have enough children riding buses to get reimbursement," Dist. 63 business manager James Bowen said. "Also, we would have to provide routes for parochial and private schools within the boundary."

School officials decided it is "cheaper for parents to pay for transportation" for the two years youngsters attend junior high school than to "pay additional taxes for a lifetime," Bowen added.

The committee, which has no legal status, draws up requirements for the district bus service and then seeks bids from bus companies.

Parents then enter into "a gentlemen's agreement" with the company, usually for three-year periods.

"Although it's an informal agreement, a new state law requires bus companies involved in this type of situation to file a performance bond," Bowen said. "It guarantees that the bus company will complete all its obligations."

THE BUSINESS MANAGER noted that specifications set by the committee are "pretty much standard — the number of students, number of school days and the hours." The committee always asks the bus company to abide by bus safety regulations set down by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Many of the complaints of parents and school officials about United Motor Coach stemmed from the bus company's failure to comply with state guidelines for yellow school buses.

Since UMC buses are legally classified as commercial carriers, the company must meet only the specifications set down by the Illinois Commerce Commission. The more stringent regulations — required of all yellow school buses — are optional.

State School bus regulations require special equipment for yellow buses including front and rear flashing lights, first aid kit, fire extinguishers, automatic buzzer for the emergency door and a shield over the rear bumper next to an emergency door.

IN ADDITION, a regular school bus must also be painted bright yellow with "School Bus" signs plainly visible. Each bus also has a "Stop" arm that swings out when children are boarding or getting off.

Regulations for operating a yellow school bus include no overloading of students, no standing while the bus is in motion and the use of flashing lights when loading and unloading students.

Drivers are also required to stop between 15 and 30 feet before any railroad crossing and open the door to listen and look for any trains. When students leaving the bus have to cross a highway, the driver must direct the children to the # $20,000 stolen from bank —or was it $100,000?

Dodds said an exact amount could not be placed on the robbery. Of the reports of $100,000 being taken, he said, "It doesn't take that kind of money to run a drive-in facility."

Police said there was more money than usual at the facility because of the extended holiday weekend.

The money is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case immediately.

The drive-in facility opens for business at 7 a.m.

FBI AGENTS HUDDLE at the drive-in facility of the First Arlington National Bank. The loss, estimated at up to $100,000, was federally insured. Police said they are following several leads in the holdup.

An equal-opportunity columnist

The management of this column provides equal space to responsible persons with differing viewpoints than expressed here. The following is a rebuttal:

"As you can remember my mom told you about my paper route. Here is my story. My mother is the first person I knew to throw the Blomquist paper on their roof. Or say there is a two inch snowfall on the street, not plowed, with a 10-speed bike I can do my route in 15 minutes. Whenever she drives me (which is seldom) she swears and she says she is a sucker and also says this is the last time, I am not a paperboy and it is your job. Then she yells at me at home. When I can't do my route she says walk it, I say no it takes me 30 minutes. She thinks that I have five hours which I don't. I could go on for five more pages about her. But I can't. So this is my story."

—Billy Oliver

P.S. My first day I woke up by 1 a.m. and relied my papers backwards, she told me they were wrong.

P.P.S. Some of this information might be changed by my mom. (Editor's Note: All I did was correct your spelling, sweetheart).

WHEN I WORKED in the woman's department, one of the favorite stories that made the rounds every fall at the beginning of the club season was of an Itasca woman's organization that held a raffle and was raided by the police for gambling.

I don't know if the incident ever really happened but the story was used as an example during publicity workshops to illustrate that gambling is gambling is gambling — even in the form of an innocent raffle.

Raffles, drawings, Las Vegas nights — even penny-ante poker games — are considered gambling in Des Plaines. The reality of the law — Sect. 8, Chapter 2 in the city code book — came to light recently when a Park Ridge PTA tried to schedule their Las Vegas fund raiser in the Des Plaines VFW.

The PTA moved the event to Des Plaines when Niles Mayor Nicholas

Blase ousted them from his town saying the event was "pure gambling." Des Plaines officials reacted in an identical manner saying "If we know about it we won't let it happen."

In Des Plaines the move occurred when officials were forced into the uncomfortable situation created by Blase. Both the police chief and the mayor confirmed that fund-raiser gambling was against the law and was not allowed when officials were aware of it.

BUT WAIT a minute... Literally hundreds of press releases have crossed my desk over the years publicizing every imaginable type of drawing, raffle and give-away. Cars, mink stoles, trips to the south seas, bikes, dinners — you name it they've raffled it off.

The raffles and drawings are the drawing card for just about every woman's organization fashion show that's ever been held. Local churches, hospitals, service clubs and social organizations annually share in the monetary rewards reaped by this form of gambling.

Not only the non-profit groups participate, hundreds of stores — from pet shops to banks — play the ticket game. It's good for business. The stores don't have to put out much money and the customers love the game of chance.

Yet I've never heard of the local police crashing through the doors of a church, club or restaurant to shut down the operation. Even when the event is publicized with posters in every store front in town there has yet to be a reaction from a city official.

Right this minute I know of three raffles that are going on and another slew of woman's clubs are holding fashion shows featuring "door prize" drawings.

What's going to be done about it? Nothing. The Park Ridge Las Vegas night will probably find a spot outside of Des Plaines and the fund-raiser will probably be a huge success. And the rest of the "illegal" activities will go on, as per schedule without so much as a wink from the local police.

It's relatively harmless — but is it right?

Museum curator to give slide show

Historians to see elegant fashions

Elegant fashions from "The Age of Opulence" will be discussed at the February meeting of the Des Plaines Historical Society.

Elizabeth Jachimowicz, curator of costumes at the Chicago Historical Society, will present a program on costumes of the 19th century — one of the most elegant periods in American history.

The program will begin at 8 p.m., Wednesday, Feb. 27, in the meeting room of the historical museum, 777 Lee St.

The lecture will be illustrated with a slide presentation. The Des Plaines Historical Society will have some of its more recent costume acquisitions on exhibit to compare with those mentioned during the program.

A short business meeting will precede the fashion program.

NEEDLEPOINT will be the topic of the upcoming program in the Historical Museum's craft series. Mrs. Jan Sinamon will instruct two sessions, open to members and nonmembers of the Historical Society.

Material will be furnished by the museum, but participants should bring their own scissors. Mrs. Sinamon will teach five needlepoint stitches — enough to complete an eyeglass case, makeup bag, purse or similar item.

Registration for the sessions is now being taken and will remain open until March 1. Classes will be held at the museum Thursday, March 7 at 10 a.m. and Saturday, March 9, at 1 p.m. Call 297-4912 to register.

JAMES H. KINDER, president of B. F. Kinder's Sons Inc., has been appointed to the board of directors of the society. Kinder will fill the unexpired term of Wayne Michalski, who resigned recently because of other responsibilities.

Kinder is a past president of the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce and Industry and president of Des Plaines' oldest business establishment.

THE MUSEUM is embarking on a new program for recruiting, training and scheduling volunteers in cooperation with the local Junior Woman's Club.

The new volunteer program will aid and expand services at the Museum and those interested in donating five hours a month are asked to call the Museum.

Six training sessions will be held beginning Feb. 26 from 1 to 3 p.m. New volunteers will learn early Des Plaines history, receive lessons in spinning and weaving and take a tour of the Chicago Historical Society.

Volunteers guide school groups and other visitors through the museum.

AN EXHIBIT of bells is on display at the Historical Museum, and will remain until the end of February.

Also on exhibit is a collection of turn of the century handkerchiefs. Lace patterns on the handkerchiefs are similar to bed linen and wallpaper patterns of the era. According to Richard Welch, director of the museum, it was a common practice for homemakers at that time to repeat patterns throughout a home.

New donations to the museum include eight Edison cylinder phonograph records from Richard Cornell; an 1880 dresser from Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hitch; three antique hand-carved dolls from Mrs. Lottie Schultz and two antique dress forms from the First Congregational Church.

School board's Sparks hedges on reelection bid

With the first day to file nominating petitions for open seats on the Dist. 59 school board only a week away, Board Pres. Allen K. Sparks has indicated he's "keeping my options open" and might be a candidate for reelection.

Sparks, who is completing his second three-year term on the Elk Grove Township board, said last year he would not seek reelection this year.

"I haven't made up my mind yet," said Sparks when asked again if he will be a candidate for reelection. Sparks did say he had taken out the necessary petition papers, which have to be signed by 50 district voters before his name can be placed on the school board election ballot.

Those who wish to run for one of the two open seats on the board in the April 13 election can pick up petition forms at the Dist. 59 Administration Center, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

The first day to file the petitions is Wednesday, Feb. 27.

Qualifications for a school board member include that the candidate be a U. S. citizen 21 years of age or older. Also required is that the candidate be a legal voter who has lived in the state and school district at least one year prior to the election.

Petitions have to be filed by March 22 in order for the candidate's name to appear on the school board ballot. Elections this year will be on Saturday, April 13, at all Dist. 59 schools.

Dist. 59 includes Elk Grove Village and parts of Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect.

Board member Erwin Poklacki, who also is up for reelection this year, has reaffirmed his intention not to seek reelection to the seven member board.

For more information on the school board election or how to obtain an absentee ballot for the election, residents are asked to contact the Dist. 59 administration center, 437-1000.

front of the bus and signal them when it is safe to cross.

Fees for Dist. 63 children, riding buses provided by Scholastic Transit Co., are comparable to the fees paid by youngsters riding United Motor Coach buses. Dist. 63 students can purchase bus passes for $25 a semester or $50 a year. Maine Township High School students pay approximately $87 a year (20 rides for $3.75) and Dist. 62 students $73 a year (10 rides for $3.25).

DIST. 63 BOARD Pres. Irene Luck said she believes East Maine students are getting better service for their money. In addition to Scholastic drivers having to meet the regulations of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, she noted that each bus also has radio communication with the dispatcher.

"If there's a breakdown or a bus is going to be late, the driver can notify the company who can notify the school," she said.

United bus drivers' case continued

The case of five United Motor Coach drivers arrested on charges of overcrowding buses and safety violations was continued until March 8 in the Mount Prospect Branch of the Cook County Circuit Court.

The five drivers were arrested by state police Jan. 21 at Maine North High School as classes let out for the day. A representative of the state police said the ticketing stemmed from students complaints of overcrowded conditions on the buses.

PTA notes

Orchard Place School PTA will present the annual Founders Day program Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the multi-purpose room. Orchard PTA is celebrating 30 years of PTA membership. Guest speaker will be Margaret Wagner, Illinois PTA public relations chairman.

The program will include a presentation of the growth and achievements of PTA followed by a panel discussion entitled "Everything you've ever wanted to know about school and PTA, but were afraid to ask." Members of the panel will be Ronald Wuczynski, principal of Orchard Place; Eric Sahiberg, superintendent of School Dist. 63; Robert Miller, Board of Education member; Diane Trembeth, teacher; Margaret Wagner, Illinois PTA; Harriet Sarlo, PTA president, and Charlene Bath, historian.

Children's art work will be on display in the cafeteria where refreshments will be served. The public is invited.

Swimming signups begin Thursday

Grab your water wings and swim suits. Swimmers of all ages can sign up, starting Thursday, for the Mount Prospect Park District's interim swimming lessons.

A spokesman for the park district said signups for the five different courses will begin at 9 a.m. at Lions Park, 411 S. Maple St., Mount Prospect. Courses will be offered for preschool children, beginning boys and girls, advanced beginners, through advanced swimmers, junior and senior life saving, and adults.

Fees will differ, depending on the course, but none will exceed $5, the spokesman said. The five-week courses will meet twice a week starting March 4. Further information can be obtained by calling the park pool at 437-6188 after 3:30 p.m. each day.

Man, 29, found incompetent to stand trial

A Des Plaines man was turned over to state mental health authorities yesterday after being found mentally incompetent to stand trial for the August, 1973, shooting of his roommate.

Antal Schmidt, 29, of 910 Beau Dr., was ordered sent to the Chester Mental Health Center, Chester, Ill., after he appeared in Cook County Circuit Court in Chicago on charges of attempted murder and aggravated battery.

Schmidt was arrested by Des Plaines police after he allegedly shot his roommate, Peter Klein, 29, also of the Beau Drive address, eight times at close range.

Klein was released after a two-week stay at Holy Family Hospital after suffering bullet wounds in the jaw, chest and hand.

The August 28 shooting apparently stemmed from a feud that had been brewing between the two over the use of a sportscar they shared, police said.

BOTH MEN worked as mechanics for the same Westmont, Ill., auto dealer and Klein reportedly took the car to work that day forcing Schmidt to stay home without transportation.

Klein was coming home for the day and had just entered the apartment when he was shot.

A building resident, startled by the gunfire, alerted police who arrived moments later and nabbed Schmidt as he walked onto his apartment patio. Klein, meanwhile staggered into an adjacent apartment and was found by police.

Trustee 'conjures' composite picture of west-of-53 man

To dispel a myth that Elk Grove Village residents living west of Ill. Rte. 53 are "shirt tail relatives" village trustee George Spees "conjured up" a composite west-of-53 homeowner.

Trustee Spees and other village officials spoke Tuesday before a small gathering of area residents at Link Elementary School.

The purpose of the meeting scheduled by the PTA was to allow village officials and residents in that part of the village to exchange information and worries.

Spees' west-of-53 man:

- Lives on an island surrounded by a sea of mud.
- Is convinced all precipitation drains to the lowest level of his lot.
- Has numerous house defects no one cares about, especially village officials.
- Believes construction vehicles run road races past his house which will soon be surrounded by nothing but high-rise tenements.

• Thinks the Elk Grove fire department won't answer his calls and even if it wanted to, couldn't find the street he lives on.

• Is absolutely positive men who plow snow for the village are devilishly planning to bury his house.

• And, finally, believes that the only calls he gets from village officials are to seek his blood.

ALTHOUGH MOST of Elk Grove Village is in Elk Grove Township and is served by Elementary School Dist. 59, and High School Dist. 214, the area around Link School is not. People west of Rte. 53, although still village residents, are in Schaumburg Township and their children attend schools in Elementary Dist. 54 and High School Dist. 211.

From a few of the questions residents fired at police and fire department representatives Tuesday, it can be surmised they sometimes feel they are not served by Elk Grove Village at all.

One man said he knew of a case where Link school officials called the Elk Grove police for help, only to be told to go to the Schaumburg department for help, because the school was not covered by Elk Grove Village.

OTHER COMPLAINTS voiced were mostly about construction traffic, speeding cars and a general feeling of neglect.

Trustee Spees explained the workings of Elk Grove Village government to the residents. He told them "You only know what you read about us, unless you come to board meetings or we meet in this manner to exchange information."

Spees said he wanted the audience to humor him as he described the composite of a resident who lives west of Rte. 53. "I want you to know that I got this picture from actual complaints that have come out of this area to the village," he said.

Trustee Spees' picture evoked some laughter but a few that's-just-the-way-it-is-buddy remarks from the audience. However, as Spees and others present — like Capt. Al Mergens of the fire department, Sgt. John Bantener of the police department and trustees Nanci Vanderveel, George Stedder and Michael Tosto — explained the services are available from the village and stressed officials' concern that residents in all areas of the village be served equally, the crowd relaxed.

Franklin Pk. youth killed after chase

A Franklin Park youth, wanted for driving with expired license plates and no headlights, was killed just outside Elk Grove Village early yesterday when his car struck a utility pole after a high-speed police chase.

Jerome L. Ludmann, 16, was pinned in the wreckage of his car a few blocks north of Thorndale Avenue on Elmhurst-York Road and was pronounced dead at Alexian Brothers Medical Center at 2:15 a.m.

Police from five suburbs were involved in the chase which started in Franklin Park at about 1:30 a.m., according to police reports.

Units from Cook and DuPage county sheriff's police along with Northlake, Bensenville and Elk Grove Village police took part in the 10-minute chase.

Cook County Sheriff's Police first tried to stop the car at Wolf Road and Grand Avenue in Franklin Park. The youth sped off as officers approached the car, police said.

NORTHLAKE police spotted the car a few minutes later, driving without lights, headed west on Grand. Northlake police were just about to radio in the car's description when Cook County Sheriff's Police came on the state emergency radio network with the description of the car they had tried to stop.

According to police, the speeding car crashed through a roadblock set up by Bensenville police on York Road near Green Street, but no policemen were injured.

Minutes later, Ludmann's car, driving at a high rate of speed with no lights, struck an Elk Grove Village Police car driven by Patrolman Russell Sonneveld on York Road near Thorndale Avenue and continued northbound.

Sonneveld continued in pursuit and discovered Ludmann's auto off the road a few blocks north.

Sonneveld was not injured but was taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center for observation.

Buffalo Grove junior high's attendance plummets

by JILL BETTNER

A locker slams and the sound, magnified several times by the silence in the nearly empty halls, resounds through Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove.

Normally jammed with students, laughing and jostling each other as they hurry to classes, the halls are virtually deserted, drained by a wave of flu and similar illnesses that have hit almost half the school's 750-student population.

One Cooper student, 14-year-old Dale Chany, died Monday of Reye's Syndrome, a rare childhood disease that doctors believe usually follows a flu or chicken pox virus.

An autopsy conducted at Evanston Hospital yesterday confirmed that the boy, who resided at 816 Brittany Dr., Arlington Heights, was apparently the latest victim of the puzzling disease that has killed at least six others in the Chicago area in the past two weeks.

ALTHOUGH THE absentee rate at Cooper has been steadily increasing over the past month, the extraordinary number of students out this week indicates that many parents are being especially cautious and keeping at home children who show even the slightest flu symptoms.

School board head Sparks hedging on reelection bid

With the first day to file nominating petitions for open seats on the Dist. 59 school board only a week away, Board Pres. Allen K. Sparks has indicated he's "keeping my options open" and might be a candidate for reelection.

Sparks, who is completing his second three-year term on the Elk Grove Township board, said last year he would not seek reelection this year.

"I haven't made up my mind yet," said Sparks when asked again if he will be a candidate for reelection. Sparks did say he had taken out the necessary petition papers, which have to be signed by 50 district voters before his name can be placed on the school board election ballot.

Those who wish to run for one of the two open seats on the board in the April 13 election can pick up petition forms at the Dist. 59 Administration Center, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

The first day to file the petitions is Wednesday, Feb. 27.

Qualifications for a school board member include that the candidate be a U. S. citizen 21 years of age or older. Also required is that the candidate be a legal voter who has lived in the state and school district at least one year prior to the election.

Petitions have to be filed by March 22 in order for the candidate's name to appear on the school board ballot. Elections this year will be on Saturday, April 13, at all Dist. 59 schools.

Dist. 59 includes Elk Grove Village and parts of Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect.

Board member Erwin Poklacki, who also is up for reelection this year, has reaffirmed his intention not to seek reelection to the seven member board.

For more information on the school board election or how to obtain an absentee ballot for the election, residents are asked to contact the Dist. 59 administration center, 437-1000.

Allen K. Sparks

that Reye's Syndrome might be contagious, some parents want to see the school closed, he said, and one even suggested that the building be fumigated.

ACCORDING TO U. S. Department of Health official, Dr. Robert Rubin of the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Georgia, Reye's Syndrome is "definitely not contagious."

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill yesterday said he is not considering closing Cooper or any of the other 16 schools in the district that are also reporting "higher than usual" absences.

"Our information is that there's nothing we can gain by closing the schools," Gill said. "We want parents to keep children home if they feel ill or have fevers, but we do that all the time."

"The thing I'm really concerned about is the panic that could become associated with this kind of thing," the superintendent said. "I know it's difficult because parents are concerned and I can sympathize with them, but we have to try to remain calm."

AT COOPER, students and teachers are "numb" at Dale Chany's death. The eighth grader was a top student and an outstanding athlete.

Memorial services for Dale are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Kolssak of Wheeling Funeral Home, 189 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Dale was a member of the Cooper cross-country track team and a special award for future runners is being established in his memory. The honor will go to the most improved second-year member of the team each year.

Manhunt on for gunman

$20,000 stolen from bank

—or was it $100,000?

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman escaped with possibly as much as $100,000 or as little as $20,000 from an Arlington Heights drive-in bank Tuesday in a predawn holdup, setting off a wide police and FBI manhunt.

The First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility, Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road, was robbed at 6:45 a.m., apparently by two men, who police believe fled town and escaped on the Northwest Tollway.

Police bulletins of the robbery placed the take as high as $100,000, but bank spokesmen placed the figure at "$20,000 and even that could be high."

POLICE SAID a 23-year-old woman teller arrived at the drive-in facility at Eastman and Arlington Heights Road about 6:45 a.m. and was confronted by a masked man. The man brandished a blue steel automatic pistol and reportedly said, "I know you have the keys. I've been watching you for some time."

The gunman forced her to open the building and to turn off the alarm system. The teller then opened a small safe and gave the man two bags of cash which he placed in a blue cloth bag.

The teller was then taken out of the building and the gunman locked her keys inside. She was ordered to run south on Arlington Heights Road.

The teller told police she heard the man running and then the sound of a car driving away. She then ran to the main bank building at Dunton and Campbell streets, about four blocks away, where she telephoned police.

A POLICE TAPE recording of the call said, "I've been held up at the bank at Eastman and Arlington Heights . . . it's too late, he's gone."

The teller was crying and recordings of the police radio calls indicated there was some confusion about which facility was robbed. The first squad car arrived at the drive-in facility within a minute of the teller's call, according to the tapes.

Bruce Dodds, executive vice president of the bank, said an armed guard usually opens the drive-in bank at 6:45 a.m. but was late for work yesterday. He said the girl had picked up the keys to the facility from the main bank after she saw the guard was not there yet.

It was on her return to the drive-in building that she was surprised by the gunman.

THE BANK IS protected by an alarm and automatic camera system, according to Dodds. Arlington Heights police said the alarm is not directly hooked into the police station.

Dodds said the automatic camera operates at random intervals around the clock. Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall said the camera was not in operation at the time of the robbery.

McDougall said the gunman was calm and "professional" during the holdup. He said the gunman was not abusive to the teller and reassured her he just wanted the money and would not hurt her if she followed instructions.

McDougall said another person may be involved. He said it was significant the girl did not hear the sound of a motor starting before the getaway car left.

THE ROBBER was described as a black man about 35 years old and wearing a nylon stocking and sun glasses over his face. McDougall said the mask distorted his features making a composite sketch of the robber difficult. He was wearing a light brown raincoat.

The car is believed to be a large dark sedan, possibly a Ford, police said. It is thought to have been driven south on Arlington Heights Road.

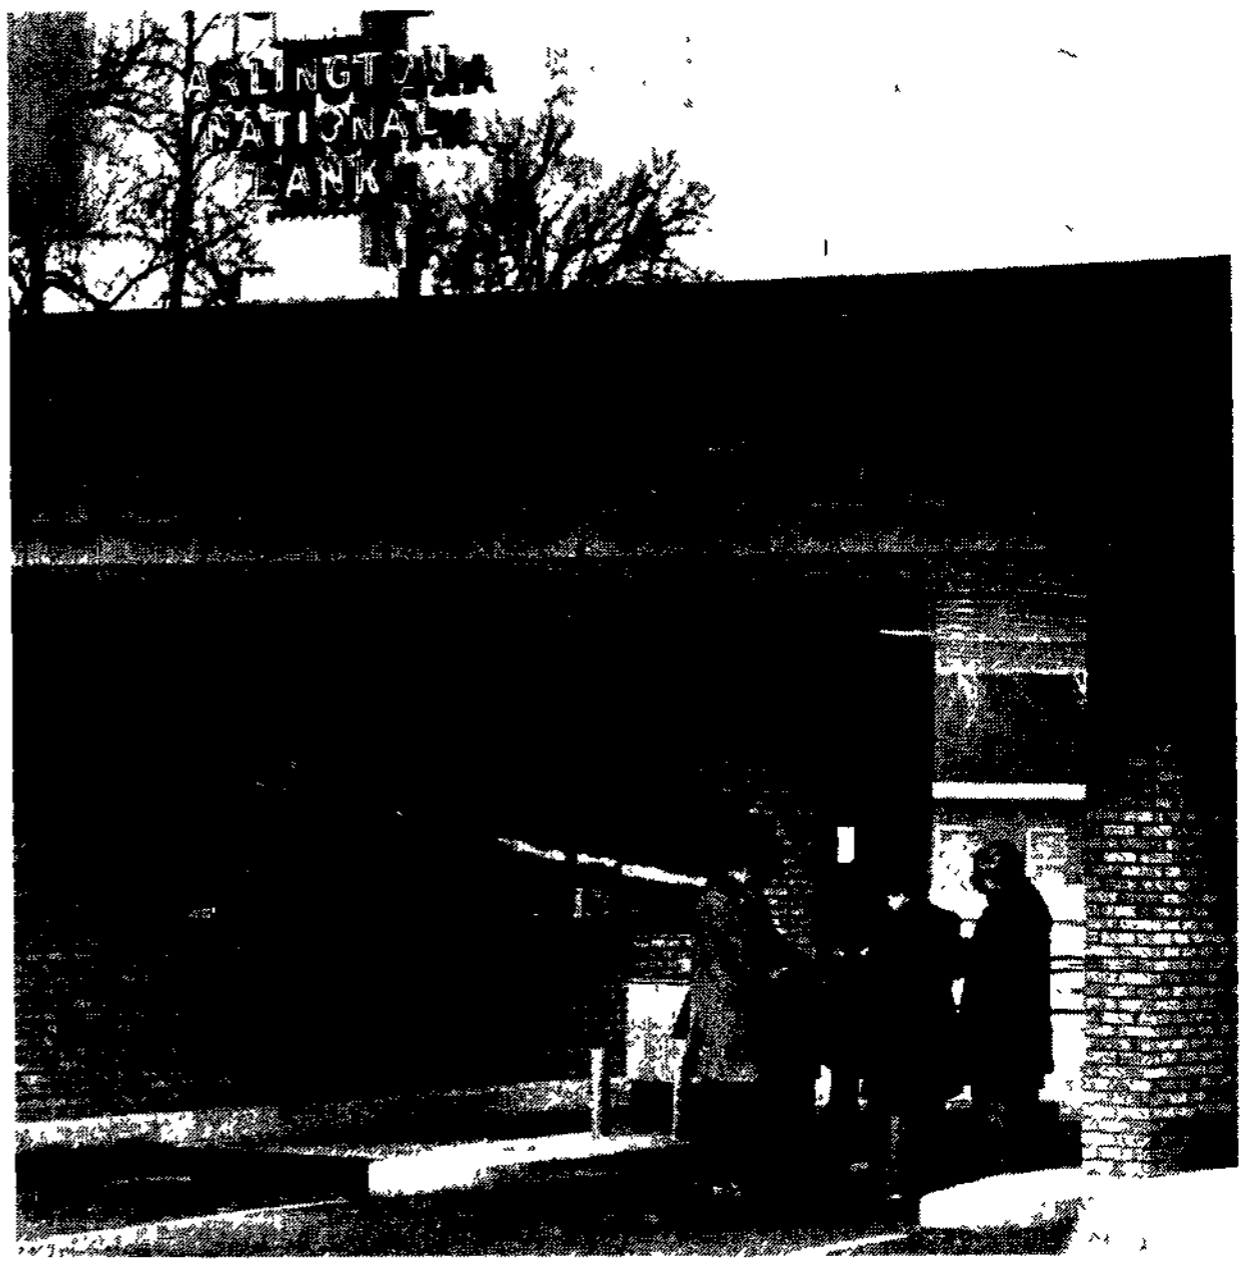

McDougall said there was nothing to indicate at this time the robbery was an "inside job." Dodds said the guard had been employed by the bank for more than five years and the teller more than two years.

Dodds said an exact amount could not be placed on the robbery. Of the reports of $100,000 being taken, he said, "It doesn't take that kind of money to run a drive-in facility."

Police said there was more money than usual at the facility because of the extended holiday weekend.

The money is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case immediately.

The drive-in facility opens for business at 7 a.m.

FBI AGENTS HUDDLE at the drive-in facility of the First Arlington National Bank. The loss, estimated at up to $100,000, was federally insured. Police said they are following several leads in the holdup.

Junior finally gets his say

The management of this column provides equal space to responsible persons with differing viewpoints than expressed here. The following is a rebuttal:

As you can remember my mom told you about my paper route. Here is my story. My mother is the first person I know to throw the Blomquist paper on their roof. Or say there is a two-inch snowfall on the street, not plowed, with a 10-speed bike I can do my route in 15 minutes. Whenever she drives me (which is seldom) she swears and she says she is a sucker and also says this is the last time. I am not a paperboy and it is your job. Then she yells at me at home. When I can't do my route she says walk it. I say no. It takes me 30 minutes. She thinks that I have five hours which I don't. I could go on for five more pages about her. But I can't. So this is my story.

—Billy Oliver

P.S. My first day I woke up by 1 a.m. and rolled my papers backwards, she told me they were wrong.

P.P.S. Some of this information might be changed by my mom. (Editor's note: All I did was correct your spelling, sweetheart.)

THE BOARD of directors of the Boys' Baseball Assn. met in a special session last week with parents — and the board never had a chance.

More than 200 parents booed, jeered and shouted down discussion of an organizational change and succeeded in pressuring board members to "do it our way."

Which side was right or wrong is insignificant compared to the way the meeting was conducted. The board was attempting to reorganize the number of leagues. Prior to the "almost change" there were three leagues — major, A, and B. Under the change there would have been major, A, B and C — and possibly D — giving additional skill categories to the structure.

Boys have always played according to their ability with the three levels. The change would have created four ability levels for the 500 9- to 12-year-olds who play. It doesn't seem like anything to get hysterical about but the evening was filled with the type of outbursts you'd normally hear during a discussion on amnesty or impeachment.

Both sides made it perfectly clear that they were only thinking of the boys — those little, innocent kids that get on the field and swing the bat around all in the name of good clean fun.

THERE WAS all sorts of noble talk about teaching the boys sportsmanship, fair play, citizenship — even a few fundamentals of baseball. Well, I'm glad the kids weren't out at this meeting for they say children learn from the behavior of adults and this wasn't an example of all that.

Here are a few choice quotes:

"Aw c'mon, sit down."

"Damn it, will you let me finish"

"He's a jerk — what does he know?"

"Boo. Boo. Booooooo."

"I think this has been a good meeting"

"(Maybe he just walked in.)"

"Can I talk . . . Can I talk"

"Just a minute here, I just want to make one point."

"Booooooo."

"(Moaning and groaning sounds mixed with a few grumbles.)"

I'm not sure if these examples fit under the category of sportsmanship or fair play — maybe its called fundamentals of baseball.

BOTH SIDES had a club or two to hold over the other's head. The audience won because they had a bigger club:

Audience member — "Are we going to go back and forth all night like a bunch of kids? Are your minds made up or do we have the possibility of changing your minds?" He then told the board that if they didn't change their minds the parents would go to the park district and form their own league. Everyone applauded loudly and he added, "You're talking to mature adults; you're not talking to a bunch of young kids." (One club for the parents)

Board member — "How many people here have sons that will play in the majors this year. (Pause, mumble, grumble, question, discussion.) That's a lot of people." He then explained that because there were so many their sons will probably only get to bat one time and only get to play one inning a game. (One club for the board.)

Then there was the "let's settle this thing my way," speech:

Audience member — "You're not here to shove anything down our throat and we're not here to shove anything down yours . . . Sometimes things happen — you go off in a direction and you don't know maybe exactly how you got there or that you would have done it again after a little more reflection. (This is called "giving them an out.") We don't want to crucify anybody but I would say the fact that you do have a big crowd here tonight — take advantage of this crowd, don't scare them away. Among all of us we can get this thing straightened out and everybody goes home happy."

IMMEDIATELY after the applause died down another man stood up and defended the rules change. He was booed down by the happy audience.

Like I said the board never had a chance. They took one last look at that crowd and voted for the old system.

How else could they have reacted? Even if they were unquestionably right, even if they had every logical reason in the world on their side — what could they do when 20 per cent of the organization as much as said, "Play the game my way or I'll take my bat and ball and coach and manager and kid and go home."

Committee seeks to keep hot lunch cost at 55 cents

A board of education committee will recommend Thursday night the price of a hot lunch in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 remain at 55 cents, despite a 13.5 per cent hike in the charge by a supplier.

The board's business committee met yesterday morning to review potential action in the face of what had been estimated as a $4,000 deficit anticipated in the hot lunch account because of the cost increase. But Dist. 54 Business Mgr.

Marvin Lopicola told committee members the deficit has been recomputed, and now is expected to be $884, what he termed "the break even range."

Lopicola said the discrepancy stemmed from the fact he had included the labor cost of lunch hour supervisors in his first computation. The supervisors are needed, whether the district serves hot lunches or children bring cold lunches from home, he said.

THE SALARY cost was removed from the figures for the second estimate, said Lopicola.

Lopicola also noted the figures are based on lunch volume sales. If the volume goes up, the deficit will be reduced, and could in fact become a small surplus, he said.

Board member Arlene Czajkowski also noted labor costs would increase if the district raised the lunch price by one penny, as workers then would have to count change for each lunch.

The district's supplier, Mass Feeding Corp. of Elk Grove Village, informed the board earlier this month the lunch cost to the district effective Feb. 1 would increase by 2.5 cents to 47.7 cents per lunch.

The 7.3-cent difference in the cost to the student is to pay direct operating costs of supervisors, rubbish removal, tickets, utilities, wiring, tables and trash compactors. All operating costs were deleted from figures which produced the $684 deficit figure.

Illinois State dean's list

Ten Elk Grove Village residents have been named to the dean's list at Illinois State University at Normal.

Students cited for academic achievement for the first semester were Sandra Duncan, James Ecklund, Michael Halladay, Caryn Hauser, Marc Mydall, Susan Proehl, Carol Roistad, Tom Siewert, Kimberly Vanberkum and Jacquelyn Walsh.

Sears plans warehouse in village

Sears Roebuck and Co. plans to break ground this spring in Elk Grove Village for a warehouse that will offer jobs for 2,000 persons and will eventually serve as the company's national distribution point for all clothing items.

Project manager R. M. Jacobsen said the firm has not applied for a building permit and the facility still is in the design stage. "However, we still see a spring start for the project contemplated on the southeast corner of the Devon Avenue-Busse Road intersection," he added.

The 90-acre site will house a warehouse Sears representatives describe as completely automated, using computers and conveyor belts to transport merchandise.

Jacobsen said the building would be built in three stages over a 10-year period.

He stressed that the Sears building would be mainly a warehouse with a small outlet store where surplus or returned merchandise would be sold.

Elk Grove Village Mgr. Charles Willis said Sears does not have to consult the village about its construction plans since the site is now zoned for warehouse construction. They will, however submit finalized building plans when they apply for a building permit.

The firm is still several steps away from that point. We are making revisions daily on the plans and are not out or even ready for bids," Jacobsen said.

School Dist. 59 wrapup

Junior high to be dedicated May 5

The Elk Grove Township School Board has voted to move back the dedication of the district's newest school until May 5.

Friendship Junior High School in Des Plaines, which opened its doors in September after a long delay, had been scheduled to be dedicated in March.

The board switched to the May date by a 5-2 vote with members Judy Zanca and Charles Knaup voting against the change.

Several persons have been mentioned as possible speakers for the ceremony, including Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott.

Ventilating bid OKd

The board approved a bid from the Trane Co. for ventilating units which will be used in the remodeling of Grove and Dempster junior highs this summer.

The board had earlier agreed to purchase the ventilators independently, before a contractor for the job is selected, to assure that the units will be on hand in time for them to be installed this summer.

Trane's low bid was for $107,824, with delivery promised within 60 to 75 days.

Help on way for Byrd, Jay

The long-awaited help for the heating and ventilating problems at Byrd School in Elk Grove Village and Jay School in Mount Prospect may be coming soon.

The board approved the hiring of a consultant to evaluate the systems at the two schools at a cost of $1,200 per building.

Fluid Engineering Co. will do the study and will balance the systems, if required, for an additional $1,000 per building.

Transit pact delayed

Final approval of the district's transportation contract for the 1974-75 school year with David Meyer Bus Service has been delayed again.

The board will discuss the contract Thursday, Feb. 28, at the administration center, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

The regular meeting of the board last Monday was adjourned to reconvene at that time.

Yearbook contract OKd

The board approved the yearbook contract for Holmes Junior High School in Mount Prospect.

The contract, for $1,321.95, is with Josteh's American Yearbook Co.

The Creative Learning Preschools of Elk Grove Village and Schaumburg are accepting registrations for the 1974-1975 school year. The school will accept 3-4-5 year old children on a schedule of a.m. and p.m. sessions Monday thru Friday.

TUITION: $22 per month for 2-day sessions
$30 per month for 3-day sessions
$48 per month for 5-day sessions

Flu, illness, fright cut Cooper attendance almost 50%

by JILL BETTNER

A locker slams and the sound, magnified several times by the silence in the nearly empty halls, resounds through Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove.

Normally jammed with students, laughing and jostling each other as they hurry to classes, the halls are virtually deserted, drained by a wave of flu and similar illnesses that have hit almost half the school's 750-student population.

One Cooper student, 14-year-old Dale Chany, died Monday of Reye's Syndrome, a rare childhood disease that doctors believe usually follows a flu or chicken pox virus.

An autopsy conducted at Evanston Hospital yesterday confirmed that the boy, who resided at 816 Brittany Dr., Arlington Heights, was apparently the latest victim of the puzzling disease that has killed at least six others in the Chicago area in the past two weeks.

ALTHOUGH THE absentee rate at

Cooper has been steadily increasing over the past month, the extraordinary number of students out this week indicates that many parents are being especially cautious and keeping at home children who show even the slightest flu symptoms.

About 40 students are absent daily at this time of the year, according to Larry Weaver, principal. Yesterday, the absentee list numbered 331 and Weaver expects the rate to go even higher in the next few days.

"I'm sure if a parent was trying to decide if a child was ill enough to stay at home, when he heard about Dale's death, he had to make the decision," Weaver said. "We've been making announcements, too, that the kids shouldn't come if they feel at all sick. I predict even higher absenteeism the rest of the week, but by then, pretty well most of the kids will have had it and gotten over it."

Assistant Principal Bob White said several parents called the school yesterday expressing concern over the apparent flu epidemic and some were worried that Reye's Syndrome might be contagious, some parents want to see the school closed, he said, and one even suggested that the building be fumigated.

ACCORDING TO U. S. Department of Health official, Dr. Robert Rubin of the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Georgia, Reye's Syndrome is "definitely not contagious."

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill yesterday said he is not considering closing Cooper or any of the other 16 schools in the district that are also reporting "higher than usual" absences.

"Our information is that there's nothing we can gain by closing the schools," Gill said. "We want parents to keep children home if they feel ill or have fevers, but we do that all the time."

"The thing I'm really concerned about is the panic that could become associated with this kind of thing," the superintendent said. "I know it's difficult because parents are concerned and I can symthize with them, but we have to try to remain calm."

AT COOPER, students and teachers are "numb" at Dale Chany's death. The eighth grader was a top student and an outstanding athlete.

Memorial services for Dale are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Kolsak of Wheeling Funeral Home, 189 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Dale was a member of the Cooper cross-country track team and a special award for future runners is being established in his memory. The honor will go to the most improved second-year member of the team each year.

Manhunt on for gunman

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman escaped with possibly as much as $100,000 or as little as $20,000 from an Arlington Heights drive-in bank Tuesday in a predawn holdup, setting off a wide police and FBI manhunt.

The First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility, Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road, was robbed at 6:45 a.m., apparently by two men, who police believe fled town and escaped on the Northwest Tollway.

Police bulletins of the robbery placed the take as high as $100,000, but bank spokesmen placed the figure at "$20,000 and even that could be high."

POLICE SAID a 23-year-old woman teller arrived at the drive-in facility at Eastman and Arlington Heights Road about 6:45 a.m. and was confronted by a masked man. The man brandished a blue steel automatic pistol and reportedly said, "I know you have the keys. I've been watching you for some time."

The gunman forced her to open the building and to turn off the alarm system. The teller then opened a small safe and gave the man two bags of cash which he placed in a blue cloth bag.

The teller was then taken out of the building and the gunman locked her keys inside. She was ordered to run south on Arlington Heights Road.

The teller told police she heard the man running and then the sound of a car driving away. She then ran to the main bank building at Dunton and Campbell streets, about four blocks away, where she telephoned police.

A POLICE TAPE recording of the call said, "I've been held up at the bank at Eastman and Arlington Heights... it's too late, he's gone."

The teller was crying and recordings of the police radio calls indicated there was some confusion about which facility was robbed. The first squad car arrived at the drive-in facility within a minute of the teller's call, according to the tapes.

Bruce Dodds, executive vice president of the bank, said an armed guard usually opens the drive-in bank at 6:45 a.m. but was late for work yesterday. He said the girl had picked up the keys to the facility from the main bank after she saw the guard was not there yet.

It was on her return to the drive-in building that she was surprised by the gunman.

THE BANK IS protected by an alarm and automatic camera system, according to Dodds. Arlington Heights police said the alarm is not directly hooked into the police station.

Dodds said the automatic camera operates at random intervals around the clock. Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall said the camera was not in operation at the time of the robbery.

McDougall said the gunman was calm

This time, drive-up teller wasn't so lucky

by BETTY LEE

It was just two years ago Jan. 20 that a gunman appeared at the First Arlington National Bank drive-up window and ordered a 17-year-old woman teller to open the safe.

The tall, heavy set man brandished a snub-nosed revolver and threatened to kill her if she didn't hurry. While the gunman waited nervously outside the teller's cage the girl told him that an alarm would sound off if the door was opened. Then she crept into the cage and pushed a button to set a second alarm. Finally in desperation she threw the vault keys down the vent.

The holdup was thwarted and the gunman fled.

Yesterday a different teller at the drive-in facility at Arlington Heights Road and Eastman Avenue wasn't as lucky.

The robbery, the second at the First Arlington National Bank, whose main office is located at Campbell Street and Dunton Avenue, is the latest of several bank robberies in the Northwest suburbs in recent years.

LAST APRIL, a gunman walked into the North Point State Bank in Arlington Heights and approached a teller, demanding that she put money in a briefcase he carried with him.

He quietly walked out of the bank building with $18,000, unnoticed by other bank employees.

FBI agents are still looking for the gunman.

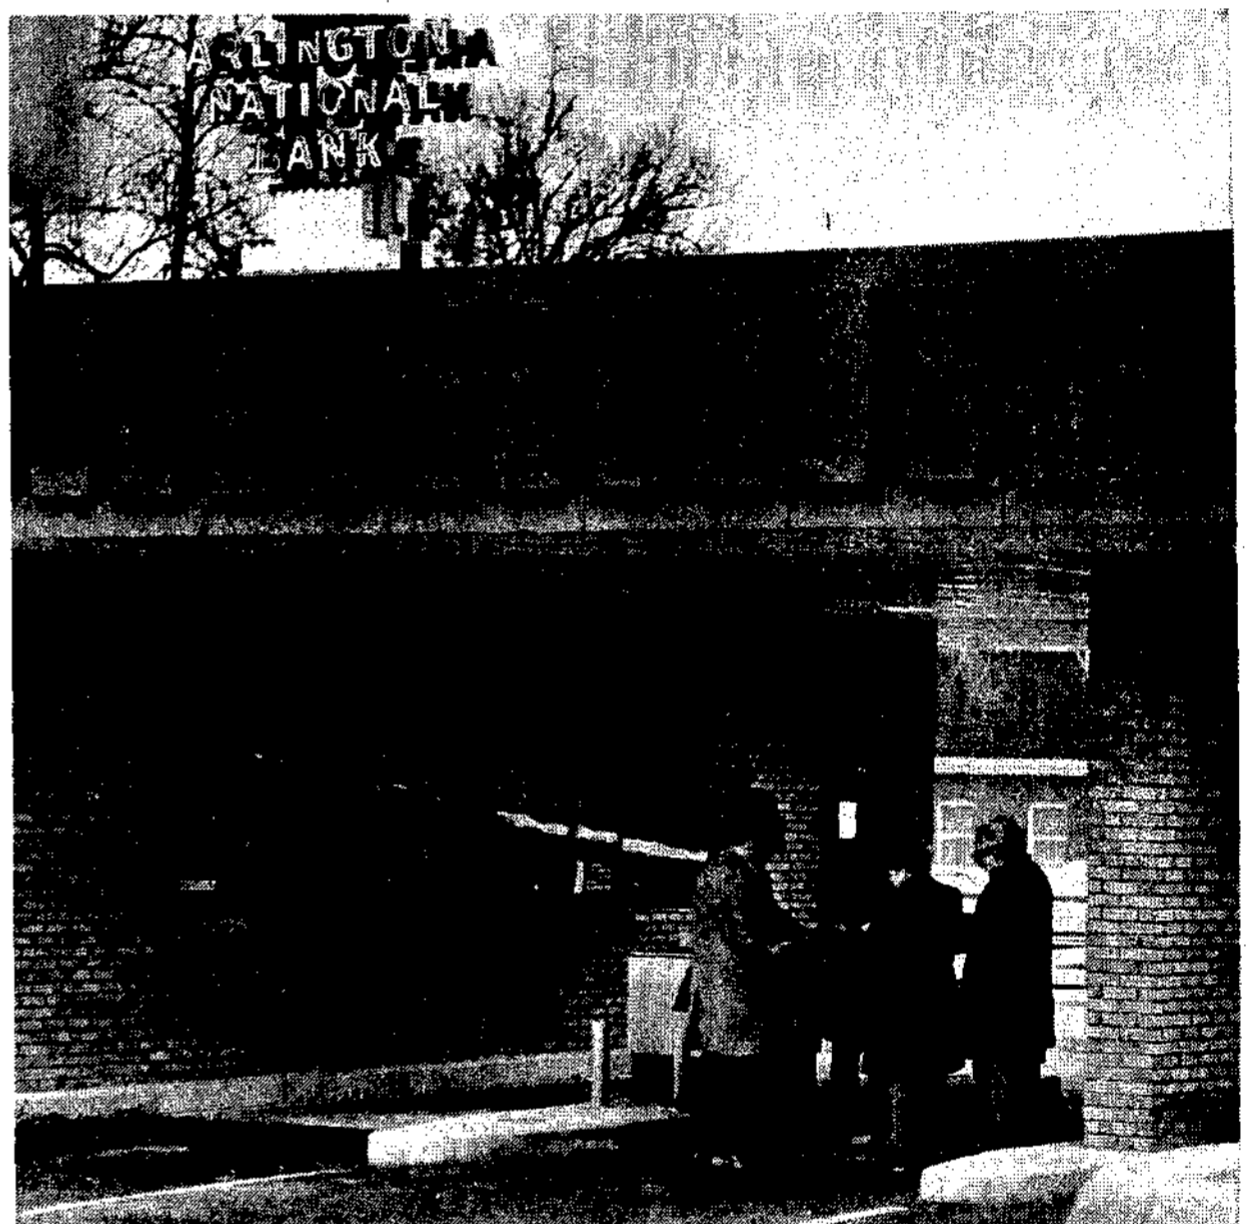

"The case is still under investigation," said Harry Walker of the Des Plaines FBI office. Walker could not say at the present time whether there were new leads to the robbery.

A PAIR OF MASKED gunmen surprised employees at the Bank of Buffalo Grove in 1972. The two hid in the basement near the vault and waited for the employees with the money.

The two made off with more than $11,000. In the two years since the robbery, no suspects have been arrested.

"Federal authorities have a pretty good idea who the perpetrators were, but

Cop charged, suspended for phone bomb threat

Palatine Patrolman Richard J. Sikorski has been formally charged with placing a false bomb threat Feb. 11 from his apartment in the Willow Creek development, 225 S. Rohlwing Rd., Palatine.

"After a detailed investigation that I've personally conducted, I'm suspending him pending a hearing before the Palatine Fire and Police Commission," Police Chief Jerry Bratcher said yesterday. Although details of the investigation will not be disclosed until the hearing, it was learned that part of that investigation included lie detector tests for Sikorski.

Sikorski could not be reached for comment on the charges yesterday.

Bratcher said yesterday that a phone tap on Sikorski's phone line was physically possible, but "highly improbable" in this case.

The Feb. 11 bomb threat was placed to an Illinois Bell Telephone operator in Barrington who traced the call to Sikorski's phone by locking open the line during the call.

THE FOLLOWING day, Feb. 12, Sikorski testified on behalf of former Palatine Police Chief Robert R. Centner in the public hearing between the village board and Centner. Sikorski testified to several run-ins since 1970 with fellow policemen who wanted Centner out as chief.

No date has been set for the hearing before the Fire and Police Commission on the bomb threat charge. An unrelated disciplinary hearing involving a possible three-day suspension is scheduled for to-

Plans reviewed for fire station addition

Architectural plans for a $228,000 addition to the Cofax Street fire station were reviewed by the Palatine Village Board at a committee-of-the-whole meeting last night.

The proposed two-story addition has three bay areas for vehicles and living quarters on the second floor. The addition would be constructed immediately south of the present fire station on the southeast corner of Hale and Cofax streets.

Remodeling of existing living quarters for use as administrative offices is also proposed. The administrative space would include offices for the fire chief, fire protection officer, and radio and communications center.

ALSO INCLUDED in the cost of the

addition is an $11,625 furniture allowance, $4,500 contingency fund, $2,500 radio equipment expenditures and architects' fees (7 per cent of the total cost).

The estimated cost is approximately $31 per square foot.

The architectural plans were prepared by Meyer and Hart Inc., a Chicago architectural firm. The board has indicated it would like the firm to proceed with working drawings for the addition.

THE ADDITION will not eliminate space problems in the fire department but will minimize the number of fire trucks doubled up, according to Fire Chief Orville Helms. The addition will make a total of nine garages for 14 pieces of fire equipment.

The Cofax street station was opened in 1960. This will be the first addition to the original structure. Land for the addition was purchased by the village in 1972 at a cost of $27,500.

Construction of a training tower, which would cost an estimated $56,000 is also being proposed, and will be considered in Sunday's village board budget session.

Palatine currently has no training facilities and uses facilities in Arlington Heights.

The village board has not made any decision on how it will fund the proposed addition to the fire station.

McDougall said another person may be being able to prove it is another story," said Buffalo Grove Chief Harry Walsh. He said his understanding of the case is that federal officials are lacking needed evidence to arrest the suspects.

Described as a modern-day "Bonnie and Clyde," Christopher McCarthy and his wife, Elaine, robbed the Des Plaines Trust and Savings Bank in 1971.

McCarthy told a teller at the bank to fill a large envelope with money. He fled with $1,000 in a car driven by his wife.

While on a robbery and kidnap spree McCarthy was killed in a shootout during a New Jersey bank robbery. Mrs. McCarthy fled the holdup scene but later committed suicide.

involved. He said it was significant the girl did not hear the sound of a motor starting before the getaway car left.

THE ROBBER was described as a black man about 35 years old and wearing a nylon stocking and sun glasses over his face. McDougall said the mask distorted his features making a composite sketch of the robber difficult. He was wearing a light brown raincoat.

The car is believed to be a large dark sedan, possibly a Ford, police said. It is thought to have been driven south on Arlington Heights Road.

McDougall said there was nothing to indicate at this time the robbery was an "inside job." Dodds said the guard had been employed by the bank for more than five years and the teller more than two years.

Dodds said an exact amount could not be placed on the robbery. Of the reports of $100,000 being taken, he said, "It doesn't take that kind of money to run a drive-in facility."

Police said there was more money than usual at the facility because of the extended holiday weekend.

The money is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case immediately.

The drive-in facility opens for business at 7 a.m.

ARCHITECTURAL DRAWINGS for a two-story addition to the Colfax Street fire station were reviewed by the Palatine Village Board last night. The addition will relieve overcrowded conditions at the station and house three fire trucks. The drawings were prepared by Meyer and Hart Inc. of Chicago.

Senior citizens may not be able to use minibuses

by TONI GINETTI

Senior citizens in Rolling Meadows will not be able to use the new minibus service being provided by the Palatine Township Council on the Aged until a lengthy licensing procedure is completed, and possibly not then.

Mayor Roland J. Meyer said yesterday that before the service can operate in the city it will have to be licensed in the same manner as taxi cab services. The processing will probably not be completed until early April, Meyer indicated.

Even then, however, Meyer indicated he may not sign a licensing application because he does not think the township has the authority to use federal revenue sharing money to establish the service.

The minibus service, started yesterday, provides bus service for Palatine Township residents 60 years of age and older. Service is provided twice weekly on an appointment basis.

MRS. GERTRUDE HOFSTEDE, president of the Rolling Meadows Golden Years Club, said yesterday if a bus service was provided in the city, it would probably be utilized by senior citizens.

The bus service is operated from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for 25 cents per one-way fare. Buses provide service within the township and to the Arlington Heights Social Security Office.

Meyer said yesterday he did not think revenue sharing guidelines allow a township to establish its own bus system, according to his interpretation of an opinion from the United States attorney general's office.

"If they are in violation of the law, I for one would feel obligated not to sign their application because I would be a party to it," Meyer said. "We're not going to be paraded into granting an application."

ACCORDING TO THE Revenue Sharing Advisory Service publication of July, 1973, public transportation apparently is a permitted use for revenue sharing funds. According to section 316 of the publication, "transportation by bus . . . either publicly or privately owned which provides to the public general or special service . . . on a regular and continuing basis" is a permitted use.

Meyer said he met recently with Palatine Township Supervisor Howard Olsen, who told him the use of the money was being justified as a social service for the aged, which is a permitted category for revenue sharing money. "I think they're treading on thin ice on this," Meyer said of the justification. He questioned how the guidelines are established as to who will be served and also on whether the service could be limited to the elderly.

However, Elk Grove Township Supervisor Richard Hall said yesterday a bus service provided by his township since December is also funded with revenue sharing money as a social service for the aged and poor.

That service, which takes in a small area of Rolling Meadows, is not licensed by the city, Hall added.

HALL SAID THAT he does not think a governing body has the authority to require another governing body to comply with local ordinances which are meant to regulate private businesses and individuals.

"I think a municipality has no jurisdiction over a township," he said. "If there is any jurisdiction, it would seem to be the other way around."

"I would think this is a service for the people and I would think they (the city) would be tickled to death to provide this service," Hall said. "It is a needed service and I can't quite understand the basis for that (Meyer's) statement."

The city is looking into the possibility of starting its own bus service if interest in a system is shown. Claude Luisada of Metron Systems Corporation, which operates a bus service in Arlington Heights, is scheduled to appear before the city council Tuesday to discuss expanding his operation into the city.

First day of bus service pleases senior citizens

by JULIA BAUER

Senior citizens on the new Palatine Township-sponsored bus liked what they saw yesterday, despite first-run delays in arrival time.

For 25 cents a ride, 20 township senior citizens traveled from their doorsteps to the bank, hardware store, shopping center and a church auxiliary meeting.

"We usually get a ride with our niece," said the Bartoses, the first riders, who were picked up 30 minutes behind schedule. Most patrons seemed happy about the independence offered them by the bus service, although the bus ran behind schedule most of the morning.

"A quarter," Bartos said, shaking his head. "You can't beat that."

"It costs us more than a dollar just to ride from our house to the station," his wife chimed in, describing the local cab service which is the only other way to get around without driving.

THE TWICE-WEEKLY bus service is being subsidized by Palatine Township revenue sharing funds. For the first six months, the service is expected to cost approximately $3,000. Davidmeyer Bus Co. in Elk Grove Village is operating the 18 passenger bus.

Rides are available from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays by making reservations at least one day in advance, by phoning 991-1112.

The Palatine Township Council on the Aged, which organized the bus service, is also planning to start a hot meal service and senior citizen activity center. Planning for future recreational activities is the subject of a Friday night meeting open to senior citizens at Sanborn School cafeteria, 101 N. Oak St., Palatine, at 7 p.m.

BUS TRIPS are restricted to destinations in Palatine Township and to the Arlington Heights Social Security office. And until licensing requirements for Rolling Meadows are approved for the new bus service, Rolling Meadows elderly will not be able to participate. Action on the licensing is expected within the next six weeks.

For the senior citizens who did ride the bus yesterday, the service was clearly a step in the right direction.

"I've been working for a bus like this for years," one woman said approvingly.

But there is at least one hazard: the bright yellow bus bears a striking resemblance to other school buses, particularly in the morning hours when streets are crowded with buses from local districts. One rider nearly mistook an elementary school bus for the township bus yesterday, and feared he had missed his ride when the school bus pulled away.

Sorting through old and used books, Shirley Posson, left, and librarian Jane Trimbore prepare for today's book sale scheduled for 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Palatine Public Library, 149 N. Brockway St.

morrow for Sikorski, but that hearing may be adjourned to another date to include both actions, according to commission chairman Paul Jung.

Sikorski will be suspended without pay until the hearing is concluded. The Fire and Police Commission has the authority to suspend a policeman for up to 30 days or to dismiss him if the charges are upheld. If Sikorski is found innocent of the charges, he would receive back pay for the period of the suspension. Sikorski has been on the force since 1967.

Fourth hopeful in school race

J. Leslie Ehringer is the fourth person to announce his candidacy for the three Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 School Board seats that will be up for the April 23 election.

Ehringer said yesterday he wants to see the new junior high school curriculum and the elementary school building projects through.

"I feel it is very important and I would like to see it through," he said.

The other three candidates include two other incumbents, Everett Charlier and Howard Meadows. The newcomer is Robert Bliss, 533 Echo Ln., Palatine.

Ehringer is running for his ninth term. He began his career on the school board in 1964 when he was appointed to a one-year term, replacing a board member who had resigned.

Ehringer, who is chairman of the Dist. 15 Education Committee, is also manager for the Interline Travel Market at United Air Lines. He and his wife live in Rolling Meadows.

Flu, illness, fright cut Cooper attendance almost 50%

by JILL BETTNER

A locker slams and the sound, magnified several times by the silence in the nearly empty halls, resounds through Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove.

Normally jammed with students, laughing and jostling each other as they hurry to classes, the halls are virtually deserted, drained by a wave of flu and similar illnesses that have hit almost half the school's 750-student population.

One Cooper student, 14-year-old Dale Chany, died Monday of Reye's Syndrome, a rare childhood disease that doctors believe usually follows a flu or chicken pox virus.

An autopsy conducted at Evanston Hospital yesterday confirmed that the boy, who resided at 816 Brittany Dr., Arlington Heights, was apparently the latest victim of the puzzling disease that has killed at least six others in the Chicago area in the past two weeks.

ALTHOUGH THE absentee rate at

Cooper has been steadily increasing over the past month, the extraordinary number of students out this week indicates that many parents are being especially cautious and keeping at home children who show even the slightest flu symptoms.

About 40 students are absent daily at this time of the year, according to Larry Weaver, principal. Yesterday, the absentee list numbered 331 and Weaver expects the rate to go even higher in the next few days.

"I'm sure if a parent was trying to decide if a child was ill enough to stay at home, when he heard about Dale's death, he had to make the decision," Weaver said "We've been making announcements, too, that the kids shouldn't come if they feel at all sick. I predict even higher absenteeism the rest of the week, but by then, pretty well most of the kids will have had it and gotten over it."

Assistant Principal Bob White said several parents called the school yesterday expressing concern over the apparent flu epidemic and some were worried that Reye's Syndrome might be contagious. Some parents want to see the school closed, he said, and one even suggested that the building be fumigated.

ACCORDING TO U. S. Department of Health official, Dr. Robert Rubin of the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Georgia, Reye's Syndrome is "definitely not contagious."

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill yesterday said he is not considering closing Cooper or any of the other 16 schools in the district that are also reporting "higher than usual" absences.

"Our information is that there's nothing we can gain by closing the schools," Gill said. "We want parents to keep children home if they feel ill or have fevers, but we do that all the time."

"The thing I'm really concerned about is the panic that could become associated with this kind of thing," the superintendent said. "I know it's difficult because parents are concerned and I can sympathize with them, but we have to try to remain calm."

AT COOPER, students and teachers are "numb" at Dale Chany's death. The eighth grader was a top student and an outstanding athlete.

Memorial services for Dale are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Kolssak of Wheeling Funeral Home, 189 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Dale was a member of the Cooper cross-country track team and a special award for future runners is being established in his memory. The honor will go to the most improved second-year member of the team each year.

Manhunt on for gunman

$20,000 stolen from bank

—or was it $100,000?

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman escaped with possibly as much as $100,000 or as little as $20,000 from an Arlington Heights drive-in bank Tuesday in a predawn holdup, setting off a wide police and FBI manhunt.

The First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility, Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road, was robbed at 6:45 a.m., apparently by two men, who police believe fled town and escaped on the Northwest Tollway.

Police bulletins of the robbery placed the take as high as $100,000, but bank spokesmen placed the figure at "$20,000 and even that could be high."

POLICE SAID a 23-year-old woman teller arrived at the drive-in facility at Eastman and Arlington Heights Road about 6:45 a.m. and was confronted by a masked man. The man brandished a blue steel automatic pistol and reportedly said, "I know you have the keys. I've been watching you for some time."

The gunman forced her to open the building and to turn off the alarm system. The teller then opened a small safe and gave the man two bags of cash which he placed in a blue cloth bag.

The teller was then taken out of the building and the gunman locked her keys inside. She was ordered to run south on Arlington Heights Road.

The teller told police she heard the man running and then the sound of a car driving away. She then ran to the main bank building at Dunton and Campbell streets, about four blocks away, where she telephoned police.

A POLICE TAPE recording of the call said, "I've been held up at the bank at Eastman and Arlington Heights... it's too late, he's gone."

The teller was crying and recordings of the police radio calls indicated there was some confusion about which facility was robbed. The first squad car arrived at the drive-in facility within a minute of the teller's call, according to the tapes.

Bruce Dodds, executive vice president of the bank, said an armed guard usually opens the drive-in bank at 6:45 a.m. but was late for work yesterday. He said the girl had picked up the keys to the facility from the main bank after she saw the guard was not there yet.

It was on her return to the drive-in building that she was surprised by the gunman.

THE BANK IS protected by an alarm and automatic camera system, according to Dodds. Arlington Heights police said the alarm is not directly hooked into the police station.

Dodds said the automatic camera operates at random intervals around the clock. Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall said the camera was not in operation at the time of the robbery.

McDougall said the gunman was calm

This time, drive-up teller wasn't so lucky

by BETTY LEE

It was just two years ago Jan. 20 that a gunman appeared at the First Arlington National Bank drive-up window and ordered a 17-year-old woman teller to open the safe.

The tall, heavy set man brandished a snub-nosed revolver and threatened to kill her if she didn't hurry. While the teller's cage the girl told him that an alarm would sound off if the door was opened. Then she crept into the cage and pushed a button to set a second alarm. Finally in desperation she threw the vault keys down the vent.

The holdup was thwarted and the gunman fled.

Yesterday a different teller at the drive-in facility at Arlington Heights Road and Eastman Avenue wasn't as lucky.

The robbery, the second at the First Arlington National Bank, whose main office is located at Campbell Street and Dunton Avenue, is the latest of several bank robberies in the Northwest suburbs in recent years.

LAST APRIL, a gunman walked into the North Point State Bank in Arlington Heights and approached a teller, demanding that she put money in a briefcase he carried with him.

He quietly walked out of the bank building with $18,000, unnoticed by other bank employees.

FBI agents are still looking for the gunman.

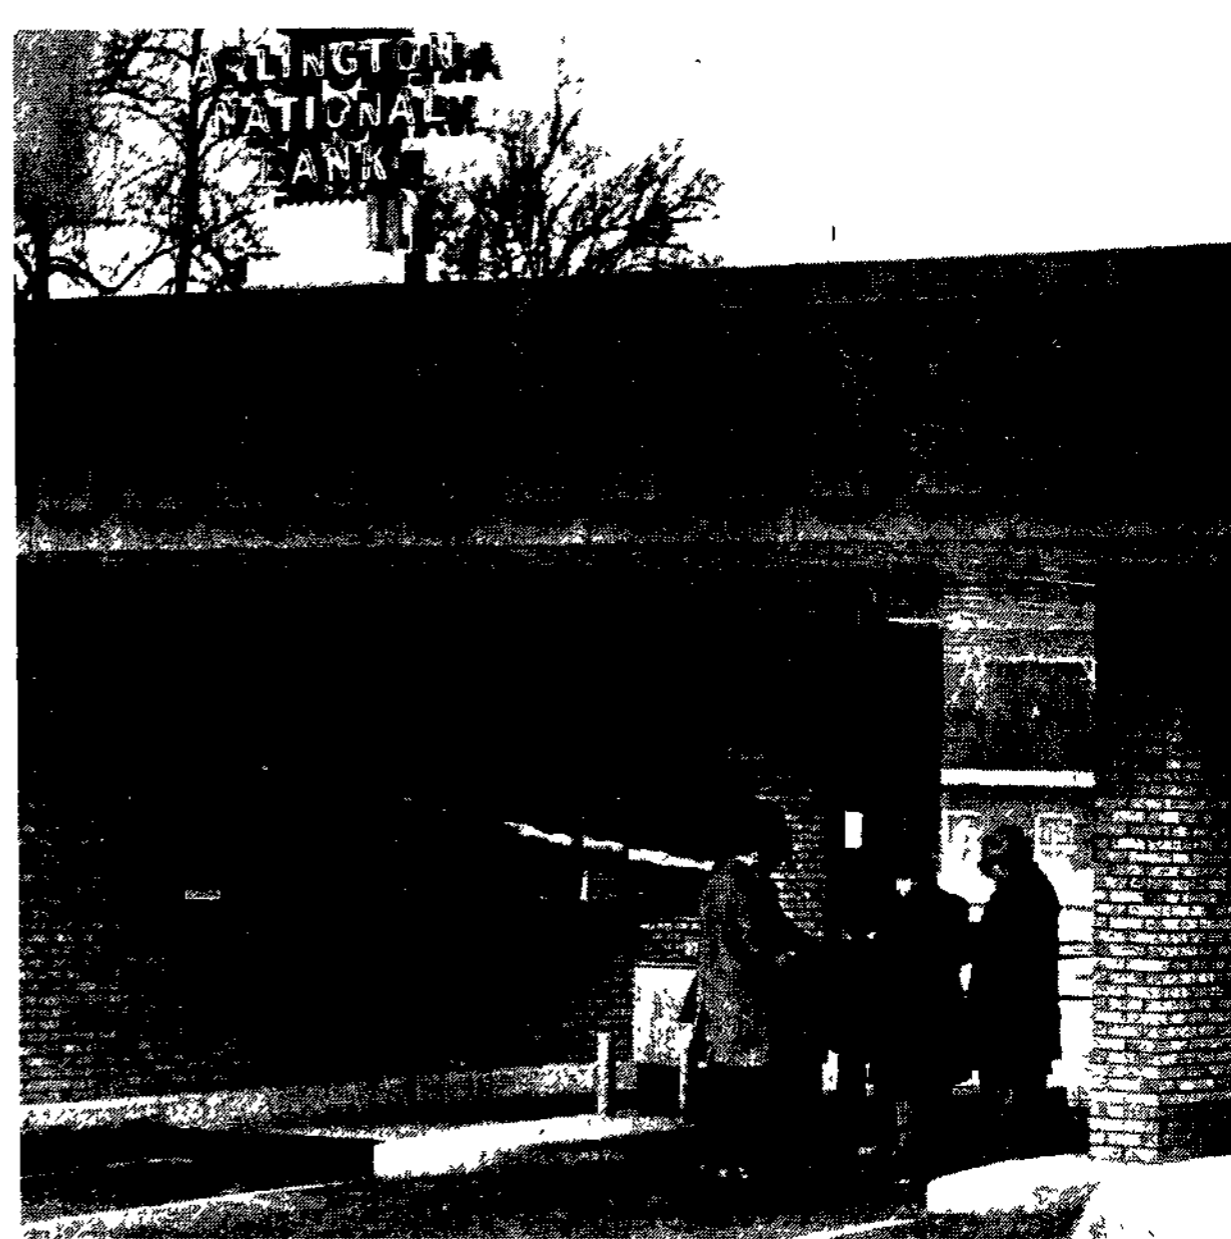

"The case is still under investigation," said Harry Walker of the Des Plaines FBI office. Walker could not say at the present time whether there were new leads to the robbery.

A PAIR OF MASKED gunmen surprised employees at the Bank of Buffalo Grove in 1972. The two hid in the basement near the vault and waited for the employees with the money.

The two made off with more than $111,000. In the two years since the robbery, no suspects have been arrested.

"Federal authorities have a pretty good idea who the perpetrators were, but

Senior citizens may not be able to use minibuses

by TONI GINETTI

Senior citizens in Rolling Meadows will not be able to use the new minibus service being provided by the Palatine Township Council on the Aged until a lengthy licensing procedure is completed, and possibly not then.

Mayor Roland J. Meyer said yesterday that before the service can operate in the city it will have to be licensed in the same manner as taxi cab services. The processing will probably not be completed until early April, Meyer indicated.

Even then, however, Meyer indicated he may not sign a licensing application because he does not think the township has the authority to use federal revenue sharing money to establish the service.

The minibus service, started yesterday, provides bus service for Palatine Township residents 60 years of age and older.

Service is provided twice weekly on an appointment basis.

MRS. GERTRUDE HOFSTEDE, president of the Rolling Meadows Golden Years Club, said yesterday if a bus service was provided in the city, it would probably be utilized by senior citizens.

The bus service is operated from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for 25 cents per one-way fare. Buses provide service within the township and to the Arlington Heights social Security Office.

Meyer said yesterday he did not think revenue sharing guidelines allow a township to establish its own bus system, according to his interpretation of an opinion from the United States attorney general's office.

"If they are in violation of the law, I for one would feel obligated not to sign

Roskamp to try for nursing home again

Roskamp Enterprises, which last week was denied rezoning for land on the north side of 4500 Kirchoff Rd. next to Winthrop Village for a nursing home, apparently will try to build the same home across the street on Kirchoff Road.

Robert Roskamp, representing the firm, told members of the Rolling Meadows City Council Building and Zoning Committee Monday he has met with Mayor Roland Meyer and 1st Ward Aldermen Thomas Scanlan and Merrill Wuerch on possibly building the care facility on the south side of Kirchoff opposite the original site.

THAT LAND, owned by Roskamp, is not located in the city and would have to be annexed and zoned for he nursing home use.

The committee Monday forwarded Roskamp's request to the city council which will authorize a special zoning commission to hear the preliminary request.

The Roskamp firm, which operates six nursing care facilities in Illinois and Wisconsin, was turned down in its attempt to build the nursing home when city officials, at the urging of residents living near the site, voted last week to deny approval of the plan.

Residents living in the Plum Grove Countryside and Winthrop Village subdivisions near the site had loudly opposed the plan, charging it would detract from their residential neighborhood.

THE PLAN FOR development of the south side of Kirchoff apparently calls for the same type of facility as originally proposed. Roskamp has proposed a nursing home facility which could accommodate about 110 elderly persons requiring medical care and a apartment-type facility which could provide 64 units of housing for ambulatory elderly persons.

The apartment units would rent for $250 to $275 per month while the area for those needing medical care would cost about $600 and up, Roskamp told the committee Monday.

Roskamp will probably seek a special use zoning classification under general residential zoning for the $2 million development.

Membership renewed

The Rolling Meadows Park Board voted to renew its membership in the Illinois Assn. of Parks for the coming year at a cost of $500.

The expenditure, which the board approved Thursday night, is based on the park district's assessed valuation.

being able to prove it is another story," said Buffalo Grove Chief Harry Walsh. He said his understanding of the case is that federal officials are lacking needed evidence to arrest the suspects.

Described as a modern-day "Bonnie and Clyde," Christopher McCarthy and his wife, Elaine, robbed the Des Plaines Trust and Savings Bank in 1971.

McCarthy told a teller at the bank to fill a large envelope with money. He fled with $1,900 in a car driven by his wife.

While on a robbery and kidnap spree McCarthy was killed in a shootout during a New Jersey bank robbery. Mrs. McCarthy fled the holdup scene but later committed suicide.

involved. He said it was significant the girl did not hear the sound of a motor starting before the getaway car left.

THE ROBBER was described as a black man about 35 years old and wearing a nylon stocking and sun glasses over his face. McDougall said the mask distorted his features making a composite sketch of the robber difficult. He was wearing a light brown raincoat.

The car is believed to be a large dark sedan, possibly a Ford, police said. It is thought to have been driven south on Arlington Heights Road.

McDougall said there was nothing to indicate at this time the robbery was an "inside job." Dodds said the guard had been employed by the bank for more than five years and the teller more than two years.

Dodds said an exact amount could not be placed on the robbery. Of the reports of $100,000 being taken, he said, "It doesn't take that kind of money to run a drive-in facility."

Police said there was more money than usual at the facility because of the extended holiday weekend.

The money is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case immediately.

The drive-in facility opens for business at 7 a.m.

First day of bus service pleases senior citizens

by JULIA BAUER

Senior citizens on the new Palatine Township-sponsored bus liked what they saw yesterday, despite first-run delays in arrival time.

For 25 cents a ride, 20 township senior citizens traveled from their doorsteps to the bank, hardware store, shopping center and a church auxiliary meeting.

"We usually get a ride with our niece," said the Bartoszes, the first riders, who were picked up 30 minutes behind schedule. Most patrons seemed happy about the independence offered them by the bus service, although the bus ran behind schedule most of the morning.

"A quarter," Bartos said, shaking his head. "You can't beat that."

"It costs us more than a dollar just to ride from our house to the station," his wife chimed in, describing the local cab service which is the only other way to get around without driving.

THE TWICE-WEEKLY bus service is being subsidized by Palatine Township revenue sharing funds. For the first six months, the service is expected to cost approximately $3,000. Davidmeyer Bus Co. in Elk Grove Village is operating the 16 passenger bus.

Rides are available from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays by making reservations at least one day in advance, by phoning 991-1112.

The Palatine Township Council on the Aged, which organized the bus service, is also planning to start a hot meal service and senior citizen activity center. Planning for future recreational activities is the subject of a Friday night meeting open to senior citizens at Sanborn School cafeteria, 101 N. Oak St., Palatine, at 7 p.m.

BUS TRIPS are restricted to destinations in Palatine Township and to the Arlington Heights Social Security office. And until licensing requirements for Rolling Meadows are approved for the new bus service, Rolling Meadows elderly will not be able to participate. Action on the licensing is expected within the next six weeks.

For the senior citizens who did ride the bus yesterday, the service was clearly a step in the right direction.

"I've been working for a bus like this for years," one woman said approvingly.

But there is at least one hazard the bright yellow bus bears a striking resemblance to other school buses, particularly in the morning hours when streets are crowded with buses from local districts. One rider nearly mistook an elementary school bus for the township bus yesterday, and feared he had missed his ride when the school bus pulled away.

Boys' Baseball sign-up

Registration for the Rolling Meadows Boys' Baseball teams will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. today in the park district office located behind the Rolling Meadows Post Office.

Practice begins the first Sunday in May. For further information, call Nick Paglia at 259-8782.

Senior citizens may not be able to use minibuses

their application because I would be a party to it," Meyer said. "We're not going to be panicked into granting an application."

ACCORDING TO THE Revenue Sharing Advisory Service publication of July, 1973, public transportation apparently is a permitted use for revenue sharing funds. According to section 316 of the publication, "transportation by bus . . . either publicly or privately owned which provides to the public general or special service . . . on a regular and continuing basis" is a permitted use.

Meyer said he met recently with Palatine Township Supervisor Howard Olsen, who told him the use of the money was being justified as a social service for the aged, which is a permitted category for revenue sharing money. "I think they're treading on thin ice on this," Meyer said of the justification. He questioned how the guidelines are established as to who will be served and also on whether the service could be limited to the elderly.

However, Elk Grove Township Supervisor Richard Hall said yesterday a bus service provided by his township since December is also funded with revenue sharing money as a social service for the aged and poor.

That service, which takes in a small area of Rolling Meadows, is not licensed by the city, Hall added.

HALL SAID THAT he does not think a governing body has the authority to require another governing body to comply with local ordinances which are meant to regulate private businesses and individuals.

"I think a municipality has no jurisdiction over a township," he said. "If there is any jurisdiction, it would seem to be the other way around."

"I would think this is a service for the people and I would think they (the city) would be tickled to death to provide this service," Hall said. "It is a needed service and I can't quite understand the basis for that (Meyer's) statement."

The city is looking into the possibility of starting its own bus service if interest in a system is shown. Claude Lusada of Metron Systems Corporation, which operates a bus service in Arlington Heights, is scheduled to appear before the city council Tuesday to discuss expanding his operation into the city.

Panel gives $1,000 to youth, civic units

More than $1,000 was contributed to youth and civic groups in Rolling Meadows in a six-month period last year by the Recycling, Ecology and Beautification Committee.

The money was contributed to groups which aided in monthly city recycling drives from July to December last year. Groups aided included Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, 4-H Club, high school and church groups in the city.

The groups work with the REB committee in recycling to earn funds for group projects and outings. The money is derived from the sale of collected recycling materials.

Story hour registration

Registration for the first session of preschool story hour is now being taken at the Rolling Meadows Public Library, 3110 Martin Ln.

Classes, from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m., are March 6-27.

Planners get new nursing home proposal

Another nursing home proposal will be presented to Rolling Meadows officials at 8 tonight at city hall when Dr. Douglas Finlayson presents his plans for a facility near Hicks Road and Winnetka Avenue.

A special city zoning commission will hear Finlayson's request to build the facility adjacent to a medical clinic he is constructing on the same site. City officials gave zoning approval for the medical clinic last year.

Finlayson has been instrumental in starting the controversial venereal disease test and birth-control clinic for teenagers, which recently received funding from three area townships, including Palatine. The clinic is unrelated to the nursing home plans.

The proposal is one of four nursing home plans which have come before the city recently. One such proposal has already been turned down by city officials after residents living near the proposed site of the home, on Kirchoff Road west of Ill. Rte. 53, opposed the plan.

Roskamp Enterprises, which runs six nursing homes in Illinois and Wisconsin, had requested rezoning for the home.

Plans also have been presented by Manor Care Inc. of Silver Spring, Md., to build a home on Kirchoff and Hicks Roads near the Brookwood apartments, and by Fredrich Walter to build a facility on E. Frontage Road near Central Road School.

Toboggan contest winners announced

Winners of the final toboggan drawings held Saturday during the Rolling Meadows recycling drive were Kenneth A. Freeman, 3304 Wren Ln.; Mark Schmidt, 2203 Wren Ln.; Gary Kroll, 3506 Thrush Ln.; and Paye Jones, 4704 Arbor Dr.

The recycling, ecology and beautification committee (REB) will now begin awarding Schwinn bicycles to recyclers.

Drawings for the bikes will be held at each recycling day starting March 16. To register, persons need only contribute to a recycling drive and fill out a contest card.

Winners may credit the standard 26-inch bike awarded in the contest toward the purchase of a more expensive bike, if they desire.

Recycling is held twice monthly on the first and third Saturday of each month.

Camp Fire program

First-grade girls and their mothers can learn about the Camp Fire Girl program at a meeting scheduled for 7:30 p.m. today in Carl Sandburg Junior High School, 2800 Martin Lane.

The program is for girls of all races, religions, national origins and economic backgrounds from 6 years of age through high school.

Girls meet in groups of 20 or less at the home of a trained volunteer and learn about music, games, handicrafts, dramatics and the community.

Anyone interested who cannot attend can contact the Camp Fire North Branch Office in Arlington Heights.

Story hour, kite class

A story hour and kite-making class for youngsters in first through sixth grades will begin at the Rolling Meadows Public Library March 7.

Registration is now being taken at the library, 3110 Martin Ln. The class will run from four to six weeks, depending on the amount of time needed to make the kites, library director Virginia Connell said.

Prizes will be awarded for kites with the most attractive design and best flying ability.

This is the first time the library has had this program.

Fourth hopeful in school race

J. Leslie Ehringer is the fourth person to announce his candidacy for the three Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 School Board seats that will be up for the April 13 election.

Ehringer said yesterday he wants to see the new junior high school curriculum and the elementary school building projects through.

"I feel it is very important and I would like to see it through," he said.

The other three candidates include two other incumbents, Everett Charlier and Howard Meadows. The newcomer is Robert Bliss, 533 Echo Ln., Palatine.

Ehringer is running for his ninth term. He began his career on the school board in 1964 when he was appointed to a one-year term, replacing a board member who had resigned.

Ehringer, who is chairman of the Dist. 15 Education Committee, is also manager for the Interline Travel Market at United Air Lines. He and his wife live in Rolling Meadows.

Flu, illness, fright cut Cooper attendance almost 50%

by JILL BETTNER

A locker slams and the sound, magnified several times by the silence in the nearly empty halls, resounds through Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove.

Normally jammed with students, laughing and jostling each other as they hurry to classes, the halls are virtually deserted, drained by a wave of flu and similar illnesses that have hit almost half the school's 750-student population.

One Cooper student, 14-year-old Dale Chany, died Monday of Reye's Syndrome, a rare childhood disease that doctors believe usually follows a flu or chicken pox virus.

An autopsy conducted at Evanston Hospital yesterday confirmed that the boy, who resided at 816 Brittany Dr., Arlington Heights, was apparently the latest victim of the puzzling disease that has killed at least six others in the Chicago area in the past two weeks.

ALTHOUGH THE absentee rate at

Cooper has been steadily increasing over the past month, the extraordinary number of students out this week indicates that many parents are being especially cautious and keeping at home children who show even the slightest flu symptoms.

About 40 students are absent daily at this time of the year, according to Larry Weaver, principal. Yesterday, the absentee list numbered 331 and Weaver expects the rate to go even higher in the next few days.

"I'm sure if a parent was trying to decide if a child was ill enough to stay at home, when he heard about Dale's death, he had to make the decision," Weaver said. "We've been making announcements, too, that the kids shouldn't come if they feel at all sick. I predict even higher absenteeism the rest of the week, but by then, pretty well most of the kids will have had it and gotten over it."

Assistant Principal Bob White said several parents called the school yesterday expressing concern over the apparent flu epidemic and some were worried that Reye's Syndrome might be contagious. Some parents want to see the school closed, he said, and one even suggested that the building be fumigated.

ACCORDING TO U. S. Department of Health official, Dr. Robert Rubin of the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Georgia, Reye's Syndrome is "definitely not contagious."

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill yesterday said he is not considering closing Cooper or any of the other 18 schools in the district that are also reporting "higher than usual" absences.

"Our information is that there's nothing we can gain by closing the schools," Gill said. "We want parents to keep children home if they feel ill or have fevers, but we do that all the time."

"The thing I'm really concerned about is the panic that could become associated with this kind of thing," the superintendent said. "I know it's difficult because parents are concerned and I can sympathize with them, but we have to try to remain calm."

AT COOPER, students and teachers are "numb" at Dale Chany's death. The eighth grader was a top student and an outstanding athlete.

Memorial services for Dale are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Kolsak of Wheeling Funeral Home, 189 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Dale was a member of the Cooper cross-country track team and a special award for future runners is being established in his memory. The honor will go to the most improved second-year member of the team each year.

Manhunt on for gunman

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman escaped with possibly as much as $100,000 or as little as $20,000 from an Arlington Heights drive-in bank Tuesday in a predawn holdup, setting off a wide police and FBI manhunt.

The First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility, Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road, was robbed at 6:45 a.m., apparently by two men, who police believe fled town and escaped on the Northwest Tollway.

Police bulletins of the robbery placed the take as high as $100,000, but bank spokesmen placed the figure at "$20,000 and even that could be high."

POLICE SAID a 23-year-old woman teller arrived at the drive-in facility at Eastman and Arlington Heights Road about 6:45 a.m. and was confronted by a masked man. The man brandished a blue steel automatic pistol and reportedly said, "I know you have the keys. I've been watching you for some time."

The gunman forced her to open the building and to turn off the alarm system. The teller then opened a small safe and gave the man two bags of cash which he placed in a blue cloth bag.

The teller was then taken out of the building and the gunman locked her keys inside. She was ordered to run south on Arlington Heights Road.

The teller told police she heard the man running and then the sound of a car driving away. She then ran to the main bank building at Dunton and Campbell streets, about four blocks away, where she telephoned police.

A POLICE TAPE recording of the call said, "I've been held up at the bank at Eastman and Arlington Heights... it's too late, he's gone."

The teller was crying and recordings of the police radio calls indicated there was some confusion about which facility was robbed. The first squad car arrived at the drive-in facility within a minute of the teller's call, according to the tapes.

Bruce Dodds, executive vice president of the bank, said an armed guard usually opens the drive-in bank at 6:45 a.m. but was late for work yesterday. He said the girl had picked up the keys to the facility from the main bank after she saw the guard was not there yet.

It was on her return to the drive-in building that she was surprised by the gunman.

THE BANK IS protected by an alarm and automatic camera system, according to Dodds. Arlington Heights police said the alarm is not directly hooked into the police station.

Dodds said the automatic camera operates at random intervals around the clock. Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall said the camera was not in operation at the time of the robbery.

McDougall said the gunman was calm

This time, drive-up teller wasn't so lucky

by BETTY LEE

It was just two years ago Jan. 20 that a gunman appeared at the First Arlington National Bank drive-up window and ordered a 17-year-old woman teller to open the safe.

The tall, heavy set man brandished a snub-nosed revolver and threatened to kill her if she didn't hurry. While the gunman waited nervously outside the teller's cage the girl told him that an alarm would sound off if the door was opened. Then she crept into the cage and pushed a button to set a second alarm. Finally in desperation she threw the vault keys down the vent.

The holdup was thwarted and the gunman fled.

Yesterday a different teller at the drive-in facility at Arlington Heights Road and Eastman Avenue wasn't as lucky.

The robbery, the second at the First Arlington National Bank, whose main office is located at Campbell Street and Dunton Avenue, is the latest of several back robberies in the Northwest suburbs in recent years.

LAST APRIL, a gunman walked into the North Point State Bank in Arlington Heights and approached a teller, demanding that she put money in a briefcase he carried with him.

He quietly walked out of the bank building with $18,000, unnoticed by other bank employees.

FBI agents are still looking for the gunman.

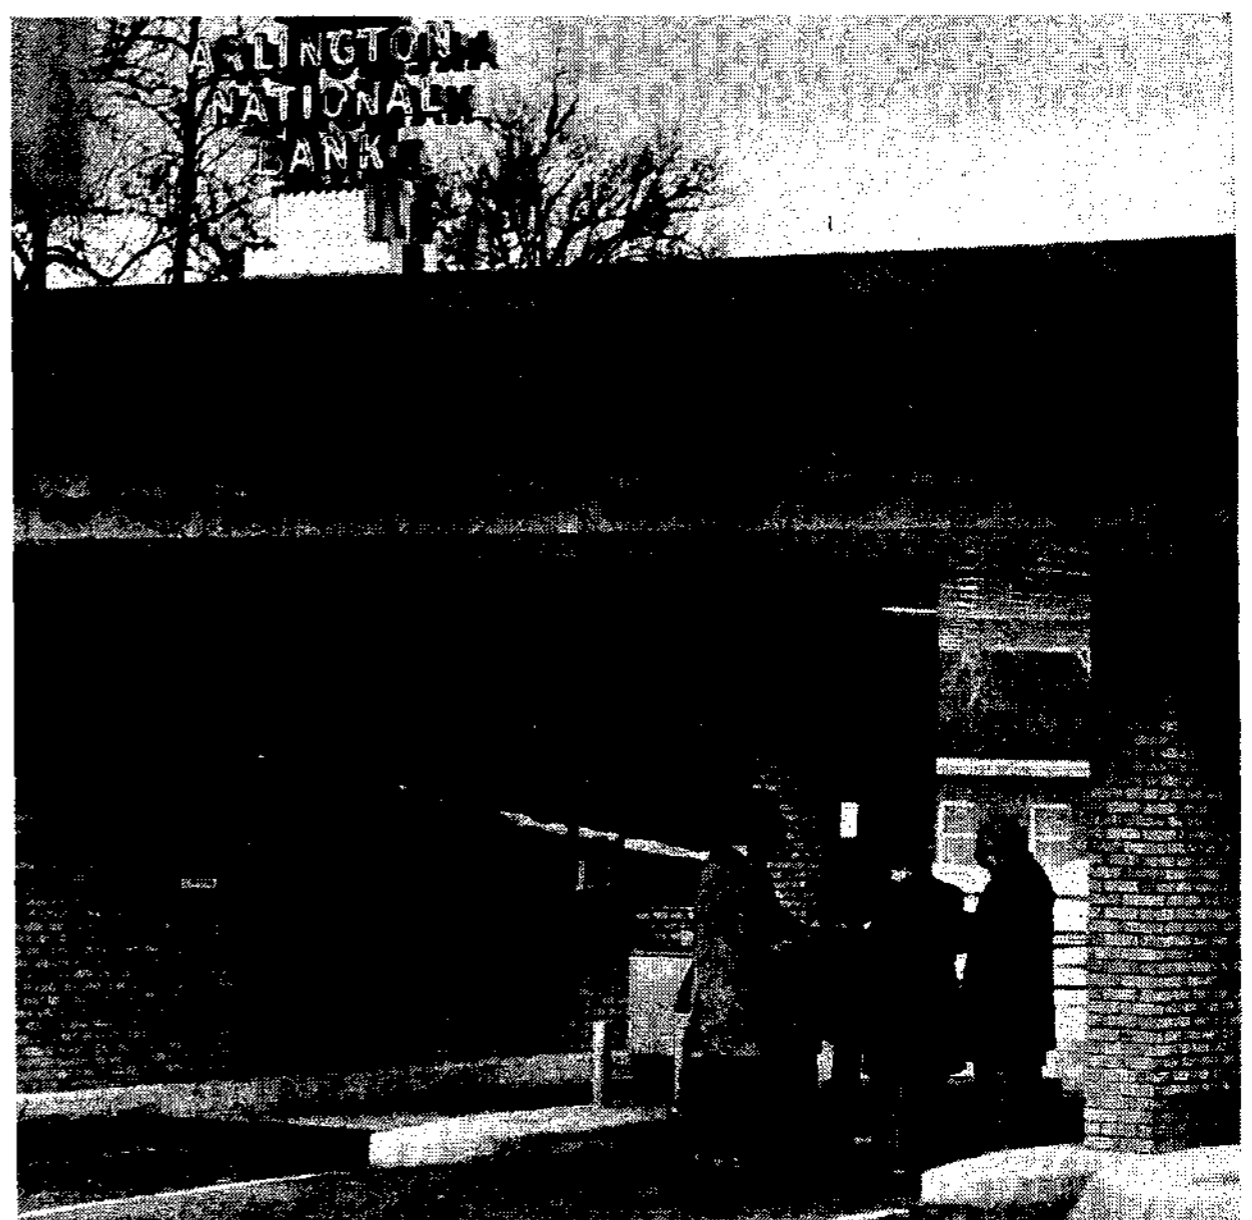

"The case is still under investigation," said Harry Walker of the Des Plaines FBI office. Walker could not say at the present time whether there were new leads to the robbery.

A PAIR OF MASKED gunmen surprised employees at the Bank of Buffalo Grove in 1972. The two hid in the basement near the vault and waited for the employees with the money.

The two made off with more than $111,000. In the two years since the robbery, no suspects have been arrested.

"Federal authorities have a pretty good idea who the perpetrators were, but

Committee seeks to keep hot lunch cost at 55 cents

A board of education committee will recommend Thursday night the price of a hot lunch in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 remain at 55 cents, despite a 13.5 per cent hike in the charge by a supplier.

The board's business committee met yesterday morning to review potential action in the face of what had been estimated as a $4,000 deficit anticipated in the hot lunch account because of the cost increase. But Dist. 54 Business Mgr. Marvin Lapicola told committee members the deficit has been recomputed, and now is expected to be $684, what he termed "the break even range."

Lapicola said the discrepancy stemmed from the fact he had included the labor cost of lunch hour supervisors in his first computation. The supervisors are needed, whether the district serves hot lunches or children bring cold lunches from home, he said.

THE SALARY cost was removed from the figures for the second estimate, said Lapicola.

Lapicola also noted the figures are based on lunch volume sales. If the volume goes up, the deficit will be reduced, and could in fact become a small surplus, he said.

Board member Arlene Czajkowski also noted labor costs would increase if the district raised the lunch price by one penny, as workers then would have to count change for each lunch.

The district's supplier, Mass Feeding Corp. of Elk Grove Village, informed the board earlier this month the lunch cost to the district effective Feb. 1 would increase by 2.5 cents to 47.7 cents per lunch.

The 7.3-cent difference in the cost to the student is to pay direct operating costs of supervisors, rubbish removal, tickets, utilities, wiring, tables and trash compactors.

Hoffman fire department by Sept. 1?

Hoffman Estates could have a municipal fire department serving all sections of the village, including Winston Knolls, by Sept. 1.

The actual time of changeover from a fire protection district to a village department cannot be accurately predicted for three to four weeks, but Sept. 1 is the target date.

The timing was disclosed yesterday by George Knickerbocker, attorney in the firm of Hofert and Samelson, which represents the village of Hoffman Estates. Knickerbocker prepared a "very preliminary" report for the village outlining three procedures which can be followed in effecting the transformation.

"We are shooting for September. At this point, there is no way I can say if it's possible or not possible, until we know the starting date" of legal steps in the process, said Knickerbocker.

"In about three to four weeks we will know better, have an idea of when we'll be able to file the petition," he said. Petitions to the Circuit Court of Cook County are among necessary steps.

IN HIS REPORT, submitted by Village Atty. Edward Hofert, Knickerbocker listed three provisions of state law which could be employed in setting up the municipal department. On the basis of only preliminary legal investigation he suggested two could be used in the Hoffman Estates changeover. The final decision on which procedures will be followed is to be worked out by Hofert and Arthur Zimmerman, fire district attorney.

The village now is served by four the Hoffman Estates district. Palatine Rural FPD serves the Winston Knolls subdivision, which is in Palatine Township, and would if no changeover is effected, also serve the proposed Westbury development. East Dundee FPD serves the area north of the tollway and west of Bartlett Road, and Bartlett Countryside FPD serves another small area of the village.

Knickerbocker recommends all areas within the village not currently served by Hoffman Estates FPD be disconnected from their existing districts and annexed to Hoffman Estates FPD, before the village department is established.

FOR THE SECTIONS now served by East Dundee and Bartlett Countryside, the procedure which now appears most

Hoffman Estates wrapup

Renters' deposit called 'prejudicial'

A practice Hoffman Estates officials describe as discriminatory toward home renters will be discontinued, if trustees agree to revise water service deposit rules.

The village requires renters of homes to pay a $25 deposit to receive water service. Homeowners are not required to pay the deposit.

Village Mgr. George Longmeyer this week recommended the deposit from renters be eliminated, saying it "is prejudicial." The deposit was to provide the village with collection power if water bills went unpaid. Longmeyer noted "just because someone rents does not mean he does not pay his water bills."

LONGMEYER ALSO recommended the village adjust its deposit policy for residents with a history of non-payment. Currently, the village requires a $10 turn on fee, plus a $25 deposit, to restore water service to residents who have lost it for non-payment of one bill.

Longmeyer recommended the new policy require deposits only after a resident has defaulted on two bills within a 12-month period. The deposit required then would be $30 instead of $25. The village bills water users every second month, or six times per year.

Trustees asked whether the village could keep a deposit indefinitely, or should return it after the resident has completed a full year with no further cases of non-payment.

The suggested changes were referred to the board's finance committee for study.

Ordinance to be amended

Trustees in Hoffman Estates have directed Village Atty. Edward Hofert to prepare an amendment to ordinances requiring engineering review of all plans for development within the village.

The amendment would standardize rates charged prospective developers for plan review and development inspection. Previously, ordinances providing for each zoning category set engineering and inspection fees, and the fees varied with the zoning.

Under the amendment, developers would deposit with the village a percentage of the estimated cost of construction of sanitary and storm sewers, roadway improvements, water supply and parking facilities, sidewalks and street lighting. Village charges would be based on actual cost of those items, and any differences with the estimate would be made up either by refund or billing.

Contract considered

A contract between B. A. Berkus & Associates, planning consultants, and the village of Hoffman Estates, was considered but not approved this week by the village board.

Actual consultant work for the village is to be done by Jerry Estes, formerly associated with Rolf Campbell and Associates. The village's previous consultant contract was with the Campbell firm, and is being changed because Estes changed firms. Under the contract, the village would agree to pay Berkus a minimum of $6,000 per year. Berkus is to be paid on an hourly rate for Estes services, and if the village requires his services in excess of the $6,000 figure, it will pay an additional amount.

The contract with Campbell had the same basic provisions, but the retainer was $6,200.

feasible to Knickerbocker would be for all owners of land to sign a petition seeking the disconnection. Because the Palatine Rural FPD area is densely populated with Winston Knolls residents, he recommends a referendum procedure. Under that provision, only one per cent of all voters in the area to be disconnected from Palatine Rural and annexed to Hoffman Estates FPD would sign a petition seeking a referendum, to be voted by all residents of the area.

In any procedure, the final disconnection from existing service, annexation to Hoffman Estates FPD and transfer to a municipal department would require court sanction.

Knickerbocker predicts there may be some hesitancy on the part of residents of the other districts to joining the Hoffman Estates FPD. This would stem from the fact their current districts have no outstanding bonded indebtedness, while Hoffman Estates FPD does and they would then assume responsibility for a portion of it. But Knickerbocker pointed out one selling point.

WHEN THE VILLAGE does establish a municipal department, residents of those sections would in effect experience double taxation. If they had not previously joined Hoffman Estates FPD, he said. This would be because their village taxes would support fire protection, while they would be paying taxes to the district in which they now live.

Knickerbocker also pointed out the village will assume the Hoffman Estates FPD's bonded indebtedness when it absorbs the district.

and "professional" during the holdup. He said the gunman was not abusive to the teller and reassured her he just wanted the money and would not hurt her if she followed instructions.

McDougall said another person may be involved. He said it was significant the girl did not hear the sound of a motor starting before the getaway car left.

THE ROBBER was described as a black man about 35 years old and wearing a nylon stocking and sun glasses over his face. McDougall said the mask distorted his features making a composite sketch of the robber difficult. He was wearing a light brown raincoat.

The car is believed to be a large dark sedan, possibly a Ford, police said. It is thought to have been driven south on Arlington Heights Road.

McDougall said there was nothing to indicate at this time the robbery was an "inside job." Dodds said the guard had been employed by the bank for more than five years and the teller more than two years.

Dodds said an exact amount could not be placed on the robbery. Of the reports of $100,000 being taken, he said, "It doesn't take that kind of money to run a drive-in facility."

Police said there was more money than usual at the facility because of the extended holiday weekend.

The money is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case immediately.

The drive-in facility opens for business at 7 a.m.

New program stresses individualized education

'Culture shock' in history class

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Conant High School has a history class that is a "type of educational culture shock" for students, according to teacher Ron Szymanski.

Instead of sitting in class listening to a lecture or watching a film, the class meets only to take attendance. After that, the students are on their own. Some students may remain in the classroom for a seminar on a particular topic, some may go to the audio-visual room to watch a film, some may take a book from the library and read a particular chapter, and some may spend the period working on a research project.

Szymanski's class is an experiment in individualized instruction for 30 juniors in advanced American history. The state school superintendent's office recently gave High School Dist. 211 $2,089 to fund the project this semester.

THE PURPOSE of individualization is to give a student a "choice in the manner in which he learns," says Szymanski.

At the beginning of this semester he told the class the objectives for the course, what the students would be expected to learn and what they would be tested on. Then Szymanski met privately with each student to draw up a contract spelling out the type of learning activities the student would follow to fulfill the objectives.

Now it's up to the student to do the work and complete his individual assignments, says Szymanski. The teacher is there to answer questions and give direction when asked.

The new approach is a shock to some students who are used to being told what to study and when, says Szymanski.

"The change to the less standardized system is pretty tough for them," he says. The individual approach "puts a great deal of personal responsibility on the student," Szymanski says.

Szymanski thinks the change toward individualization is a good one.

"One of the byproducts of our educational system is that we produce very good receivers of information. As long as students have someone telling them what to think then they don't have any problem," he says.

Szymanski hopes the new approach will teach students to study independently, to sort out raw data to determine for themselves what is important and what isn't. He hopes they'll come up with some new ways to learn and in the process he hopes they will renew their natural desire to learn.

TOO MANY ADULTS today "do not have the communication skills, the learning skills or the motivation" to go on learning years after high school or college, Szymanski says. If a student develops the ability and motivation early in life he will grow to be "an active, thinking member of the community." Szymanski hopes independent study and individualized instruction will become more common in high schools and elementary schools.

The individualized part of the American history course will last for seven weeks covering a unit on economics in the United States. Students will be graded from standardized tests, essay tests and research projects. Szymanski will spend most of his time helping students who are having problems with their assignments or are having problems adjusting to the new approach.

Much of the grant money will pay the salary of a teacher aide who will help grade papers and projects and supervise students while Szymanski is working with individual students. The rest of the money will finance projects by students which will be completed at the end of the seven-week period.

The projects are another departure from standard procedure. Instead of writing the usual term paper, students will be encouraged to try other forms of expression. As part of the contract with Szymanski, each student picks a subject to research and he may choose a number of ways to present his findings to the rest of the class.

SOME STUDENTS will write term papers, others plan to make films, prepare slide presentations, use overhead projectors, or use the school camera to take pictures for a photographic display. One of the reasons Szymanski chose the economics unit for the experiment is that it is easier for students to illustrate visually than most topics in history.

When the seven-week project is completed in April, Szymanski and Dist. 211 officials will evaluate it to determine whether it should be used in the district's other high schools. A detailed report on the project will be submitted to the state superintendent's office and will be available to other schools in the state on request.

Senior citizens pleased with bus service

by JULIA BAUER

Senior citizens on the new Palatine Township-sponsored bus liked what they saw yesterday, despite first-run delays in arrival time.

For 25 cents a ride, 20 township senior citizens traveled from their doorsteps to the bank, hardware store, shopping center and a church auxiliary meeting.

"We usually get a ride with our niece," said the Bartoses, the first riders, who were picked up 30 minutes behind schedule. Most patrons seemed happy about the independence offered them by the bus service, although the bus ran behind schedule most of the morning.

"A quarter," Bartos said, shaking his head. "You can't beat that." "It costs us more than a dollar just to ride from our house to the station," his wife chimed in, describing the local cab service which is the only other way to get around without driving.

THE TWICE-WEEKLY bus service is being subsidized by Palatine Township revenue sharing funds. For the first six months, the service is expected to cost approximately $3,000. Davidmeyer Bus Co. in Elk Grove Village is operating the 16 passenger bus.

Rides are available from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays by making reservations at least one day in advance, by phoning 991-1112.

The Palatine Township Council on the Aged, which organized the bus service, is also planning to start a hot meal service and senior citizen activity center. Planning for future recreational activities is the subject of a Friday night meeting open to senior citizens at Sanborn School cafeteria, 101 N. Oak St., Palatine, at 7

Police inspect 20 buses; find 1 faulty

About 20 school buses were inspected by state police at Schaumburg High School yesterday morning. One ticket was issued for a faulty turn signal.

State police have been making unannounced inspections throughout the area in recent weeks to check the safety of the buses and proper licensing of drivers.

The buses checked yesterday serve Schaumburg, Hoffman Estates and Conant high schools. One bus used by Schaumburg's building construction class to haul students and supplies to a construction site had a broken turn signal. Claude Bailey, director of transportation for High School Dist. 211, said the district will probably pay a small fine for the violation.

The local scene

Concert band performance set

The Conant High School bands will perform Thursday in the first annual winter concert scheduled from 7:30 p.m. in the Hoffman Estates High School auditorium.

The concert band ensemble and symphonic band ensemble as well as selected soloists and groups will perform. Tickets are available through the high school for $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

The Creative Learning Preschools of Elk Grove Village and Schaumburg are accepting registrations for the 1974-1975 school year.

The school will accept 3-4-5 year old children on a schedule of a.m. and p.m. sessions Monday thru Friday.

Registration fee of $10 (not refundable) and one month advance tuition. Payment must accompany the registration form. For additional information call Elk Grove, 954-0636 Monday - Friday, 8:30 - 11:20 a.m. Schaumburg, 885-2090, Monday & Friday 8:30 - 11:20, Tuesday & Thursday 12:30 - 3:15.

BUS TRIPS are restricted to destinations in Palatine Township and to the Arlington Heights Social Security office. And until licensing requirements for Rolling Meadows are approved for the new bus service, Rolling Meadows elderly will not be able to participate. Action on the licensing is expected within the next six weeks.

For the senior citizens who did ride the bus yesterday, the service was clearly a step in the right direction.

"I've been working for a bus like this for years," one woman said approvingly.

But there is at least one hazard: the bright yellow bus bears a striking resemblance to other school buses, particularly in the morning hours when streets are crowded with buses from local districts. One rider nearly mistook an elementary school bus for the township bus yesterday, and feared he had missed his ride when the school bus pulled away.

Inflation hasn't changed the price of ashes.

But it has changed the price of your home. For example, if you bought a $20,000 home in 1968—today it's worth about $27,000. Don't be left with a costly pile of ashes. Both communities approve compromise

Village, Des Plaines settle on Elmhurst Road border

The Mount Prospect Village Board and the Des Plaines City Council made it official last night: neither community will venture across Elmhurst Road.

The compromise truce draws to an effective halt the land-grabbing tactics that have characterized relations between the two neighboring suburbs for several months.

Specifically, Elmhurst Road will serve as a dividing line from Golf Road south to Oakton Street, with Mount Prospect on the west and Des Plaines on the east.

At Oakton, the boundary will extend west, with Mount Prospect taking in property to the north of Oakton and Des Plaines property to the south.

STILL UNRESOLVED, however, is the fate of the 8.9-acre former Dawn Fresh Mushroom Farm at the southwest corner of Elmhurst Road and Dempster Street, where ground will be broken this spring on a 198-unit apartment development known as The Hawthornes.

The property, which had been the object of a 4½-year legal battle, was awarded to Mount Prospect last fall by a Cook County Circuit Court judge because of a legal technicality. Des Plaines officials have indicated a desire, however, to appeal the ruling, and the Elmhurst Road boundary agreement specifically exempts the Dawn Fresh property.

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert last night said the overall compromise "stabilizes the area to the benefit of us all."

Because the disputed property around Elmhurst and Algonquin roads had been claimed by both Mount Prospect and Des Plaines, property owners were uncertain where to pay taxes and residents of apartments were uncertain where to obtain vehicle stickers.

IN CLAIMING property to the west of Elmhurst Road, Mount Prospect will take in the Waterfall and Terranova restaurants and a 10-acre undeveloped parcel.

Des Plaines, meanwhile, will annex a 37-acre parcel including the Colonial Apartments to the east of Elmhurst Road.

The compromise averts spending time and money in a lengthy court proceeding where the two towns appeared to be headed until they agreed to try and iron out their differences a few weeks ago.

The ensuing compromise was worked out in two luncheon meetings between the mayors and two representatives of each town. The boundary dispute arose in three instances, including the mushroom farm, when Des Plaines first annexed a piece of property that was later annexed by Mount Prospect, which regarded the prior annexations as improper for legal reasons.

'Romeo and Juliet' set to ecology theme

The fifth grade class of Robert Frost School will present a take-off on Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" tonight at 7:30 at the school, 1865 Aspen Dr., Mount Prospect.

The play will be oriented toward an ecology theme.

The performers will include members of Charlene Mysoc's reading class. The performance is free to the public.

Foes of rate hike question officials of utility firm

Cross-examination of Citizens Utilities Co. officials began yesterday as foes of a proposed rate hike by Citizens attempted to poke holes in testimony about the firm's financial standing.

Two officials of the Addison-based utility company were questioned by William J. Ide, chief water engineer of the Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC), and by Duane A. Feurer, an attorney engaged by the Village of Mount Prospect to represent the 2,350 homeowners in the New Town area who are served by Citizens Utilities.

The three hours of testimony was heard by the ICC. The hearing will continue at 10 a.m. today in the State of Illinois Building, 160 N. LaSalle St., and is expected to continue tomorrow and possibly also Friday before adjourning until March 19.

Citizens Utilities is seeking an increase in sewer charges from $3 to $6 a month and in water charges from a minimum $4.70 to $7 a month. The five-member ICC is expected to rule on the request by Aug. 20.

IN MANY cases, according to opponents of the rate increase, families would have to pay an additional $90 to $100 a year if the new rate schedule is approved.

Besides the New Town area of Mount Prospect, the Waycinden Park subdivision near Des Plaines, School Dist. 26 and the River Trails Park District receive sewer and water service from Citizens. All of the groups were represented at the hearing by attorneys.

Citizens Utilities is seeking the rate increase chiefly to cover rises in the cost of labor and materials since the last general rate increase was granted in 1964.

J. Hawley Taussig Jr., mechanical engineer for Citizens, and Jack O. Sanders, vice president of the firm, were questioned in detail yesterday about the size of the company, its policies and its finances. In several instances, they were unable to immediately provide answers to the queries, including such basic information as how many of their customers are homeowners and where their wells are located.

Large increases in vandalism and thefts of under $50 led an overall 24 per cent increase in crime last year in Mount Prospect.

According to figures released Tuesday by the Mount Prospect Police Department, the number of serious crimes (as defined by the uniform crime statistics of the FBI) increased from 1,498 in 1972 to 1,677. This 12 per cent increase is small, however, when compared with the 37 per cent increase in less serious crimes (again as defined by the FBI), which increased from 1,515 to 2,070 last year.

Juvenile crime increased also last year with 881 juveniles processed by the juvenile department. This was 10 per cent more than the 1972 figure of 801.

IN THE SERIOUS crime categories armed robberies, aggravated batteries, burglaries, auto thefts and thefts under $50 all showed an increase over the 1972 figures, released by the police department. There were decreases in the number of rapes, strong arm robberies, aggravated assaults and thefts over $50.

The figures show:

Robbery — Armed robbery up from four to six cases, but strong arm robbery down to one from seven.

Swimming signups begin Thursday

Grab your water wings and swim suits. Swimmers of all ages can sign up, starting Thursday, for the Mount Prospect Park District's interim swimming lessons.

A spokesman for the park district said signups for the five different courses will begin at 9 a.m. at Lions Park, 411 S. Maple St., Mount Prospect. Courses will be offered for preschool children, beginning boys and girls, advanced beginners through advanced swimmers, junior and senior life saving, and adults.

Fees will differ, depending on the course, but none will exceed $5, the spokesman said. The five-week courses will meet twice a week starting March 4. Further information can be obtained by calling the park pool at 437-6188 after 3:30 p.m. each day.

joined eight other senior troops in instructing younger scouts in a variety of skills. Some 70 Northwest suburban troops involving 1,000 girls and adults participated in the all-day venture in Arlington Heights.

School board okays outing for students

The Dist. 26 school board last night approved a plan to allow 160 eighth-grade students to participate in a four-day outdoor educational camping trip in May to George Williams College in Williams Bay, Wis.

The trip will be a pilot project this year which, if successful, will be instituted for all eighth-graders next year as part of the regular outdoor education program.

The cost of the residential camping trip to parents will be $27.99 per child. This sum represents costs for room and board. The district will pick up the tab for transportation, equipment, and other costs, which will total $2,060.

At least six faculty members will chaperone the trip, which is designed to "bring the environment into the classroom."

George Chase, a district teacher who will be a part of the faculty chaperone team, said the value of the program is that it will provide students the opportunity to be "directly exposed to reality."

CHASE SAID A program outline for the four-day trip will integrate many subject areas other than science and math. Students will also be exposed to subjects such as social studies, physical education and recreation, language arts and socialization.

The core group of 160 students who will participate in the program will begin a special program of ecological study which will culminate in the May trip. Vacancies made available by students who are not able to make the trip will be filled by students on a waiting list.

The George Williams camp, on the site of George Williams University, provides cabins, full-time nursing services and graduate student staff assistants as part of its services. In addition, Chase said, the camp is a good site for this project because it is close to Yerkes Observatory as well as natural settings.

Vandalism, thefts key to 24% crime increase

by TOM VON MALDER

Large increases in vandalism and thefts of under $50 led an overall 24 per cent increase in crime last year in Mount Prospect.

According to figures released Tuesday by the Mount Prospect Police Department, the number of serious crimes (as defined by the uniform crime statistics of the FBI) increased from 1,498 in 1972 to 1,677. This 12 per cent increase is small, however, when compared with the 37 per cent increase in less serious crimes (again as defined by the FBI), which increased from 1,515 to 2,070 last year.

Juvenile crime increased also last year with 881 juveniles processed by the juvenile department. This was 10 per cent more than the 1972 figure of 801.

IN THE SERIOUS crime categories armed robberies, aggravated batteries, burglaries, auto thefts and thefts under $50 all showed an increase over the 1972 figures, released by the police department. There were decreases in the number of rapes, strong arm robberies, aggravated assaults and thefts over $50.

The figures show:

Robbery — Armed robbery up from four to six cases, but strong arm robbery down to one from seven.

- Aggravated battery — Almost tripled with an increase from 12 in 1972 to 35 last year.
  - Aggravated assault — Down by 30 per cent from 27 cases to 19.
  - Burglary — A slight increase of 5 per cent with 1973's 227 cases showing 11 more than the previous year.
  - Burglary from auto — This new category showed 113 cases. No comparison with last year was available.
  - Theft — This category which includes shoplifting showed a 17 per cent increase in thefts of under $50 with 1,005 cases and a 31 per cent decrease in thefts over $50 with 214 cases. In 1972 there were 861 thefts under $50 and 309 thefts over $50.
  - Auto thefts — Up 10 per cent with 66 total cases. There were 60 auto thefts in 1972.
  - Other — No rapes were reported in 1973, although there were two reported in 1972. The first manslaughter case in two years was reported last year.
- The police department did not include statistics on how many cases of each type or totally were solved by arrests. These figures could not be obtained Tuesday.
- In the less serious crime categories, vandalism, other batteries, deceptive

- practices, marijuana misuses, driving under the influence and disorderly conduct all were on the increase. The categories showing the largest decreases were other assaults, runaway juveniles and fraud cases.
- The figures show:
- Other battery — Up from 26 to 85 cases.
- Other assaults — Down from 44 to 17 cases.
- Fraud Down from 23 to 15 cases (although the 1972 police figures said there were only 20 and not 23 cases).
- Deceptive practice — More than tripled with 63 cases in 1973 and only 13 cases in 1972.
- Vandalism — With burglary, the crime most affecting homeowners, it increased 77 per cent with 979 cases last year. There were 554 cases in 1972.
- Marijuana control Up in 1973 from 43 cases to 61.
- Driving under the influence — Covering both liquor and drugs, it more than doubled with an increase from 30 cases to 71. Violations of liquor laws increased from eight to 24 too, while drunkenness dropped from 26 to 18 cases.
- Disorderly conduct — The 349 cases reported in 1972 were topped by last year's 411.

Accidents down, but more costly

Although the number of traffic accidents decreased last year in Mount Prospect — for the first time in several years — the accidents that did occur were more costly in terms of injuries.

Again, in 1973 as in 1972, five persons were killed in traffic accidents. However, the number of those injured increased by 194 for a total of 488. This included 25 pedestrians struck by vehicles last year as compared with 15 in 1972.

Runaway juveniles — A decrease of 14 cases to a total of 98 in 1973.

In three previously unreported categories, the police said 121 autos were abandoned last year, 341 bicycles were stolen and another 105 bicycles were found. Unclaimed found bicycles are auctioned each year by the police.

Suicides were up by three with a total of five, but unsuccessful suicide attempts decreased by six for a total of eight. Police also reported 24 cases of drug overdoses, an increase of 10 over 1972's total.

Among the 881 juveniles handled for various offenses during the year, 197 had been previously picked up. The majority of the cases, 516, were settled by parent conferences only. Another 245 cases were referred to the juvenile's home town police department for counseling. Only 59 of the cases went to juvenile court and another 17 went to Mount Prospect branch of the Cook County Circuit Court.

Both communities approve compromise

Village, Des Plaines settle on Elmhurst Road border

The Mount Prospect Village Board and the Des Plaines City Council made it official last night: neither community will venture across Elmhurst Road.

The compromise truce draws to an effective halt the land-grabbing tactics that have characterized relations between the two neighboring suburbs for several months.

Specifically, Elmhurst Road will serve as a dividing line from Golf Road south to Oakton Street, with Mount Prospect on the west and Des Plaines on the east.

At Oakton, the boundary will extend west, with Mount Prospect taking in property to the north of Oakton and Des Plaines property to the south.

STILL UNRESOLVED, however, is the fate of the 8.9-acre former Dawn Fresh Mushroom Farm at the southwest corner of Elmhurst Road and Dempster Street, where ground will be broken this spring on a 198-unit apartment development known as The Hawthornes.

The property, which had been the object of a 4½-year legal battle, was awarded to Mount Prospect last fall by a Cook County Circuit Court judge because of a legal technicality. Des Plaines officials have indicated a desire, however, to appeal the ruling, and the Elmhurst Road boundary agreement specifically exempts the Dawn Fresh property.

Mount Prospect Mayor Robert D. Teichert last night said the overall compromise "stabilizes the area to the benefit of us all."

Because the disputed property around Elmhurst and Algonquin roads had been claimed by both Mount Prospect and Des Plaines, property owners were uncertain where to pay taxes and residents of apartments were uncertain where to obtain vehicle stickers.

IN CLAIMING property to the west of Elmhurst Road, Mount Prospect will take in the Waterfall and Terranova restaurants and a 10-acre undeveloped parcel.

Des Plaines, meanwhile, will annex a 37-acre parcel including the Colonial Apartments to the east of Elmhurst Road.

The compromise averts spending time and money in a lengthy court proceeding where the two towns appeared to be headed until they agreed to try and iron out their differences a few weeks ago.

The ensuing compromise was worked out in two luncheon meetings between the mayors and two representatives of each town. The boundary dispute arose in three instances, including the mushroom farm, when Des Plaines first annexed a piece of property that was later annexed by Mount Prospect, which regarded the prior annexations as improper for legal reasons.

Foes of rate hike question officials of utility firm

Cross-examination of Citizens Utilities Co. officials began yesterday as foes of a proposed rate hike by Citizens attempted to poke holes in testimony about the firm's financial standing.

Two officials of the Addison-based utility company were questioned by William J. Ide, chief water engineer of the Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC), and by Duane A. Feurer, an attorney engaged by the Village of Mount Prospect to represent the 2,350 homeowners in the New Town area who are served by Citizens Utilities.

The three hours of testimony was heard by the ICC. The hearing will continue at 10 a.m. today in the State of Illinois Building, 160 N. LaSalle St., and is expected to continue tomorrow and possibly also Friday before adjourning until March 19.

Citizens Utilities is seeking an increase in sewer charges from $3 to $6 a month and in water charges from a minimum $4.70 to $7 a month. The five-member ICC is expected to rule on the request by Aug. 20.

Manhunt on for gunman

$20,000 stolen from bank —or was it $100,000?

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman escaped with possibly as much as $100,000 or as little as $20,000 from an Arlington Heights drive-in bank Tuesday in a predawn holdup, setting off a wide police and FBI manhunt.

The First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility, Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road, was robbed at 6:45 a.m., apparently by two men, who police believe fled town and escaped on the Northwest Tollway.

Police bulletins of the robbery placed the take as high as $100,000, but bank spokesmen placed the figure at "$20,000 and even that could be high."

POLICE SAID a 23-year-old woman teller arrived at the drive-in facility at Eastman and Arlington Heights Road about 6:45 a.m. and was confronted by a masked man. The man brandished a blue steel automatic pistol and reportedly said, "I know you have the keys I've been watching you for some time."

The gunman forced her to open the building and to turn off the alarm system. The teller then opened a small safe and gave the man two bags of cash which he placed in a blue cloth bag.

The teller was then taken out of the building and the gunman locked her keys inside. She was ordered to run south on Arlington Heights Road.

The teller told police she heard the man running and then the sound of a car driving away. She then ran to the main bank building at Dunton and Campbell streets, about four blocks away, where she telephoned police.

A POLICE TAPE recording of the call said, "I've been held up at the bank at Eastman and Arlington Heights . . . it's too late, he's gone."

The teller was crying and recordings of the police radio calls indicated there was some confusion about which facility was robbed. The first squad car arrived at the drive-in facility within a minute of the teller's call, according to the tapes.

Bruce Dodds, executive vice president of the bank, said an armed guard usually opens the drive-in bank at 6:45 a.m. but was late for work yesterday. He said the girl had picked up the keys to the facility from the main bank after she saw the guard was not there yet.

It was on her return to the drive-in building that she was surprised by the gunman.

THE BANK IS protected by an alarm and automatic camera system, according to Dodds. Arlington Heights police said the alarm is not directly hooked into the police station.

Dodds said the automatic camera operates at random intervals around the clock. Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall said the camera was not in operation at the time of the robbery.

McDougall said the gunman was calm and "professional" during the holdup. He said the gunman was not abusive to the teller and reassured her he just wanted the money and would not hurt her if she followed instructions.

McDougall said another person may be involved. He said it was significant the girl did not hear the sound of a motor starting before the getaway car left.

THE ROBBER was described as a black man about 35 years old and wearing a nylon stocking and sun glasses over his face. McDougall said the mask distorted his features making a composite sketch of the robber difficult. He was wearing a light brown raincoat.

The car is believed to be a large dark sedan, possibly a Ford, police said. It is thought to have been driven south on Arlington Heights Road.

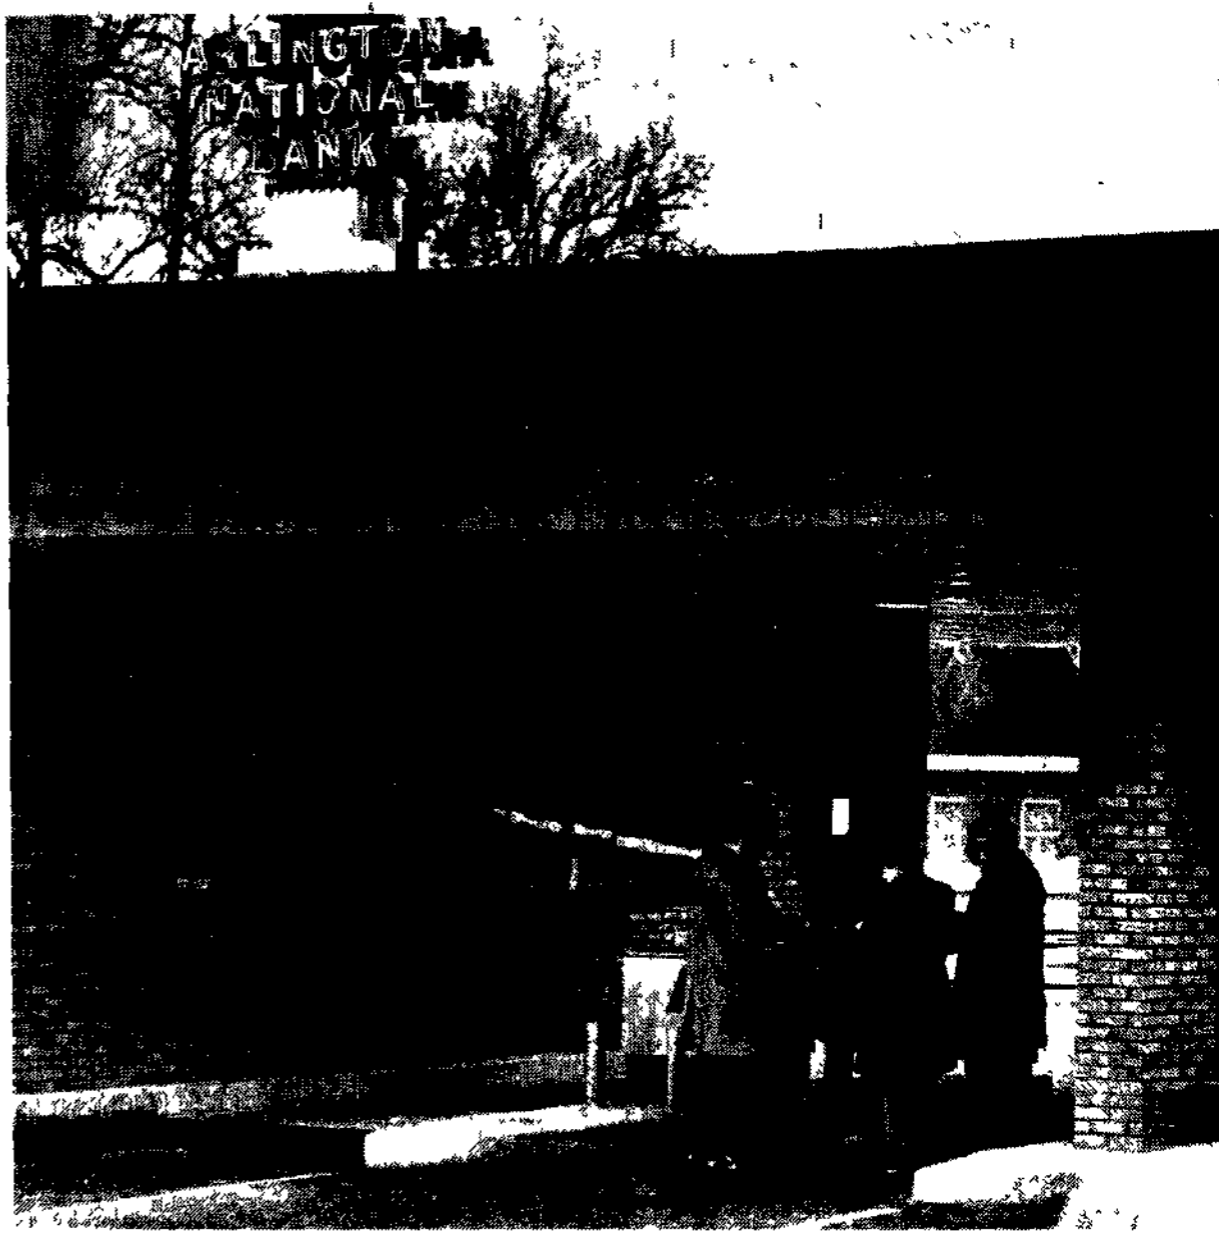

McDougall said there was nothing to indicate at this time the robbery was an "inside job." Dodds said the guard had been employed by the bank for more than five years and the teller more than two years.

Dodds said an exact amount could not be placed on the robbery. Of the reports of $100,000 being taken, he said, "It doesn't take that kind of money to run a drive-in facility."

Police said there was more money than usual at the facility because of the extended holiday weekend.

The money is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case immediately.

The drive-in facility opens for business at 7 a.m.

FBI AGENTS HUDDLE at the drive-in facility of the First Arlington National Bank. The loss, estimated at up to $100,000, was federally insured. Police said they are following several leads in the holdup.

Dist. 57 wrapup

Roofing bid OK generates dispute

A vote to accept a bid for roofing work at three schools in Dist. 57 generated a bit of controversy at the school board meeting Monday night. A representative from the Tremco Manufacturing Co., who did not bid on the project, charged the board with accepting an improper bid for the work.

Sandy Cameron, a representative with Tremco, said the bid accepted by the board from Imperial Building Maintenance Inc. of Ingleside for $18,814 did not meet specifications as outlined in the bidding.

Imperial submitted two bids for the work, Cameron said, one giving a price of more than $21,000 for steam refined asphalt and a second for the bid accepted by the board for air blown asphalt.

Cameron said the specifications clearly called for steam refined asphalt, which is a finishing process to eliminate impurities in the asphalt after it is applied to a surface.

J. C. Busenhart, district business manager, said Imperial was contacted after the bids were opened to clarify what the company proposed to do in the $18,814 bid. Busenhart said the representative said the process would include steam refined finishing.

The board did not rescind its awarding of the bid to Imperial because it said any irregularities in the bid would be determined by the school district attorney. The contract for the work, the board said, will stipulate that steam refined finishing be done as called for in specifications for the work.

Imperial was the second lowest bidder for the work with Mono Roofing of Wood Dale entering the lowest bid of $19,660. The board accepted the Imperial bid because the company has done work for the district in the past.

Counselor, art coordinator OK'd

The Dist. 57 school board has approved an administration proposal to hire a guidance counselor and a district art coordinator for the 1974-75 school year.

The counselor will work at Lincoln Junior High School. The art coordinator will be charged with developing and supervising an art program for the district and assisting the administration and staff. The art coordinator will also work with the cultural arts committees of the PTAs.

The board also voted to sanction a study of the industrial arts wing of the junior high to determine what things can be done to improve the space allocation there.

Supt. Earl Sutter said a committee will study the area to see if rooms can be shifted to create more space in the wing.

5 teaching positions cut

A projected decrease in enrollment next year will mean the elimination of five teaching positions in Dist. 57 according to a staffing report submitted to the school board.

Supt. Earl Sutter said the positions could be eliminated without reducing program services. The schools which will probably be affected by the staff cuts are Westbrook, Fairview and Lincoln Junior High.

The positions will probably be eliminated by not rehiring to fill positions that become vacant. Assistant Supt. Dwight Hall said if it is necessary to let teachers go to cut the staff, they will be given first consideration for hiring if new jobs open up in the district.

Revised policy manual expected

A revised policy manual is expected to be presented to the Dist. 57 board at its next meeting in March. Board members will be asked to review the manual and be ready to vote on it at the board's April meeting.

Board member William Holloway announced that negotiations for teachers' 1974-75 contract will get underway sometime next month.

Postal employees honor Ben Nerge

Ben Nerge retired from the Mount Prospect Post Office in June, 1972 after 25 years of service. Last month, a number of his fellow postal employees hosted a party to honor him.

Ben started his postal career when the department was located on Main Street by Meeske's Food Store. He continued with the post office when it moved across the tracks by the Federal Savings and Loan and then to its present location on Evergreen Avenue.

Ben was Mount Prospect's first foot carrier mailman. He was also the local post office's first rural route carrier. He later advanced to superintendent of mails and then became assistant postmaster until his retirement.

The celebration last week began at a cocktail party at the home of the Elroy Pohlmanns, 211 S. Owen St. A dinner followed at Evans Restaurant on Emerson Street. Ben received a gift from the postal employees and Mrs. Nerge was presented with a corsage.

KEEP SAVING your newspapers! Next Saturday, Feb. 23, Boy Scout Troop 51 has a paper drive. Place bundles at the curb and they'll be picked up in the area bounded by Golf Road on the South, Kensington Road on the North, Mount Prospect Road on the east and the village limits on the west. You can also drop them off in the parking lot at Evergreen and Wille streets, or call the Bazans, 392-2278, for pickup service.

School board's Sparks hedges on reelection bid

With the first day to file nominating petitions for open seats on the Dist. 59 school board only a week away, Board Pres. Allen K. Sparks has indicated he's "keeping my options open" and might be a candidate for reelection.

Sparks, who is completing his second three-year term on the Elk Grove Township board, said last year he would not seek reelection this year.

"I haven't made up my mind yet," said Sparks when asked again if he will be a candidate for reelection. Sparks did say he had taken out the necessary petition papers, which have to be signed by 50 district voters before his name can be placed on the school board election ballot.

Those who wish to run for one of the two open seats on the board in the April 13 election can pick up petition forms at the Dist. 59 Administration Center, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

The first day to file the petitions is Wednesday, Feb. 27.

Qualifications for a school board member include that the candidate be a U. S. citizen 21 years of age or older. Also required is that the candidate be a legal voter who has lived in the state and school district at least one year prior to the election.

Petitions have to be filed by March 22 in order for the candidate's name to appear on the school board ballot. Elections this year will be on Saturday, April 13, at all Dist. 59 schools.

Dist. 59 includes Elk Grove Village and parts of Arlington Heights, Des Plaines and Mount Prospect.

Board member Erwin Poklacki, who also is up for reelection this year, has reaffirmed his intention not to seek reelection to the seven member board.

For more information on the school board election or how to obtain an absentee ballot for the election, residents are asked to contact the Dist. 59 administration center, 437-1000.

Flu, illness, fright cut Cooper attendance almost 50%

by JILL BETTNER

A locker slams and the sound, magnified several times by the silence in the nearly empty halls, resounds through Cooper Junior High School in Buffalo Grove.

Normally jammed with students, laughing and jostling each other as they hurry to classes, the halls are virtually deserted, drained by a wave of flu and similar illnesses that have hit almost half the school's 750-student population.

One Cooper student, 14-year-old Dale Chany, died Monday of Reye's Syndrome, a rare childhood disease that doctors believe usually follows a flu or chicken pox virus.

An autopsy conducted at Evanston Hospital yesterday confirmed that the boy, who resided at 816 Brittany Dr., Arlington Heights, was apparently the latest victim of the puzzling disease that has killed at least six others in the Chicago area in the past two weeks.

ALTHOUGH THE absentee rate at

Cooper has been steadily increasing over the past month, the extraordinary number of students out this week indicates that many parents are being especially cautious and keeping at home children who show even the slightest flu symptoms.

About 40 students are absent daily at this time of the year, according to Larry Weaver, principal. Yesterday, the absentee list numbered 331 and Weaver expects the rate to go even higher in the next few days.

"I'm sure if a parent was trying to decide if a child was ill enough to stay at home, when he heard about Dale's death, he had to make the decision," Weaver said. "We've been making announcements, too, that the kids shouldn't come if they feel at all sick. I predict even higher absenteeism the rest of the week, but by then, pretty well most of the kids will have had it and gotten over it."

Assistant Principal Bob White said several parents called the school yesterday expressing concern over the apparent flu epidemic and some were worried that Reye's Syndrome might be contagious, some parents want to see the school closed, he said, and one even suggested that the building be fumigated.

ACCORDING TO U. S. Department of Health official, Dr. Robert Rubin of the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, Georgia, Reye's Syndrome is "definitely not contagious."

Dist. 21 Supt. Kenneth Gill yesterday said he is not considering closing Cooper or any of the other 16 schools in the district that are also reporting "higher than usual" absences.

"Our information is that there's nothing we can gain by closing the schools," Gill said. "We want parents to keep children home if they feel ill or have fevers, but we do that all the time."

"The thing I'm really concerned about is the panic that could become associated with this kind of thing," the superintendent said. "I know it's difficult because parents are concerned and I can sympathize with them, but we have to try to remain calm."

AT COOPER, students and teachers are "numb" at Dale Chany's death. The eighth grader was a top student and an outstanding athlete.

Memorial services for Dale are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Thursday at Kolssak of Wheeling Funeral Home, 189 S. Milwaukee Ave.

Dale was a member of the Cooper cross-country track team and a special award for future runners is being established in his memory. The honor will go to the most improved second-year member of the team each year.

Police say $100,000 stolen, bank says $20,000

1st Arlington bank robbed, but how much?

by JOE SWICKARD

A masked gunman escaped with possibly as much as $100,000 or as little as $20,000 from an Arlington Heights drive-in bank Tuesday in a predawn holdup, setting off a wide police and FBI manhunt.

The First Arlington National Bank drive-in facility, Eastman Avenue and Arlington Heights Road, was robbed at 6:45 a.m., apparently by two men, who police believe fled town and escaped on the Northwest Tollway.

Police bulletins of the robbery placed the take as high as $100,000, but bank spokesmen placed the figure at "$20,000 and even that could be high."

POLICE SAID a 23-year-old woman teller arrived at the drive-in facility at Eastman and Arlington Heights Road about 6:45 a.m. and was confronted by a masked man. The man brandished a blue steel automatic pistol and reportedly said, "I know you have the keys. I've been watching you for some time."

The gunman forced her to open the building and to turn off the alarm system. The teller then opened a small safe and gave the man two bags of cash which he placed in a blue cloth bag.

The teller was then taken out of the building and the gunman locked her keys inside. She was ordered to run south on Arlington Heights Road.

The teller told police she heard the man running and then the sound of a car driving away. She then ran to the main bank building at Dunton and Campbell streets, about four blocks away, where she telephoned police.

A POLICE TAPE recording of the call said, "I've been held up at the bank at Eastman and Arlington Heights... it's too late, he's gone."

The teller was crying and recordings of the police radio calls indicated there was some confusion about which facility was robbed. The first squad car arrived at the drive-in facility within a minute of the teller's call, according to the tapes.

Bruce Dodds, executive vice president of the bank, said an armed guard usually opens the drive-in bank at 6:45 a.m. but was late for work yesterday. He said the girl had picked up the keys to the facility from the main bank after she saw the guard was not there yet.

It was on her return to the drive-in building that she was surprised by the gunman.

THE BANK IS protected by an alarm and automatic camera system, according to Dodds. Arlington Heights police said the alarm is not directly hooked into the police station.

Dodds said the automatic camera operates at random intervals around the clock. Arlington Heights Police Capt. Irvin McDougall said the camera was not in operation at the time of the robbery.

McDougall said the gunman was calm

This time, drive-up teller wasn't so lucky

by BETTY LEE

It was just two years ago Jan. 20 that a gunman appeared at the First Arlington National Bank drive-up window and ordered a 17-year-old woman teller to open the safe.

The tall, heavy set man brandished a snub-nosed revolver and threatened to kill her if she didn't hurry. While the gunman waited nervously outside the teller's cage the girl told him that an alarm would sound off if the door was opened. Then she crept into the cage and pushed a button to set a second alarm. Finally in desperation she threw the vault keys down the vent.

The holdup was thwarted and the gunman fled.

Yesterday a different teller at the drive-in facility at Arlington Heights Road and Eastman Avenue wasn't as lucky.

The robbery, the second at the First Arlington National Bank, whose main office is located at Campbell Street and Dunton Avenue, is the latest of several back robberies in the Northwest suburbs in recent years.

LAST APRIL, a gunman walked into the North Point State Bank in Arlington Heights and approached a teller, demanding that she put money in a briefcase he carried with him.

He quietly walked out of the bank building with $18,000, unnoticed by other bank employees.

FBI agents are still looking for the gunman.

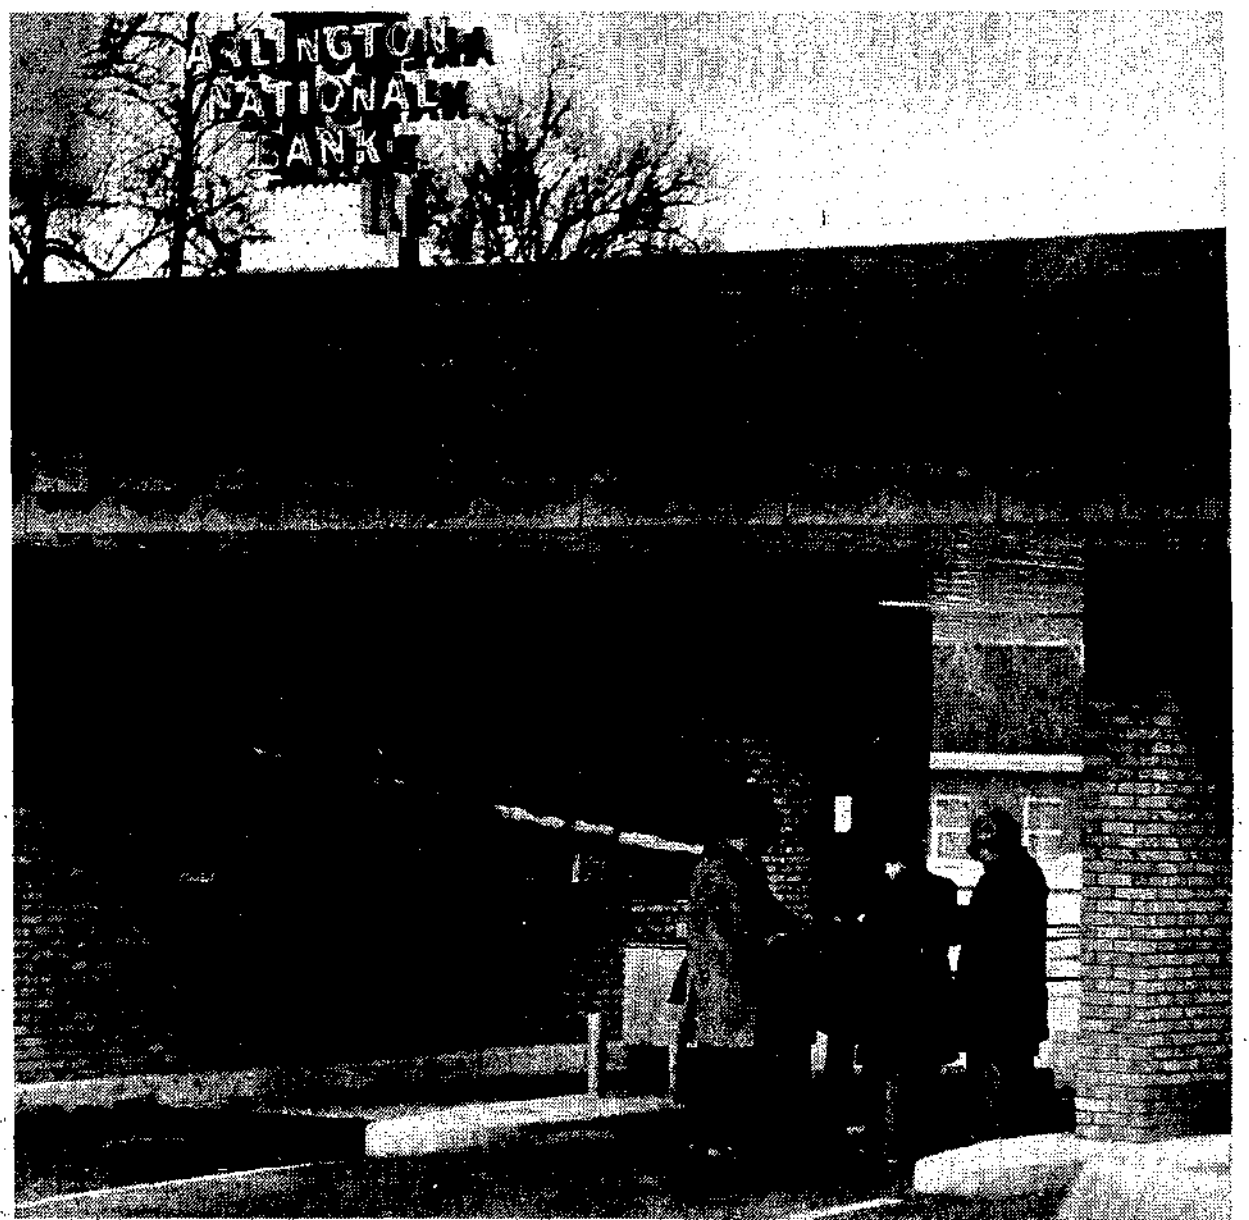

"The case is still under investigation," said Harry Walker of the Des Plaines FBI office. Walker could not say at the present time whether there were new leads to the robbery.

A PAIR OF MASKED gunmen surprised employees at the Bank of Buffalo Grove in 1972. The two hid in the basement near the vault and waited for the employees with the money.

The two made off with more than $111,000. In the two years since the robbery, no suspects have been arrested.

"Federal authorities have a pretty good idea who the perpetrators were, but

Mall OKd for Palatine, Arlington Heights roads

The Arlington Heights Village Board has approved plans for a 32-acre enclosed mall shopping center at the southeast corner of Arlington Heights and Palatine roads.

The shopping mall, to be developed by Jack Jacobs & Co., will include a Dominick's supermarket, Robert Hall, an unnamed department store and other smaller stores.

The project is scheduled for completion by mid-1975.

The 7-2 vote approving the development of the last large commercial site in Arlington Heights came after a lengthy discussion of how the shopping center will relate to a separate commercial development planned for a six-acre site directly south of the mall.

THAT PROPERTY is owned by Palatine banker Gerald Fitzgerald who is planning to build a drive-in bank and 40-lane bowling alley on the property.

Fitzgerald's plans are expected to draw opposition from homeowners living south of his property when they are presented to the Arlington Heights Plan Commission at an as yet unscheduled date.

Several trustees said they thought Fitzgerald's project and the shopping center should be planned as one development.

"I cannot picture how traffic will work at all," said Trustee Alice Harms, speaking of the relationship of the two developments and the nearby intersection of Palatine and Arlington Heights roads.

"Two shopping centers, back-to-back, doesn't make any kind of sense to me at all," she said.

Trustee James T. Ryan said the two projects gave the village a "shot at overall planning" in the area.

HOWEVER, THE ATTORNEY for the Jacobs company, Donald Kahan, said he

Trustees consider village tax increase

The possibility of a village tax increase was thrown before the Arlington Heights village board's finance committee last night.

Three trustees — Alice Harms, Dave Griffin and Ralph Charbon — said they would rather add about 6 cents to the real estate tax than tap federal revenue sharing money to make up a projected $200,000 deficit in the 1974-75 village budget.

However, two other trustees — Ted Salinsky and Frank Palmatier — said they could not justify raising taxes when the village would have a total of $1.1 million in federal revenue sharing funds by the end of the next budget year.

The question of a tax increase versus federal revenue sharing spending will be discussed by the full village board at its March 4 meeting.

A CLOSE vote is anticipated at that time, with village president Jack Walsh in opposition to any tax increase.

The proposed 6-cent increase, coupled with a 3.5-cent increase already budgeted for municipal employee pensions, would add $9.50 to a tax bill for a house with a $10,000 assessed valuation.

The finance committee last night accepted a recommendation to increase village vehicle license fees from $10 to $15

McDougall said another person may be involved. He said it was significant the being able to prove it is another story," said Buffalo Grove Chief Harry Walsh. He said his understanding of the case is that federal officials are lacking needed evidence to arrest the suspects.

Described as a modern-day "Bonnie and Clyde," Christopher McCarthy and his wife, Elaine, robbed the Des Plaines Trust and Savings Bank in 1971.

McCarthy told a teller at the bank to fill a large envelope with money. He fled with $1,900 in a car driven by his wife.

While on a robbery and kidnap spree McCarthy was killed in a shootout during a New Jersey bank robbery. Mrs. McCarthy fled the holdup scene but later committed suicide.

girl did not hear the sound of a motor starting before the getaway car left.

THE ROBBER was described as a black man about 35 years old and wearing a nylon stocking and sun glasses over his face. McDougall said the mask distorted his features making a composite sketch of the robber difficult. He was wearing a light brown raincoat.

The car is believed to be a large dark sedan, possibly a Ford, police said. It is thought to have been driven south on Arlington Heights Road.

McDougall said there was nothing to indicate at this time the robbery was an "inside job." Dodds said the guard had been employed by the bank for more than five years and the teller more than two years.

Dodds said an exact amount could not be placed on the robbery. Of the reports of $100,000 being taken, he said, "It doesn't take that kind of money to run a drive-in facility."

Police said there was more money than usual at the facility because of the extended holiday weekend.

The money is insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The Federal Bureau of Investigation was called into the case immediately.

The drive-in facility opens for business at 7 a.m.

The fee increases are expected to raise $180,000 which will be used to reduce the anticipated budget deficit.

Salinsky and Palmatier, both finance committee members, said they were staunchly opposed to the tax hike as long as revenue sharing money was available. Salinsky pointed to recent increases in property assessments that will be felt by the taxpayer in the form of higher taxes, regardless of whether the actual tax rate is increased.

HOWEVER, MRS. Harms argued that the revenue sharing should be reserved for big, expensive public projects that the village would otherwise be unable to finance.

She said that people expect taxes for village services to rise, just as costs of all other things continue to go up.

Clarbour said the $9.50 tax increase being proposed would be a small part of an Arlington Heights homeowners' $1,000 to $2,000 annual property tax bill.

Palmatier, finance committee chairman, said he has been in favor of not spending the revenue sharing money because he thought it may be necessary to use the funds for flood control if a May 18 referendum on the proposed $16.5 flood control program for the village fails.

"I now think there's a definite possibility that the referendum will carry and I can't justify raising the real estate tax when we've got this revenue sharing in the bank," he said.

Machine money gone

Thieves last week took a coin box with about $120 from a copy machine at the Osco Drug store, 995 N. Elmhurst Rd., Mount Prospect police said yesterday. It is believed phiers were used to remove the coin box. The machine was at the front of the store.

Mardi Gras slated at St. Theresa Church

The second annual Mardi Gras of St. Theresa Church, 445 N. Benton St., Palatine, will be at 8 p.m. Saturday at the church.

The Mardi Gras will feature five rooms with various types of entertainment including an Hawaiian room with hula girls and a fire dancer, a Latin Quarter, Casino Royale, Second City or Happy Medium and a Honky Tonk room.

PTA notes

Beverly Sugar, counselor at Friendship Junior High School in Des Plaines, will host a parent discussion today at 10 a.m. at Juliette Low School, 1530 S. Highland, Arlington Heights.

The program, sponsored by cultural arts committee of the Low Parent Teacher Club, is entitled "What Happens to the Girl?" and "How Equal is Your Daughter's Education."

did not want the shopping center delayed because of the Fitzgerald project.

Fitzgerald's attorney's, William Moore and Lemoine Stitt, argued in favor of joint consideration for the two parcels.

"All we're asking is that the village not act precipitously until the other project comes before you for consideration," Moore said. He estimated that it would take 60 days before the Fitzgerald plans are presented to the board.

The two developers have agreed to a swap of some 80,000 square feet in order to improve the configuration of Fitzgerald's land which has only limited frontage on Arlington Heights Road.

Trustee Frank Palmatier said considering both properties together would only pressure the plan commission and village board into approving the bank and bowling alley development.

"I think they (Fitzgerald) are trying to use this as a club to get the zoning they want," he said. The six-acre site probably should be developed with a less intense use than the proposed bank and bowling alley, Palmatier added.

TRUSTEE RICHARD J. Durava said he doubted the need and suitability of the site for another discount department store.

"There are already so many places in Arlington Heights where I can buy canvas tennis shoes with rubber soles made in Hong Kong," he said.

Durava and Mrs. Harms voted against the project.

Included in the shopping center site is the southwest corner of Rand and Palatine roads — a location village officials once feared would be built with a gas station.

The Jacobs company has promised that it will not put a gas station on the busy corner, although an automotive tires, batteries and accessories garage is part of the shopping center plans.

A restaurant, possibly Denny's, is also planned. A movie theater and a drive-in bank were mentioned, but are not contemplated now.

KAHAN, JACOBS' attorney, said the new shopping mall would compete with Woodfield and other regional shopping centers. He said stores in the new mall would be what he termed "national tenants."

"Your community is being drained of revenue by regional shopping centers outside the community," he told the board.

"Do you really think this is going to compete with Lord & Taylor, Marshall Field's and Carson's?" Durava questioned.

"I don't think this is a subregional shopping center. But one to draw the same customers as Turnstyle and Korvettes," he said later.

A subregional shopping center at the site is recommended in the village's Rand Road Area Study which has been adopted as part of Arlington Heights master plan.

2 boys charged in 3 burglaries

Buffalo Grove police yesterday charged two youths with three burglaries committed Friday night in the village.

The two boys, Jeffery L. Bradlow, 17, of 335 Wheeling Ave., Wheeling, and an Arlington Heights juvenile, also were arrested last Friday by Arlington Heights police and charged with two burglaries in that community. The pair had been allegedly surprised in the act of burglarizing one of the Arlington Heights residences.

The Buffalo Grove burglaries occurred at the Wendall Camp residence, 265 Anthony Rd.; the Richard Aranowski residence, 1032 Harvard Ln., and the Rober Koscielniak residence, 255 Palmgren Ct., police said. Savings bonds and out-of-circulation U.S. paper currency were taken during the burglaries.

Bradlow appeared in Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court yesterday on the two Arlington Heights police charges.

25 disadvantaged to get jobs here

The Village of Arlington Heights and Cook County have entered into an agreement which will bring 25 disadvantaged persons into the village work force.

The unskilled workers will be part of a work-study plan called the Suburban Work Experience Program.

Their salaries, $2.10 per hour, and fringe benefits will be paid by the county during the 32 weeks of the program. Participants will work at maintenance and semiskilled clerical jobs two days a week, and attend classes at Harper College two days each week.

The classes are intended to teach the basic skills needed to prepare the individuals for employment.

It is expected that most of the workers chosen for the program will be Spanish-speaking Americans selected from the area population.

Flood polling places studied

The village board has agreed to establish 25 to 35 polling places for the May 18th referendum on a proposed $16.5 million flood control program.

The exact number and location of the precinct polls still has to be worked out by attorneys for the proposed bond issue. There are a total of 73 regular election precincts in Arlington Heights.

Bicentennial Commission OKd

Arlington Heights has established a Bicentennial Commission to plan the local observance of the nation's 200th birthday in 1976.

The seven-member commission is directed "to help the people of Arlington Heights plan and implement a rewarding and worthwhile Bicentennial celebration with events scheduled throughout 1976 and with results that will last beyond 1976."

The commission is authorized to acquire sites for bicentennial activities, engage in fund-raising and plan activities, all subject to review and approval by the village board.

The commission is also charged with filing an annual report on its activities. Commissioners' terms will expire on April 30, 1977.

Sale of medals proposed

A proposed resolution supporting the sale of bicentennial medals designed by the Arlington Heights Historical Society and the Hamilton Mint in Arlington Heights has been referred to the commission as one of its first jobs.

$4,700 engineer fees OKd

Engineering fees of $4,700 on an estimated $127,500 worth of sidewalks has been approved by the village board. The sidewalks, being planned by the Board of Local Improvements for next year, will be installed at various locations in the eastern end of the village.

No sidewalks are planned in the interior of the Stonegate, Scarsdale or Scarsdale Estates subdivisions, BOLI Pres. Russell Colvin said.

Most of the work will be filling in gaps in the existing sidewalk system, he said.

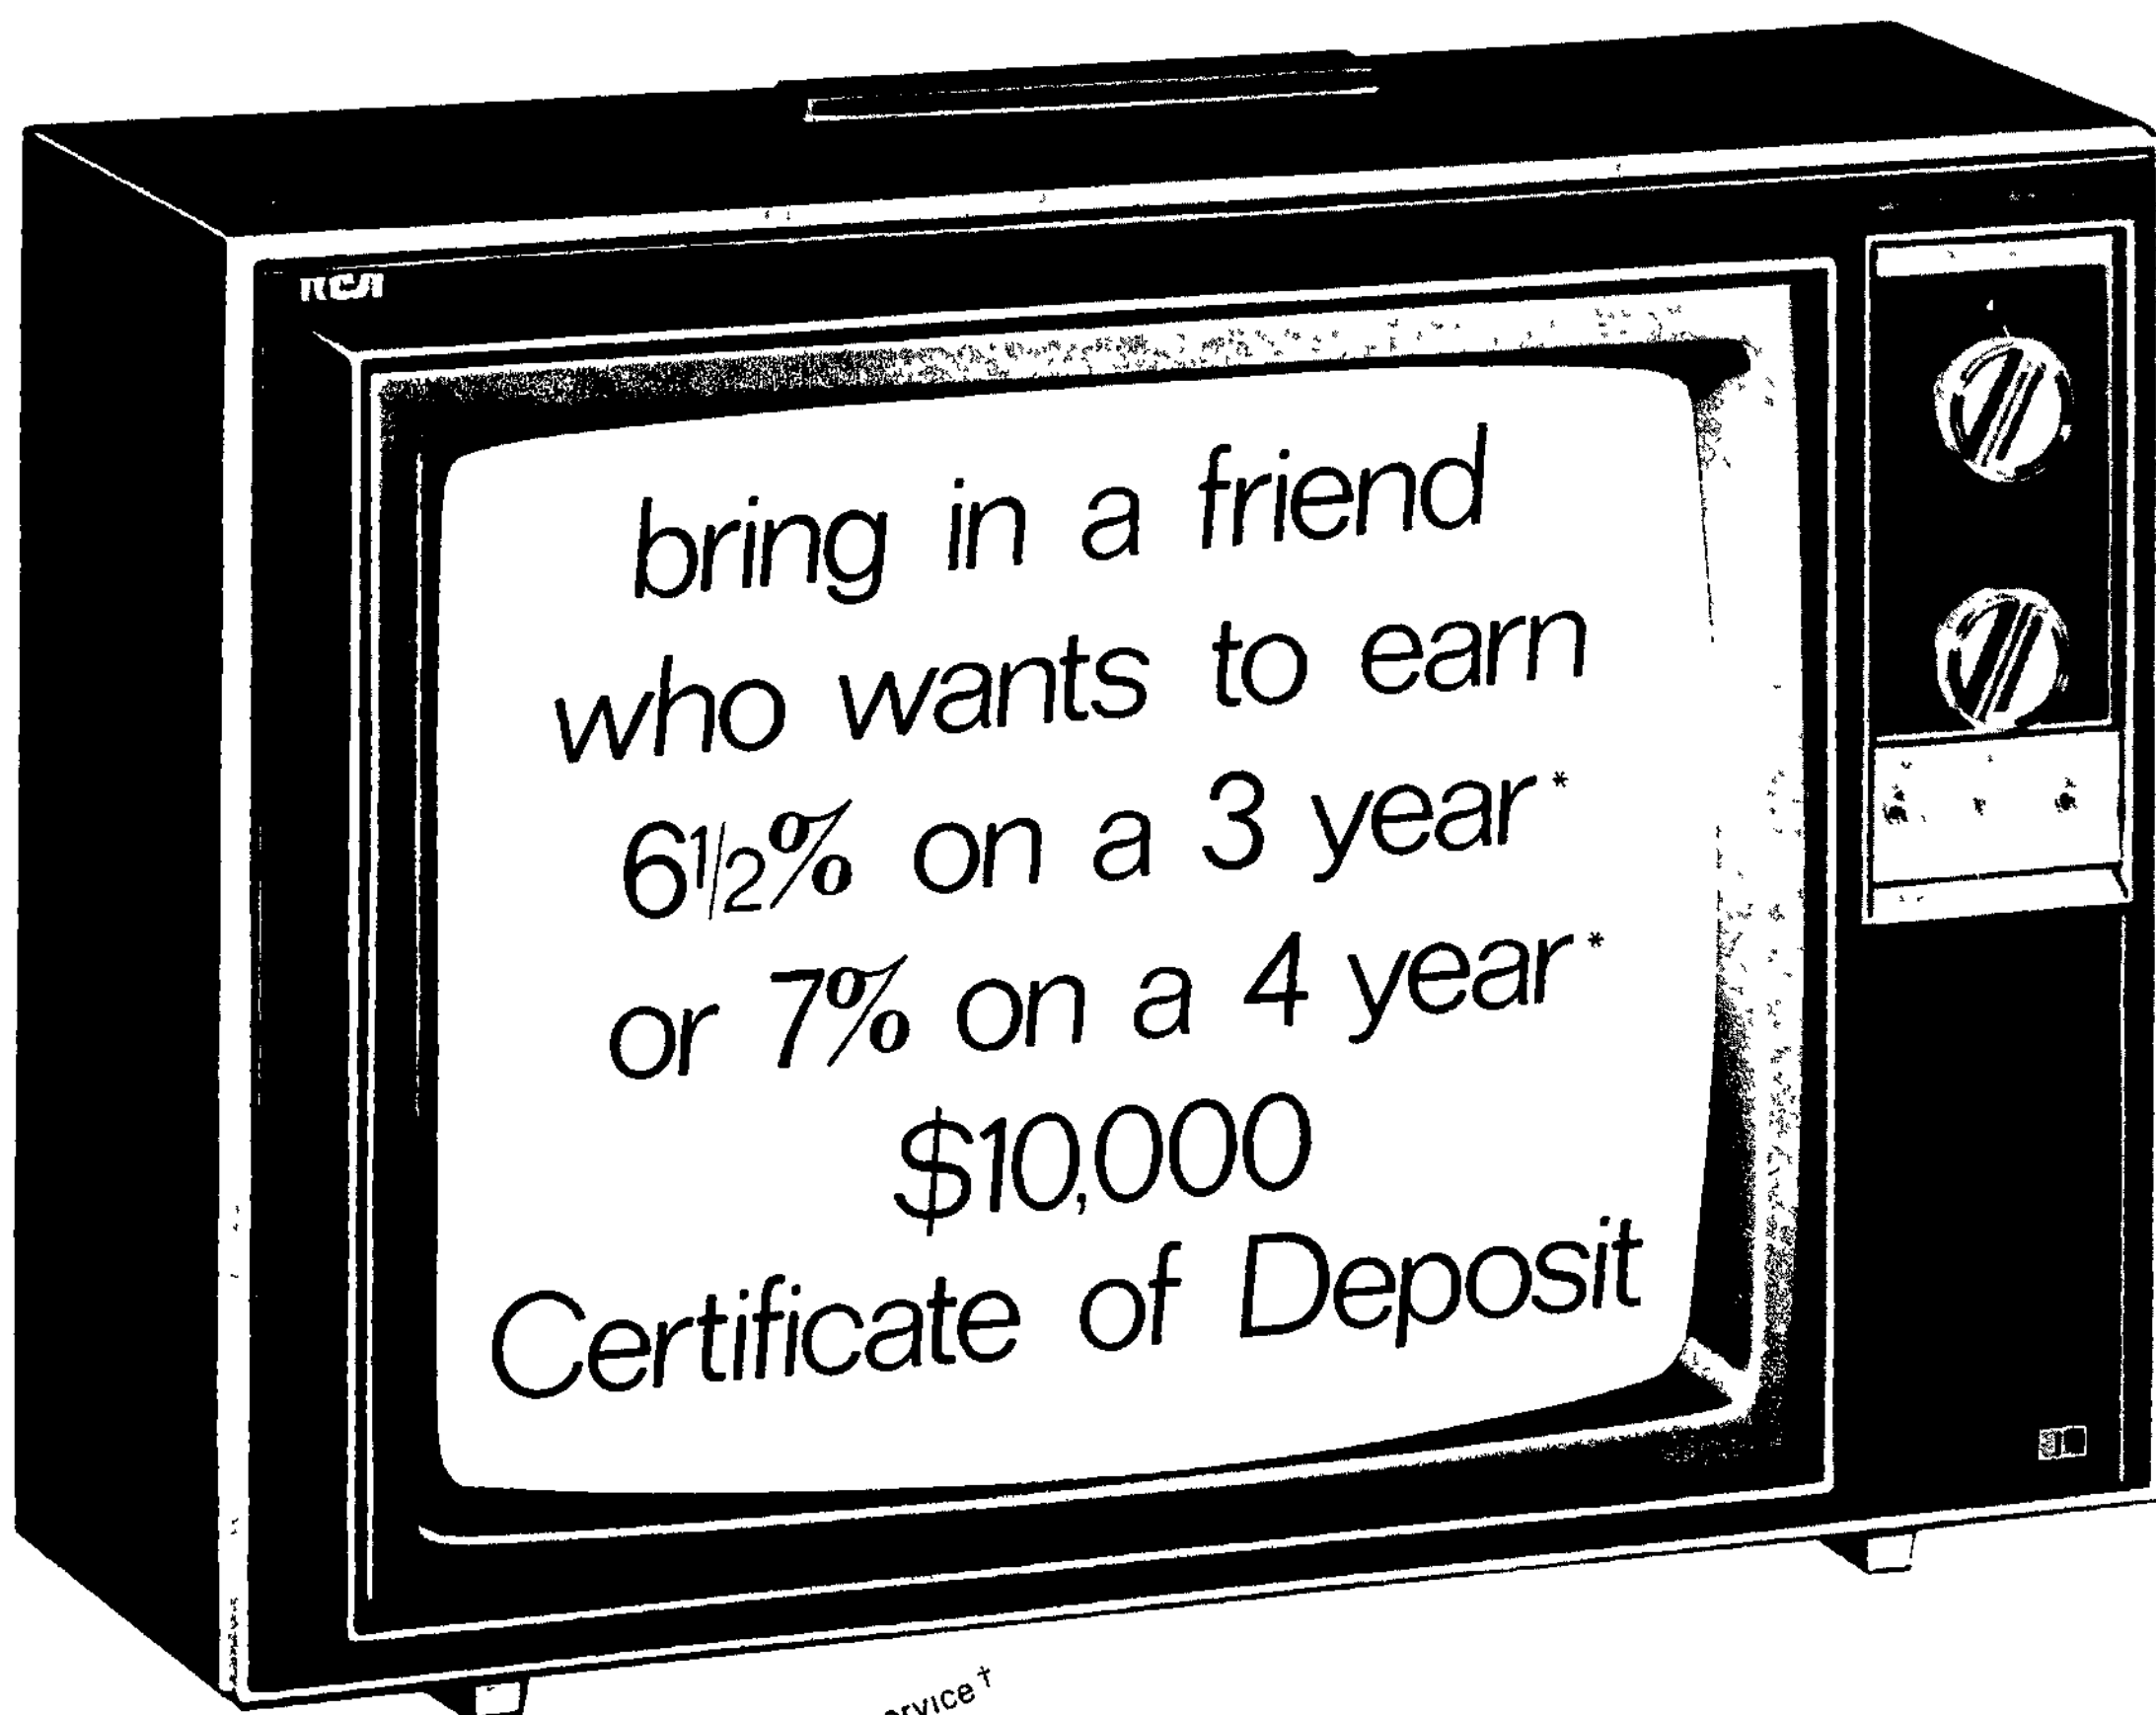

The engineering will be done by Consoer, Townsend & Associates, which regularly does BOLI's engineering work.

Water main fees approved

Engineering fees estimated at $8,500 to $9,000 have been approved for a new water main along Rand Road from Hintz Road to Chestnut. The firm of Haeger-Kraemer & Associates has been chosen to do the work.
